In this volume, which covers the caliphates of Sulayman, ‘Umar II, and Yazid II, al-Ṭabarî provides vivid and detailed accounts of the events spanning the period from 96-105/715-724. We listen to the stirring speeches of Qutaybah b. Muslim, in which he urges his followers to renounce their allegiance to Sulayman; are present at the disastrous third and final attempt to take Constantinople; watch from behind the scenes as Rajā’b Haywah skillfully engineers the accession of ‘Umar II; and follow the remarkable career of Yazid b. al-Muhallab, first as governor and conqueror, then as prisoner, and finally as rebel.

Throughout this volume we observe the struggle of the Umayyad regime to maintain control over a rapidly expanding but increasingly dissatisfied subject population. Governors are appointed and dismissed with dizzying rapidity, administrative boundaries are drawn and redrawn, Arab tribesmen express dissatisfaction with the diminishing rewards of military conquest, non-Arab converts chafe at the differential treatment they receive, and religious opponents revolt in the name of “the Book and the Sunnah.” Important in their own right, the events of this period provide an essential key to a proper understanding of the ‘Abbâsid revolution that lay just over the horizon.
The History of al-Tabari

Editorial Board
Ihsan Abbas, University of Jordan, Amman
C. E. Bosworth, The University of Manchester
Jacob Lassner, Wayne State University, Detroit
Franz Rosenthal, Yale University
Ehsan Yar-Shater, Columbia University (General Editor)

SUNY
SERIES IN NEAR EASTERN STUDIES
Said Amir Arjomand, Editor

The preparation of this volume was made possible in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, an independent federal agency.
Preface

THE HISTORY OF PROPHETS AND KINGS (Ta’rikh al-rusul wa’l-mulûk) by Abû Ja’far Muḥammad b. Jarir al-Ṭabari (839–923), here rendered as the History of al-Ṭabari, is by common consent the most important universal history produced in the world of Islam. It has been translated here in its entirety for the first time for the benefit of non-Arabists, with historical and philological notes for those interested in the particulars of the text.

Ṭabari’s monumental work explores the history of the ancient nations, with special emphasis on biblical peoples and prophets, the legendary and factual history of ancient Iran, and, in great detail, the rise of Islam, the life of the Prophet Muḥammad, and the history of the Islamic world down to the year 915. The first volume of this translation will contain a biography of al-Ṭabari and a discussion of the method, scope, and value of his work. It will also provide information on some of the technical considerations that have guided the work of the translators.

The History has been divided here into 38 volumes, each of which covers about two hundred pages of the original Arabic text in the Leiden edition. An attempt has been made to draw the dividing lines between the individual volumes in such a way that each is to some degree independent and can be read as such. The page numbers of the original in the Leiden edition appear on the margins of the translated volumes.

Al-Ṭabari very often quotes his sources verbatim and traces the chain of transmission (isnād) to an original source. The chains of transmitters are, for the sake of brevity, rendered by only a dash between the individual links in the chain. Thus, "According to Ibn Ḥumayd—Salamah—Ibn Ishāq" means that al-Ṭabarī received the report from Ibn Ḥumayd, who said that he was told by Salamah, who said that he was told by Ibn Ishāq, and so on. The numerous subtle and important differences in the original Arabic wording have been disregarded.

The table of contents at the beginning of each volume gives a brief survey of the topics dealt with in that particular volume. It also includes the headings and subheadings as they appear in al-Ṭabarī's text, as well as those occasionally introduced by the translator.

Well-known place names, such as, for instance, Mecca, Baghdad, Jerusalem, Damascus, and the Yemen, are given in their English spellings. Less common place names, which are the vast majority, are transliterated. Biblical figures appear in the accepted English spelling. Iranian names are usually transcribed according to their Arabic forms, and the presumed Iranian forms are often discussed in the footnotes.

Technical terms have been translated wherever possible, but some, such as dirham and imām, have been retained in Arabic forms. Others that cannot be translated with sufficient precision have been retained and italicized as well as footnoted.

The annotation aims chiefly at clarifying difficult passages, identifying individuals and place names, and discussing textual difficulties. Much leeway has been left to the translators to include in the footnotes whatever they consider necessary and helpful.

The bibliographies list all the sources mentioned in the annotation.

The index in each volume contains all the names of persons and places referred to in the text, as well as those mentioned in the notes as far as they refer to the medieval period. It does not include the names of modern scholars. A general index, it is hoped, will appear after all the volumes have been published.

For further details concerning the series and acknowledgments, see Preface to Volume 1.

Ehsan Yar-Shater
Contents

Preface / v
Abbreviations / xi
Translator’s Foreword / xiii

The Caliphate of Sulaymān b. ‘Abd al-Malik

The Events of the Year 96 (cont’d) (714/715) / 3
The Slaying of Qutaybah b. Muslim / 5

The Events of the Year 97 (715/716) / 30
The Appointment of Yazid b. al-Muhallab as Governor of Khurāsān / 31

The Events of the Year 98 (716/717) / 39
Maslamah b. ‘Abb al-Malik Besieges Constantinople / 39
[The Conquest of Jurjān and Ṭabaristān] / 42

The Events of the Year 99 (717/718) / 61
[The Death of Sulaymān b. ‘Abb al-Malik] / 61
Aspects of His Character / 62
Contents

The Caliphate of 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz

The Events of the Year 99 (cont’d) (717/718) / 69
The Reason Why Sulaymān Appointed 'Umar as Caliph / 69

The Events of the Year 100 (718/719) / 76
The Revolt of the Khārijites / 76
The Capture of Yazid b. al-Muhallab / 79
The Dismissal of al-Jarrāh b. 'Abdallāh / 82
'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz Appoints 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Nu‘aym and
'Abd al-Rahmān b. 'Abdallāh al-Qushayrī over Khurāsān / 85
The Beginning of the Da‘wah / 87

The Events of the Year 101 (719/720) / 89
The Escape of Yazid b. al-Muhallab / 89
The Death of 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz / 91
Aspects of His Character / 93
A Supplement to the Biography of 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz That Is Not Part of Abu Ja‘far’s [al-Tabari’s] Book, to the Beginning of the Caliphate of Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik b. Marwān / 98

The Caliphate of Yazīd b.
'Abd al-Malik b. Marwān

The Events of the Year 101 (cont’d) (719/720) / 105
The Slaying of Shawdhab the Khārijite / 108
Yazīd b. al-Muhallab Renounces His Allegiance to Yazīd b. 'Abd al-Malik / 111

The Events of the Year 102 (720/721) / 127
The Slaying of Yazīd b. al-Muhallab / 127
Maslamah Appoints Sa‘id Khudhaynah as Governor of Khurāsān / 150
Contents

Sa‘id’s Dismissal of Shu‘bah and the Battle at the Fortress of al-Bāhili / 152
Sa‘id Khudhaynah’s Military Expedition against the Soghdians / 158
The Dismissal of Maslamah from Iraq and Khurāsān / 162
The Slaying of Yazid b. Abi Muslim / 165

The Events of the Year 103 (721/722) / 166
The Dismissal of Sa‘id Khudhaynah as Governor of Khurāsān / 166
‘Umar b. Hubayrah’s Appointment of Sa‘id al-Ḥarashi as Governor of Khurāsān / 168
The Soghdians Leave Their Country for Farghānah / 169

The Events of the Year 104 (722/723) / 172
The Battle between al-Ḥarashi and the Soghdian Army / 172
Yazid b. ‘Abd al-Malik’s Dismissal of ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Ḍahḥāk from Medina / 180
‘Umar b. Hubayrah’s Dismissal of Sa‘id b. ‘Amr al-Ḥarashi as Governor of Khurāsān / 183
The Appointment of Muslim b. Sa‘id as Governor of Khurāsān / 187

The Events of the Year 105 (723/724) / 192
Muslim b. Sa‘id’s Expedition against the Turks / 193
The Death of Yazid b. ‘Abd al-Malik / 193
Aspects of His Character / 194

Bibliography of Cited Works / 197
Index / 201
Abbreviations

EI: The Encyclopaedia of Islam, first edition
EP: The Encyclopaedia of Islam, second edition
During the ten-year period covered in this volume, the reins of Umayyad power were held by three caliphs bearing distinctive personalities: Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik (r. 96–99/715–717), a man with a reputation for luxurious living who is nevertheless favorably remembered for reversing the policies of al-Hajjāj and appointing 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz as his successor; the pious 'Umar (r. 99–101/717–720), a quasi-messianic figure whose accession to the caliphate, engineered by Raja' b. Haywah, constituted a virtual coup d'état; and Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik (r. 101–105/720–724), a profligate whose own demise was caused by his inconsolable grief for his singing slave girl, Habābah.

By the year 96/714–715, the Arab conquests had reached what ultimately would become their farthest limits in both the East and the West. With the exception of the disastrous third and final campaign against Constantinople, Sulaymān adopted a cautious policy that favored the consolidation of previous conquests over further expansion. This policy was taken to its logical extension by 'Umar II, who recalled Maslamah from the campaign against Constantinople, ordered a complete stop to every expedition on the eastern front, and called for a general withdrawal of the Arab soldiers from Transoxiana. Initially, this same cautious policy was continued by Yazīd II, whose governor over Khurāsān, Sa'id b. 'Abd al-'Azīz, did not pass beyond Samarqand. On the two occasions on which he crossed over the Oxus River, he punished his own raiding parties, and was dubbed "Khudhaynah," "the little princess," by his own soldiers because of his perceived weakness. But the governorship of Khudhaynah's successor, Sa'id al-Harashi, marked a return to a more aggressive policy that resulted in the brutal pacification of Soghdia and the subjugation of Kiss and Rabinjan.

Internally, the unity of the Umayyad Empire was threatened by several phenomena, the most important being the rise of tribal factionalism. Although scholars disagree over whether the terms "Qays" and "Yaman" refer to tribal confederations, political parties, or interest groups, it is generally accepted that the Qays stood for the expansion of the empire and the exclusion of non-Arab clients, while the Yaman criticized the policy of expansion and advocated equal status for Arab Muslims and non-Arab converts to Islam. The accession of Sulayman, who had allied himself with the Yamanis while serving as governor of Palestine, signaled a shift in the balance of power away from the Qaysis, as the new Caliph proceeded to dismiss the Qaysi governors appointed by his predecessors, replacing them with men from the Yaman. In distant Farghanah, the Qaysi commander, Qutaybah b. Muslim al-Bähili, realizing that his political usefulness had come to an end, tried to raise a revolt against the new Caliph, but his supporters, both Arab and non-Arab, turned against him, slew him, and returned to their homes. An effort to mollify tribal factionalism was made by 'Umar II, who chose governors over whom he had control and whom he believed to be competent, irrespective of their tribal affiliations. This policy was short-lived, however, as 'Umar reigned for only two years. Under his successor, Yazid II, who sought to reestablish the old order, the Qaysis returned to power, embittered by the humiliations they had suffered since the accession of Sulayman; they were determined to take revenge. It was during the caliphate of Yazid II, in the year 101/719–720, that Yazid b. al-Muhallab al-Azdi staged his revolt, an episode to which Tabari devotes considerable attention. Although this was not, strictly speaking, a tribal conflict—ibn al-Muhallab's own tribe of the Azd sided against him—it nevertheless contributed to the intensification of the factional schism as Qaysis were installed in Iraq and the East in its aftermath. More than any other factor, these tribal rivalries, which spanned the entire empire, contributed to the downfall of the Umayyads.

The administrative boundaries of Iraq and the eastern provinces shifted several times during the short span of ten years.
covered in this volume. Previously, Khurāsān had been governed from the usual seat of the governor in Iraq, but Yazīd b. al-Muhallab persuaded Sulaymān to let him govern from Khurāsān itself, which became the base of his campaigns against Jurjān and Ṭabaristān. Under ʿUmar II, who supervised the actions of his governors to an unprecedented degree, the vast eastern governorate was broken up into different units, each responsible to the Caliph. Under Yazīd II, Maslamah was given joint control over al-Kūfah, al-Basrah, and Khurāsān, appointing his own governors over each locality. These shifts in administrative policy point to the fact that by the turn of the century the Umayyad government had effectively lost control of the administration of Khurāsān and the East.

In addition to the conduct of the Holy War, another major concern of the provincial governors was the collection and distribution of tribute money. The governors, the Arab tribesmen, and the Caliph were divided over the issue of whether the income from the yearly tribute should be disposed of in its entirety in the provinces or conveyed to the central government. In the year 97/715–716, Sulaymān, sensitive to the complaints of his subjects in Iraq, who had suffered under the fiscal policy of al-Hajjāj, sought to keep the fiscal affairs of that province under his own control by appointing his own personal representative there with special responsibility for taxation. Yazīd b. al-Muhallab was arrested by ʿUmar II in the year 100/718–719 because of his failure to convey to the treasury the fifth of the booty that he had collected during the conquest of Jurjān and Ṭabaristān, a sum of six million dinārs about which he had vainly boasted in a letter to Sulaymān. Similarly, Maslamah was dismissed by his half brother Yazīd in the year 102/720–721 when he failed to send surplus revenue to the Caliph in Damascus. His replacement, ʿUmar b. Hubayrah, introduced a plan according to which the right of the Arab tribesmen to the yearly tribute was limited to the amount of their stipends, while the surplus belonged to the central treasury. These struggles further reflect the breakdown of central control.

Another major source of discontent was the non-Arabs who expected to be relieved of certain taxes upon converting to Islam. This expectation posed a dilemma for the central government which, in an effort to prevent a decline in revenues, either tried to prevent conversion to Islam or took no note of it when collecting taxes. The issue seems to have reached a climax during the caliphate of 'Umar II, who instituted his famous fiscal rescript designed to address the problems related to conversion. According to the rescript, non-Arab clients were to be freed from the kharāj tax and stipends were to be paid to every Muslim who accepted his military obligation, regardless of whether he was an Arab or a convert. These reforms, however, were allowed to lapse upon 'Umar's death.

Religious opposition also posed a threat to the Umayyad regime. A Kharijite revolt in the year 100/718–719, led by Shu'bad, was initially handled in a diplomatic manner by 'Umar II, "the righteous man," who summoned representatives of the rebels to enter into negotiations. After 'Umar's untimely death, the revolt was brutally suppressed by Yazid II. Religious opposition was a factor in the revolt of Yazid b. al-Muhallab, who summoned his followers to "the Book and the Sunnah," and received support from both the Khārijites and the Murjī'ites. But the main source of religious opposition was the clandestine 'Abbāsid movement that would eventually topple the dynasty. Tabari reports that 'Abbāsid propaganda began in earnest in the year 100/718–719, when three emissaries who were sent to Khurasan by Muḥammad b. 'Alī b. 'Abdallāh b. 'Abbas succeeded in enlisting seventy recruits for the movement. Even if the suspicions of Western scholars regarding the chronological accuracy of this report are justified, it is nevertheless the case that the 'Abbāsid propaganda was in place by the year 104/722–23.

Tabari presents the events of the years 96–105/715–724 in considerable detail and with great vividness. We listen to the stirring speeches of Qutaybah b. Muslim in which he urges his followers to renounce their allegiance to Sulaymān; are present at the disastrous third and final attempt to take Constantinople; watch from behind the scenes as Rajā' b. Ḥaywāḥ skillfully engineers the accession of 'Umar II; and follow the remarkable career of Yazid b. al-Muhallab, first as a governor and conqueror, then as a prisoner, and finally as a rebel. Throughout this volume we observe the struggle of the Umayyad regime to maintain control over a rapidly expanding but increasingly dissatisfied subject population. Governors are appointed and dismissed with dizzying rapidity, administrative boundaries are drawn and redrawn, Arab tribesmen express dissatisfaction with the diminishing rewards of military conquest, non-Arab converts chafe at the differential treatment they receive, and religious opponents revolt in the name of “the Book and the Sunnah.” Important in their own respect, the events of this period also constitute an essential key to understanding the ‘Abbāsid revolution that was about to unfold.

There remains the pleasant duty of acknowledging the indispensable assistance of friends and colleagues who contributed to the making of this translation. My colleague, Samia Mehrez, read through much of the Arabic text with me and helped to clarify the meaning of many difficult expressions. Richard Jacquemond offered valuable comments on an early draft of the manuscript. Three members of the Ţabari editorial board who read parts or all of the manuscript with great care, Franz Rosenthal, Jacob Lassner, and Ihsan Abbas, were especially helpful with difficult sections of the Arabic text and poetry. Finally, I am grateful to Judith Ginsburg for assistance with the Latin glosses of the Leiden text, to Penny Beebe for help with matters of style, and to Raihana Zaman for her patience and fortitude when called upon to type seemingly endless drafts of the translation. Needless to say, the responsibility for any mistakes that remain are mine and mine alone.

David Stephan Powers
The Caliphate of Sulaymān
b. ‘Abd al-Malik
Abū Ja'far (al-Ṭabari) said: In this year, the oath of allegiance was rendered to Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik as Caliph. This took place in al-Ramlah on the day on which al-Walid b. 'Abd al-Malik died.

In this year, Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik dismissed the governor of Medina, 'Uthmān b. Ḥayyān. Muhammad b. 'Umar mentioned that Sulaymān removed 'Uthmān from Medina on the twenty-fourth of Ramadān in the year 96 (June 3, 715). Abū Ja'far continued: He served as governor of Medina for three years. It is also said: His term of office was two years, less seven nights.

According to al-Waqiti: 'Uthmān b. Ḥayyān consented to a request from Abū Bakr b. Muhammad b. 'Amr b. Ḥazm⁵ for permission to sleep (late) the following morning and not to grant an audience to the people, so that he might observe the twenty-first night of Ramaḍān.⁶ Ayyūb b. Salamah al-Makhzūmī, who was on bad terms with Abū Bakr b. 'Amr b. Ḥazm, was with 'Uthmān at that time, and he said to him, "Have you not considered what that one is saying? He is merely making a show of piety."

'Uthmān answered, "I thought of that, but, if I do not find him holding court tomorrow morning when I send for him, then as surely as I am my father's son, I shall flog him one hundred lashes and shave his head and his beard." Ayyūb said, "Pleasantly surprised by his statement, I hastened at dawn to his house, through which I found my way by candlelight. I said (to myself), 'al-Murri (that is, 'Uthman) has also come in haste (to fulfill his oath).'

But lo and behold, Sulaymān's messenger had already arrived, carrying orders to appoint Abū Bakr as governor and to have 'Uthmān dismissed and flogged.⁷ Ayyūb continued, 'I entered the governor's residence, and there was Ibn Ḥayyān sitting on the floor, while Abū Bakr was sitting on a chair saying to the blacksmith, 'Put the chains on this man's feet.' 'Uthmān looked at me and recited:

They turned their backs and fled

But things are not forever the same.'"

In this year, Sulaymān removed Yazīd b. Abī Muslim from Iraq, replacing him with Yazīd b. al-Muhallab.⁸ He put Ṣāliḥ b. 'Abd al-Rahmān in charge of the fiscal administration and ordered him to torture and kill the family of Abū 'Aqīl.⁹

⁵. Abū Bakr b. Muhammad b. 'Amr b. Ḥazm was chief qādī of Medina, apparently from the year 88 (706–07). See text above, II/1191, 1255.
⁶. It is particularly meritorious to undertake the i'tikāf—a period of retreat in a mosque during which the believer fasts, prays, and recites the Qur'ān. It occurs during the last ten days of the month of Ramaḍān, when the laylat al-qadr [night on which the Qur'ān was first revealed] is presumed to have taken place. See EI, s.v. Ramaḍān; El², s.v. i'tikāf.
⁷. 'Uthmān was reportedly flogged twice, once for drinking wine, and a second time in retaliation for an accusation he had leveled against 'Abdallāh b. 'Amr b. 'Uthmān b. 'Affān. See Ya'qūbī, Taʾrīkh, III, 39.
⁸. See Ya'qūbī, Taʾrīkh, III, 40.
⁹. That is, the family of al-Ḥajjāj b. Yūsuf, who had slain Ṣāliḥ's brother, Ādam. See Crone, Slaves, 43; El², s.v. al-Ḥadjijādī b. Yūsuf; Balādhuri, Futūḥ (Cairo), III, 540.
According to 'Umar b. Shabbah—'Ali b. Muḥammad: Ṣāliḥ reached Iraq, where he took charge of the fiscal administration, while Yazid was in charge of military affairs. Yazid then sent Ziyād b. al-Muhallab to serve as governor of 'Umān, saying to him, "Correspond with Ṣāliḥ, and, when you write to him, mention his name first." [Upon reaching Iraq] Ṣāliḥ seized the family of Abū 'Aqil and tortured them; 'Abd al-Malik b. al-Muhallab administered the torture.

In this year, Qutaybah b. Muslim was slain in Khurāsān. The Slaying of Qutaybah b. Muslim

The circumstances surrounding this: Al-Walid b. 'Abd al-Malik wanted to designate his son, 'Abd al-'Azīz b. al-Walid, as the heir apparent, and he secretly conveyed his intent to the generals and the poets. Jarir said with regard to this:

When they ask, "Which man would be the best Caliph?"
the fingers point to 'Abd al-'Azīz.
They consider him the most deserving of all the people, and they were not mistaken when they hurried and swore the oath of allegiance to him.

Jarir also recited, urging al-Walid to nominate 'Abd al-'Azīz:
Toward 'Abd al-'Azīz the eyes of the people turned,
when the rulers were at a loss about whom to choose.
To him his merits call attention, when the pillars of state and the heavens fall down.
And the leaders of Quraysh say,

10. See EI, s.v. 'Oman.
11. Qutaybah is Abū Ḥafṣ Qutaybah b. Abī Ṣāliḥ Muslim b. 'Amr al-Bāhilī. He was an Arab commander who extended Arab power over the boundaries of Khurāsān. See EI, s.v. Kutayba b. Muslim; Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 434–35; Ibn Khallikān, Wafayāt, IV, 86–91.
13. 'Abd al-Malik had stipulated in his succession covenant that Sulaymān was to succeed al-Walid as Caliph. See text above, II/1170.
14. Jarir b. 'Atiyah b. al-Khaṭṭālah [Hudhayfah] b. Badr [d. 110/728–29] was one of the most famous poets of the Umayyad period. See EI, s.v. Djārīr.
15. Fa-bāyāʾīḫu wa-sārīʿū; read fa-bāyāʾīḫu wa-sātāʿū, following Band P. See Nakāʿid Jarīr wa-l-Farazdaq, I, 351.
“We must swear the oath of allegiance now that the race has reached its end.”

They consider ‘Abd al-‘Azîz to be the heir apparent, and they have not made a mistake or done wrong. What do you wait for, when you are the ones that bear onerous deeds and rise to glory?

So pass it [that is, the caliphate] on to him wholly, O Commander of the Faithful, if you so desire.

For the people have already extended their hands to him, and the matter has become generally known.

And had they given the oath of allegiance to you as heir apparent, the balance would have been even and the building would have been straight.16

Al-ハウスîj b. يûsûf and Qutaybah concurred in the renunciation of Sulaymân. Then al-Walîd died, and Sulaymân b. ‘Abd al-Malik assumed power. This was why Qutaybah feared him.

Qutaybah wrote a letter to Sulaymân in which he congratulated him on becoming Caliph, consoled him about al-Walîd, and informed him of his achievements and of his obedience to ‘Abd al-Malik and al-Walîd. He also indicated that Sulaymân could count on the same measure of obedience and sincere advice as had the former two, provided he did not remove him from Khurâsân. He (also) wrote him another letter in which he informed him of his conquests and his ferocity against the enemy, of his exalted 16. Ibid., I, 350–51.

17. Text: Dawûd, read Rawwâd, following the Cairo ed.
18. Ten years earlier, in 86/705, al-ハウスîj had dismissed Yazîd b. al-Muhallab as governor of Khurâsân and appointed Qutaybah in his place. See text above, II/1178ff., sub anno 86.
standing among the non-Arab rulers, of the awe he inspired in their hearts, and of his great renown among them. He also disparaged al-Muhallab and his family and swore by God that if Yazid b. al-Muhallab were appointed governor of Khurāsān, he (that is, Qutaybah) would throw off his allegiance to Sulaymān. And (finally) he wrote a third letter in which he renounced his allegiance to him.

Qutaybah sent the three letters with a man from the tribe of Bāhīlah, saying: "Give the first letter to the Caliph. If Yazid b. al-Muhallab is present and the Caliph reads it and then hands it to him, give him the second letter. If the Caliph reads it and gives it to Yazid, give him the third letter. But if he reads the first letter and does not give it to Yazid, hold on to the other two."

Qutaybah's messenger arrived and presented himself to Sulaymān, who was with Yazid b. al-Muhallab. The messenger gave the letter to the Caliph, who read it and then showed it to Yazid. The messenger gave the Caliph another letter, which he read and threw at Yazid. Then he gave him the third letter. The Caliph read it, and the color of his face changed. He called for some clay, sealed the letter, and kept it in his possession.

According to Abū 'Ubaydah Ma'mar b. al-Muthanna: The first letter contained slanderous remarks about Yazid b. al-Muhallab, noting his perfidy, infidelity, and ingratitude. The second letter contained praise of Yazid. The third letter contained the following statement: "If you do not confirm me in my present position and if you do not grant me a writ of safe conduct, I will renounce my allegiance to you as quickly as one removes a shoe, and I will fill the earth around you with horsemen and foot soldiers."

He also said: When Sulaymān read the third letter, he put it between two mattresses under him and made no comment.

Returning to the account of 'Ali b. Muḥammad: Then he—that is, Sulaymān—ordered that Qutaybah's messenger be provided with accommodations, whereupon the latter was transferred to the guest house. That evening, Sulaymān called for him. He gave him a purse containing some dinārs and said, "Here is your reward, and here is your master's document of appointment as governor of Khurāsān. Be on your way in the company of my messenger, who is carrying Qutaybah's document of appointment."

The Bāhīli tribesman set out, and Sulaymān sent with him a man from the tribe of 'Abd al-Qays, one of the Banū Layth by the name of Ṣa‘ṣa‘ah or Muṣ‘ab. When they reached Ḥulwān, the people informed them that Qutaybah had renounced the Caliph. The 'Abdi tribesman turned back, having given the document of appointment to Qutaybah’s messenger, although Qutaybah had already renounced the Caliph. There was considerable confusion. The messenger gave the document of appointment to Qutaybah, who then sought the counsel of his brothers. They said, “Sulaymān will not trust you, after this.”

According to ‘Ali—one of the ‘Anbaris—some of their Shaykhs—Tawbah b. Abi Asid al-‘Anbari: Šāliḥ21 arrived in Iraq and sent me to Qutaybah in order to find out about the latter’s situation. I was accompanied by a man from the Banū Asad, who asked me about the nature of my journey, but I concealed it from him. While we were traveling, a bird passed from our left to our right, causing my companion to look at me and say, “I think that you are on an important mission and that you are hiding it from me.” I continued on my way. When I reached Ḥulwān, the people informed me that Qutaybah had been slain.

According to ‘Ali—Abū al-Dhayyāl, Kulaib b. Khalaf and Abū ‘Ali al-Jūżjānī—Ṭufayl b. Mirdās, Abū al-Ḥasan al-Jashamī, and Muṣ‘ab b. Ḥayyān22—his brother, Muqāṭil b. Ḥayyān, Abū Mikhnaf, and others: When Qutaybah was contemplating renouncing his allegiance to the Caliph, he sought the counsel of his brothers. ‘Abd al-Rahmān said to him, “Dispatch an army and include in it all those whom you fear: Send one contingent to Marw;23 then you set out, until you reach Samarqand.24 Then say to those who are with you, ‘Whoever wants to stay will receive his share of the booty; whoever wants to leave will not be compelled to stay, and no evil will befall him.’ In this way, only those

---

19. An ancient town situated near the entrance to the Paytak Pass through the Zagros range, on the Khurasān highway. See EI, s.v. Ḥulwān.
20. According to Kūfī, Futūḥ, VII, 258–59, the Caliph’s messenger returned to Syria, taking the document of appointment with him, thereby causing Qutaybah to regret his actions.
21. That is, Šāliḥ b. ‘Abd al-Rahmān.
22. Text: Ḥabban, read Ḥayyān, following the Cairo ed.
23. Marw was the capital and most famous city in Khurasān. See EI, Supplement, s.v. Merw al-Shahidjān; Le Strange, Lands, 397ff.
24. Samarqand and Bukhārā were the principle towns of Transoxiana. See EI, s.v. Samarkand; Le Strange, Lands, 463ff.
who are loyal will remain with you.”25 ‘Abdallah said to him, “Repudiate the Caliph right here, and call on the soldiers to repudiate him, for no one will oppose you.”

Qutaybah accepted ‘Abdallah’s advice: He renounced his allegiance to Sulaymān and called on the troops to repudiate him, saying:

I have brought you together from ‘Ayn al-Tamr26 and Fayḍ al-Bahr.27 I have united brother with brother and son with father. I have distributed your booty among you, and I have paid you your stipends in full and without delay. You have had experience with the governors who preceded me: Umayyah28 came to you and wrote to the Commander of the Faithful, saying, ‘The tribute of Khurāsān does not support29 the expenses of my kitchen.’ Then Abū Sa‘īd30 came to you and he spun you around for three years, during which time you did not know whether you were in obedience or in disobedience. He did not collect any levies or hurt an enemy. Then his son, Yazid,31 came to you, after him, a stallion for whom women compete.32 Your Caliph is (as foolish as) Yazid b. Tharwān Habbanāquat al-Qayṣi.33

26. ‘Ayn al-Tamr was a small town in Iraq on the borders of the desert, between Anbār and al-Kūfah, that commanded the military approaches to Iraq. See EP, s.v. ‘Ayn al-Tamr.
27. Fayḍ al-Bahr was a well-known canal in al-Baṣrah. See Yaqūt, Mu‘jam, IV, 285.
29. Text: la yuṣīmu. The Cairo ed. has la yaqūmu.
30. Abū Sa‘īd al-Muhallab b. Abī Șufrah, deputy governor of Khurāsān under al-Hajjāj, reopened the campaigns towards Central Asia. He died in 82/701-02 and was succeeded by his son, Yazid. See text above, II/1033ff., sub anno 78; EP, s.v. ‘Abd al-Malik b. Marwān.
31. Yazid b. al-Muhallab was appointed governor of Khurāsān by al-Hajjāj in the year 82/701-02, upon the death of his father, al-Muhallab. See text above, II/1085ff.
32. Text: faḥlun tabārā ilayhi al-nisā‘. If one were to read tabāzā instead of tabārā the sense would be, “a stud to whom women raise their hips.” Jāḥiz, Bayān, II, 134, has thumma atākum ba‘dahu ba‘daḥu mithla atbā‘ī-l-kalbah minhum Ibn al-Dahmah, “Then their sons came to you, after him, like bitch’s teats, among them Ibn al-Dahmah (that is, Yazid b. al-Muhallab).”
33. Yazid b. Tharwān (his nickname was Dhu al-Wadā‘at) would give his fat camels much fodder and pasture, to the neglect of his thin ones. Likewise, Sulaymān would confer favors on the wealthy and prosperous and neglect others. See Baladhuri, Futūh (Cairo), III, 519-20.
Our source continued: But no one responded, so Qutaybah became angry and said:

May God never give strength to whomever you support. By God, were you to unite in order to attack a goat, you would not break its horn. O people of lowly places—I do not say people of elevated places—O rabble of the alms tax, I have gathered you, just as the camels of the alms tax are brought together from all directions. O tribe of Bakr b. Wā'il, O people of pretense, lying, and stinginess, during which of your two days do you boast? The day you go out to war or the day you make peace? By God, I am more powerful than you, O followers of Musaylimah, O blameworthy ones—I do not call you upright ones—O people of weakness and perfidy. You used to call "perfidy," during the pre-Islamic era (jahiliyyah), "Kaysān." O followers of Sajāh, O tribe of 'Abd al-Qays, the fathers, you have taken up the pollination of palm trees in exchange for horses' reins. O tribe of Azd, you have taken ships' cables in exchange for the reins of fleet stallions. This is innovation in Islam! And the Bedouins? What are the Bedouins? May the curse of God be on the Bedouins. O refuse of al-Kūfah and al-Baṣrah, I have brought you together from the places where wormwood, southernwood, and wild senna are grown. You were riding 34. Text: yā ahl al-safi'ah wa-lā aqūlu ahl al-'āliyah. It is a pun.

35. Musaylimah was a prophet of the Banū Ḥanifah in al-Yamāmah; he was contemporary with Muḥammad. See El, s.v. Musailimah.
36. Text: yā bani dhamīm wa-lā aqūlu tamīm. This is a pun on the tribe of Tamīm, who are being addressed here.
37. Kaysān is a name for perfidy. It is not related to Kaysān, the companion of al-Mukhtar. See Lisān, s.v. k-y-s.
38. Sajāh, Umm Śādir bt. Aws b. Hīk b. Usāmah, or Bint al-Ḥārith b. Suwayd b. 'Uqfān, was a prophetess and soothsayer who appeared in Arabia during the riddah wars. See El, s.v. Sajāh.
39. Text: qusāt, "the cruel ones"; read fusāt. I owe this point to Professor Iḥsan Abbas.
40. Text: al-husūn, "horses." This should be amended to read al-hudūr. I owe this point to Professor Abbas.
41. Text: al-fīlīfīl, "pepper." Read: al-qīlīlīl, as in Jābīz, Bayān, II, 133. There are no pepper trees in Arabia.
42. These three plants grow in the desert.
cows and donkeys on the island of Ibn Kāwān,43 and, when I gathered you, just as the scattered portions of clouds44 are brought together at the beginning of winter, you started saying such and such! By God, I am the son of his father and the brother of his brother. By God, I will draw you together and beat you as one does the salamah tree.45 Verily, around the silliyan plant is neighing a6 0 army of Khurasān, do you know who your leader is? Your leader is Yazid b. Tharwān. It is as if I am confronted by a commander from the Hā‘ and the Ḥakam47 who came to you and displaced you from your homes and your abodes.48 There is a fire over there. Shoot at it, and I will shoot with you. Aim for your farthest mark! Abū Nāfi‘, Dhū al-Wada‘āt, has been put in charge of you.49 Syria is a father who is treated with filial respect, while Iraq is a father who is treated with ingratitude. How long will the Syrian army50 continue to lie in your courtyards and under the roofs of your homes? O army of Khurasān, if you investigate my ancestry, you will find that I have an Iraqi mother, an Iraqi father, an Iraqi birthplace, and Iraqi inclinations, opinions, and religion. Today, as you know,

43. The largest island in the Persian Gulf, situated off the southern coast of Persia between ‘Uman and al-Bahrayn; it takes its name from a certain al-Ḥārith b. Imru ‘l-Qays. See EI, s.v. Kishm; Yāqūt, Mu’jam, II, 139, s.v. Jazīrat Kāwān.
44. Text: qara‘; read qaza‘, following the Cairo ed.
45. A salamah tree has thorns and leaves; the latter are used to tan hides. The leaves are removed by drawing the branches of the tree together, binding them tightly with a rope, and beating them with a staff. See Lane, Lexicon, pt. 4, p. 1414.
46. The silliyan is a plant known as “the bread of the camels.” The phrase hawl al-silliyan al-zamzamah is a proverbial expression applied to a man who hovers round a thing without making apparent his desire. See Lane, Lexicon, pt. 3, p. 1248.
47. The Hā‘ are a tribe from the Madhhiij, and the Ḥakam are a tribe from the Yemen. See Jābiz, Bayān, II, 132, n. 7.
49. That is, Yazid b. Tharwān.
50. Text: ahl al-Shām. The Imperial Army were composed of warriors from Syria unequivocally loyal to the Umayyad rulers; they were stationed in fortified cities and sensitive areas where disturbances were expected to break out. See Sharon, Black Banners, 61–2.
you enjoy a state of safety and well-being. God has laid open countries to you and made your roads secure, so that a woman can travel in a litter from Marw to Balkh\(^5\) without an escort. So praise God for the blessing He has bestowed on you and ask Him for forgiveness and increase.

Then Qutaybah stepped down and entered his house. The members of his household came to him and said: “We have never seen a day like today.\(^5\) By God, you did not limit yourself to the Ahl-‘Āliyah, who are your close friends, but you even included the Bakr, your followers. Not satisfied with that, you included the Tamim, your brothers. Still not satisfied, you included the Azd, your supporters.”

Qutaybah said: “When I spoke, and not a single person responded, I became angry, and I did not know what I was saying. The Ahl al-‘Āliyah are like the camels of the alms tax that have been gathered from every direction;\(^5\) the Bakr are like a slave girl who does not ward off a sexual advance; the Tamim are like mangy camels; the ‘Abd al-Qays are that part of the wild ass that he hits with his tail; and the Azd are wild asses—the worst that God created. Were I their master, I would brand them.”\(^5\)

The troops were angry and unwilling to throw off allegiance to Sulaymān, and the tribes were also angry, because of the abusive terms that Qutaybah had cast at them. They all agreed to oppose and denounce Qutaybah. The first to speak in this matter were the Azd, who approached Ḥudayn b. al-Mundhir\(^5\) and said, “That one has called for what he has called for, namely, throwing off allegiance to the Caliph; however, that way will lead to corruption in matters of both religion and the temporal world. Not

---

51. An important city in Khurāsān situated at the meeting place of the trade routes; the city was subdued by Qutaybah b. Muslim. See EP, s.v. Balkh; Le Strange, Lands, 420ff.

52. Text: mā ṭa‘āyānā kā-l-yawmi qāṭ. Ibn al-Athir, Kāmil, V, 14, has mā ṭa‘āynākā kā-l-yawmi qāṭt: “We have never seen you behave as you did today.”

53. The Ahl al-‘Āliyah were a heterogeneous group made up of sundry tribes.

54. This statement may be an allusion to al-Hajjaj, who branded peoples’ hands. For parallel versions of Qutaybah’s speeches, see al-Jāḥiz, Bayān, II, 132-35; Kūfi, Futūḥ, VII, 261-65.

55. Hudayn b. al-Mundhir was a notable and poet of al-Basrah, who was head of the Bakr b. Wa‘il; he died ca. 100/718-19. See EP, s.v. al-Ḥudayn b. al-Mundhir; Crone, Slaves, 113.
satisfied with this, he has humiliated and reviled us. What do you recommend, O Abū Ḥafṣ?" His nom de guerre was Abū Sāsān; it is also said that his patronymic is Abū Muḥammad. Ḥudayn said to them, "The Mudar in Khurāsān are equal to the other three tribal groups (khums), and within the Mudar the Tamim form the majority. They are the heroes of Khurāsān who will never agree that the ruling power pass from the Muḍar. Thus, if you exclude them from power, they will support Qutaybah."\(^56\) The Azd said,
"Qutaybah wronged the Banū Tamim by the slaying of Ibn al-Ahtām."\(^57\) Ḥudayn said, "Do not pay any attention to that, for the Banū Tamim are partisans of the Muḍar confederation." The Azd left, rejecting Ḥudayn’s advice. They wanted to put Abūdallāh
b. Ḥawdhān al-Jahdāmī\(^58\) in charge, but he refused. After arguing among themselves, with each refusing to be the leader, they went back to Ḥudayn and said, "We have debated the question of leadership and decided to put you in charge of us, for the Rabī’ah will not oppose you." He said, "I will have nothing to do with this matter." They said, "What do you suggest?" He said, "If you give the leadership to the Tamim, you will be powerful." They said, "Whom do you recommend from the Tamim?" He said, "Only Waki’."\(^59\)

Ḥayyān, a client of the Banū Shaybān, said: ‘Only that Bedouin, Waki’, will take charge of this affair, enduring its heat, shedding his blood, and exposing himself to death, and, if a governor comes, he will punish him for what he has done though the credit goes to somebody else, for he is a brave man who neither cares what he mounts nor what the consequences will be. He has many loyal kinsmen and a score to settle; he has a claim against Qutaybah because of the leadership that the latter took from him and gave to Ḍirār b. Ḥusayn b. Zayd al-Fawāris b. Ḥusayn b. Ḍirār

---

\(^{56}\) See Sharon, Black Banners, 60.

\(^{57}\) During the campaign against Bukhārā in the year 91 (709–10), Qutaybah had appointed Abūdallāh b. al-Ahtām as his deputy governor in Marw. ‘Abdallāh had taken the opportunity to intrigue with al-Ḥajjāj against Qutaybah, but fared badly and was forced to flee to Syria. Qutaybah made ‘Abdallāh’s brothers pay the penalty in his stead—he slew some of them and cut off the arms and legs of the others, thereby calling down upon himself the revenge of Tamīm. See text above, II/1218; Ya’qūbī, Ta’rikh, III, 40; Baladhurī, Futūḥ (Cairo), III, 522–23; Well-hausen, Arab Kingdom, 441–42.

\(^{58}\) ‘Abdallāh b. Ḥawdhān al-Jahdāmī was one of the chiefs of the Azd. See Kūfī, Futūḥ, VII, 266.

al-Ḍabbi.\textsuperscript{60} The troops then began to consult with one another in secret.

Someone said to Qutaybah, "No one creates dissension among the troops except Ḥayyān." Qutaybah therefore wanted to murder him, however, Ḥayyān had ingratiated himself with the servants of the governors,\textsuperscript{61} who would not conceal anything from him. Qutaybah summoned a man and ordered him to kill Ḥayyān. But one of the servants heard him, came to Ḥayyān and told him of the order. Thus, when Qutaybah sent a message to Ḥayyān, summoning him, the latter was on his guard and feigned illness. Meanwhile, Waki\textsuperscript{'} accepted the soldiers' request that he serve as their leader.

(Waki\textsuperscript{'}) cited the verse of al-Ashhab b. Rumaylah:

\begin{quote}
I will reap what I have sown. Verily, my power rests on a solid foundation.
\end{quote}

In Khurāsān there were at that time nine thousand warriors from the Başran army representing the Ahl al-ʿĀliyah; seven thousand from the Bakr, headed by al-Ḥudayn b. al-Mundhir; ten thousand from the Tamim, led by Dirār b. Ḥusayn al-Ḍabbi; four thousand from the ʿAbd al-Qays, led by ʿAbdallāh b. ʿAlwān al-ʿAwdhi,\textsuperscript{62} and ten thousand from the Azd, headed by ʿAbdallāh b. Ḥawdhan. There were seven thousand from the Kūfani army, led by Jahm b. Zahr or ʿUbaydallāh b. ʿAlī, and seven thousand of the clients [mawāli],\textsuperscript{63} led by Ḥayyān. Some say that Ḥayyān is from al-Daylam,\textsuperscript{64} while others say that he is from Khurāsān. He is called "Nabāṭi" (the Nabataean) because of his mispronunciation of Arabic.\textsuperscript{65}

\textsuperscript{60} Waki had sworn to take vengeance on Qutaybah because the latter had removed him from his position as head of the Banū Tamim in Khurāsān, replacing him with al-Ḍabbi. See Baladhuri, Futūḥ (Cairo), III, 523; \textit{EP}, s.v. Ḍabba.

\textsuperscript{61} Text: basham al-wulat. Ibn al-Athir, \textit{Kāmil}, V, 15, has khadam al-wulat, which means the same thing.

\textsuperscript{62} Text: ʿAwdhi, read al-ʿAwdhi, following the Cairo ed.

\textsuperscript{63} A mawālī [pl. mawālî] was a non-Arab convert to Islam who attached himself to an Arab tribe. See Crone, \textit{Slaves}, 49ff.

\textsuperscript{64} A region encompassing the entire southern coast of the Caspian and the lands forming a belt to the south of the Alburz range. See \textit{EP}, s.v. Daylam.

\textsuperscript{65} Text: li-luknatihi. Ḥayyān apparently had difficulty pronouncing the guttural consonants of the Arabic language, such as ḥā and ʿayin. See \textit{FHA}, 68–69, where examples of his speech are quoted.
Hayyān sent to Waki', saying, "If I leave you alone and lend you my support, will you assign me the land tax of one side of the Balkh River for as long as I am alive and you are governor?" When Waki' agreed, Hayyān said to the non-Arabs, "Those (Arabs) are fighting over something other than religion, so let them kill one another." They agreed and swore allegiance to Waki' in secret.

Dirār b. Ḥuṣayn approached Qutaybah, saying, "The troops are going back and forth to Waki', swearing allegiance to him." Now Waki' was in the habit of visiting ʿAbdallāh b. Muslim al-Faqir at his house, where the two of them would drink together. 'Abdallāh said, "That one (that is, Dirār) is envious of Waki', and this claim is false. Waki' is in my house, drinking, becoming intoxicated, and shitting in his clothes, yet Dirār claims that they are swearing allegiance to him."

Waki' then came to Qutaybah and said, "Beware of Dirār, for I do not trust him with you." Qutaybah therefore attributed what they said to their mutual envy. Waki' pretended to be sick, whereupon Qutaybah sent Dirār b. Sinān al-Ḍabbi to Waki' as a spy. Dirār swore allegiance to Waki' secretly. In this manner, Qutaybah learned that the soldiers were, in fact, swearing allegiance to Waki', and Qutaybah now said to Dirār (b. Ḥuṣayn), "You spoke the truth." He replied, "I reported to you nothing but what I knew, but you attributed what I said to my envy. I have fulfilled my obligation." "You were right," said Qutaybah.

Now Qutaybah sent a message to Waki', summoning him, but Qutaybah's messenger found him with a sticky substance smeared on his foot and beads and shells placed on his leg. He was attended by two men from the Zahrīn, who were uttering incantations over his foot. When the messenger said to Waki', "Answer the governor," the latter replied, "You see the problem with my foot." The messenger then returned to Qutaybah, who sent him back to Waki', saying, "Qutaybah says to you, 'Come to me carried on a litter.'" Waki' answered, "I cannot." Qutaybah said to Sharīk b. al-Ṣāmit al-Bāhili, one of the Banū Wā'il—the commander of his guard—and to a man from the Ghani, "Go to Waki' and bring him to me. If he refuses, cut off his head." He sent 66. Text: wa-ʿalā sāqihi kharazan wa-wadaʾan. See Ibn al-Athir, Kāmil, V, 16: wa-ʿallaqa ʿalā raʾsihi ḥirzan, "He tied an amulet on his head."
horsemen with them—some say that Warqā’ b. Naṣr al-Bāhili was the commander of the guard in Khurasān.

According to ‘Alī—Abū al-Dhayyāl—Thumāmah b. Nājidh al-‘Adawi: Qutaybah sent someone to fetch Waki’, and I said, “I will bring him to you, may God cause you to prosper.” Qutaybah said, “Bring him to me.” So I went to Waki’, who had already been informed that the horsemen were on their way. When he saw me, he said, “O Thumāmah, summon the troops.” I called out, and the first one to arrive was Huraym b. Abī Ṭahmah, with eight men.

Al-Ḥasan b. Rushayd al-Jūzjānī related: Qutaybah sent for Waki’, and Huraym said, “I will bring him to you,” whereupon Qutaybah replied, “Go.” Huraym reported: “I mounted my horse, fearing that he would recall me, and I went to Waki’. But he had already set out.”

Kulayb b. Khalaf said: Qutaybah sent Shu’bah b. Zahir,67 one of the Banū Ṣakhir b. Nahshal, to Waki’. When he arrived, Waki’ exclaimed, “O Ibn Zahir, wait a while until the cavalry catch up.” Then Waki’ called for a knife and cut off the beads that were on his legs. Next, he put on his armor and quoted the verse:

Tightly tie my navel so that it will not burst.

One day for the Harridan and one day for the Ṣadif.68

Waki’ set out by himself, and some women who noticed him said, “Abū Muṭarriṭ69 is alone.” It was at this moment that Huraym b. Abī Ṭahmah arrived with eight men, including ‘Amirat al-Barīd70 b. Rabī’ah al-‘Ujayfī.

According to Ḥamzah b. Ibrāhīm and others: Waki’ set out and was met by a man who asked, “What is your tribe?” He answered, “The Banū Asad.” The man then asked, “What is your name?” He replied, “Dirghamah.” He asked, “The son of whom?” He answered, “Ibn Layth.” The man said, “Take this banner.”

Then returning to our original chain of transmission, our 68. See Kūfī, Futūḥ, VII, 270.

69. Waki’’s patronymic was Abu Muṭarriṭ. See note 59 above.
70. Text: ‘Amirah b. al-Barīd; read ‘Amirat al-Barīd, following the Cairo ed.
source said: When Waki' set out, he ordered his servants, saying, "Take my baggage to [my] paternal cousins." They replied, "We do not know where their camp is." He said, "Look for two spears that have been tied together, one on top of the other, with a nosebag on top of them. They are my paternal cousins." There were five hundred of them in the army.

Waki' called out to the troops, who approached him, one company after the other, from every direction. He set out, leading the troops, saying:

A brave man who, when he is required to carry out an onerous task, keeps his ribs and his bosom tightly drawn.\(^{71}\)

Some people said that when Waki' set out he recited:

Do we face Luqman b. 'Ad\(^{72}\) and his type?
Bring me my sword. They shall not carry off an unarmed man.

Qutaybah was joined by the members of his household and the chiefs from among his companions and trusted supporters, including: Iyās b. Bayhas b. 'Amr, Qutaybah's paternal cousin, who was closely related, and 'Abdallāh b. Wā'lān al-'Adawī, with men from his tribe, the Banū Wā'il. Ḥayyān b. Iyās al-'Adawī came to him with ten men, including 'Abd al-'Aziz b. al-Ḥārith.

Maysarah al-Jadali, who was a brave man, came to him, saying, "If you want, I will bring you Waki'"s head." He said, "Stay where you are." Qutaybah ordered one of his men, saying, "Call out among the soldiers, 'Where are the Banū 'Āmīr?'"\(^{73}\) He called out, "Where are the Banū 'Āmīr?" Miḥfān b. Jaz' al-Kilābī\(^{74}\) said, "Where you placed them"—Qutaybah had treated them roughly. Qutaybah then said, "Call out, 'I remind you of God and our kinship.'" But Miḥfān called out, "You severed the ties of rela-

---

\(^{71}\) This saying means that a brave man gets himself fully ready for the task. See text below, II/1298, where the verse is repeated with a slight variant; see also Kūfī, Futūḥ, VII, 271.

\(^{72}\) Luqman b. 'Ad was a legendary hero of pre-Islamic Arabia, famous for his wisdom and longevity. See EI\(^2\), s.v. Lukmān.

\(^{73}\) The Banū 'Āmīr b. Ṣa'ṣa'āh, of the Qays. See Caskel, Ḥamharah, I, 92.

\(^{74}\) Ibn al-Athir (Kāmil, V, 16) gives his name as Muḥaqqir b. Jaz' al-'Ālāʾi. Both men were from the Qays.
tionship." Qutaybah said, "Call out, 'Accept our conciliation.'" But Mihfân, or someone else, called out, "No, may God never forgive us if we do." Qutaybah then recited:

O my soul, endure the pain with patience, since I have not found equals to the tribe's eminent ones.

Then Qutaybah called for a turban that his mother had sent him, put it on—it was his custom to wear it in times of difficulty—and called for one of his well-trained horses that he considered lucky in war. The horse was brought close to him so that he might mount it, but it started to jump about until it exhausted him. When Qutaybah saw this, he returned to his couch, lay down, and said, "Let it be, for this is God's will." Hayyân al-Nabaṭî approached, leading the non-Arabs, and made his stand, even though Qutaybah was angry with him, and 'Abdallah b. Muslim made his stand next to him. 'Abdallah said to Hayyân, "Attack both wings." When he answered, "It is not time for that," 'Abdallah became angry and said, "Give me my bow." Hayyân said, "This is not a day for the bow." Waki' then sent a message to Hayyân that said, "I am waiting for you to fulfill your promise." Hayyân said to his son, "When you see me turn my cap around and move in the direction of Waki'’s troops, bring to me the non-Arabs who are with you." Ibn Hayyân stood with the non-Arabs and, when Hayyân turned his cap around, they moved in the direction of Waki'’s troops, whereupon his followers exclaimed, "God is great."

Qutaybah sent his brother, Šāliḥ, to the soldiers, but he was wounded in the head by a man from the Banû Ǧabbah known as Sulaymân al-Zanjîrj, that is, the Carob—some say that he was shot by one of (Waki’’s) paternal cousins. Šāliḥ was carried to Qutaybah, his head leaning to the side, and placed in his prayer room. Qutaybah shifted his position and sat with Šāliḥ for a while. Then he went back to his couch.

75. Text: kâna yatâṭayyir ilayhi fi-l-zuḥûf.
76. Text: fa-inna hâdha amrun yurâd. Compare text below, II/1295, where a parallel passage specifies inna lahu la-sha’n.
77. That is, Qutaybah's brother.
79. Text: Bal’amm, an abbreviated form of banû-l’-amm, "the paternal cousins."
Abū al-Sarī al-Azdi said: Sāliḥ was shot and felled by a man from the Banū Dabbah; he was then stabbed by Ziyād b. ‘Abd al-Rahmān al-Azdi, one of the Banū Sharīk b. Mālik.

Abū Mikhnaf said: A man from the Ghani attacked the troops and saw a man who was wearing a coat of mail. He mistook him for Jahm b. Zahr b. Qays and stabbed him, saying:

The Ghani are mighty and trustworthy when they go to war, even if the other soldiers quarrel among themselves.

But the man who was stabbed was a non-Arab, and the troops were aroused. ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Muslim advanced toward them, but he was stoned to death by the market people and the rabble. The soldiers set fire to an enclosure containing Qutaybah’s camels and riding animals; they closed in on him. Fighting for him was a man from the Bāhilah, from the Banū Wā’il, and Qutaybah said to him, “Save yourself.” But he replied, “How miserable a repayment, in that case, for you gave me bread to eat and soft clothes to wear.”

Qutaybah now called for a riding animal. A horse was brought to him, but it would not stand still long enough for him to mount it. He said, “There is something the matter with it.” So he did not mount the horse but sat, and the troops advanced toward the tent. When the troops reached the tent, Iyās b. Bayhas and ‘Abdal-lāh b. Wa’lān fled, abandoning Qutaybah. ‘Abd al-‘Azīz b. al-Hārith went out looking for his son, ‘Amr—or ‘Umar; al-Ṭā’ī met him but was wary of engaging him, so that ‘Abd al-‘Azīz found his son, who mounted the horse behind his father.

Qutaybah observed al-Haytham b. al-Munakhkhal, who was one of those who had plotted against him, and said:

I used to teach him to shoot every day. However, when his arm became well-trained with the bow, he shot at me.

80. Text: mujaffaf, from tijāf, which Lane defines as “a kind of armor with which a horse is clad in war, in the manner of a coat of mail.” See Lexicon, pt. 2, p. 432.
81. Kūfī, who identifies the man as a certain Junādah, adds: “So he fought and was slain.” See Futūḥ, VII, 275.
82. Text: inna lahu la-sha’n. See note 76, above.
83. Text: istadda; the Cairo ed. has ishtadda, “when he became powerful.”
Slain along with Qutaybah were his brothers, 'Abd al-Rahmān, Abdallāh, Šāliḥ, Ḥuṣayn, and 'Abd al-Karīm, the sons of Muslim. His son, Kathīr b. Qutaybah, was also slain, as were several members of his household. But his brother, Dirār, escaped, having been saved by his maternal uncles—the latter's mother was Gharra' bt. Dirār b. al-Qa'qā' b. Ma'bad b. Zurārah.

Some people said: 'Abd al-Karīm b. Muslim was killed in Qazwin.84

According to Ābū ‘Ubaydah—Ābū Mālik: They slew Qutaybah in the year 96/715. Eleven of Muslim's descendants were slain—Wākī' crucified them. Seven of them were the sons of Muslim, and four were grandsons: Qutaybah, 'Abd al-Rahmān, 'Abdallāh al-Faqīr, 'Ubaydallāh, Šāliḥ, Bashshār, and Muḥammad, the sons of Muslim; and Kathīr b. Qutaybah and Mughallis b. 'Abd al-Rahmān [and two others, the grandsons].85 None of Muslim's sons escaped, except for 'Amr, who was the governor of al-Jūz-jān,86 and Dirār, whose mother was al-Gharra' bt. Dirār b. al-Qa'qā' b. Ma'bad b. Zurārah; his maternal uncles came and removed him [from his position], thereby saving him.87

Al-Farazdaq recited about this:

The evening that Ibn Ghana’ did not wish—when he called out—that he had parents from a tribe other than us.88

Iyās b. 'Amr, the nephew of Muslim b. 'Amr, was wounded in the collarbone, but he lived. The source continued: When the tribe overran the great tent, they cut its ropes.

According to Zuhayr: Jahm b. Zahr said to Sa'd,89 'Dismount and cut off his head, for he has been weakened by the wounds.'
Sa'd replied, "I fear that the horses will bolt." Jahm exclaimed, "You are afraid, though I am next to you!" Sa'd dismounted, split the top of the tent, and cut off his head. Ḥuḍayn b. al-Mundhir recited:

Verily, Ibn Sa'd and Ibn Zahr took turns with their swords on the head of the crowned hero.
The evening that we brought Ibn Zahr and you brought a black-nosed [man] with brands on his arms, blackish, Deaf, from the Ghudânah, as if his forehead were a blot of ink on a skin that had been scrawled over.90

When Maslamah slew Yazid b. al-Muhallab, he appointed Sa'id Khudhaynah b. 'Abd al-'Āzīz b. al-Ḥārīth b. al-Ḥakam b. Abī al-'Āṣ governor of Khurāsân, and Yazīd's subgovernors were imprisoned.91 Among those imprisoned was Jahm b. Zahr al-Ju'fī, who was tortured by a man from the Bāhilah. Someone said to the Bāhilī tribesman, "This is Qutaybah's murderer," whereupon he tortured him to death. Sa'id criticized him for this, but the man retorted, "You ordered me to extract money from him; I tortured him, and it was his time to die."

On the day that Qutaybah was slain, one of his Khwārazmian slave girls was with him; when he was slain, she fled. Subsequently, Yazīd b. al-Muhallab captured her. She is Umm Khulaydah.

According to 'Ali—Hamzah b. Ibrāhim and Abū al-Yaqūn:
When Qutaybah was slain, 'Umarah b. Junayyah92 al-Riyahī ascended the pulpit and spoke at length. Waki' said to him, "Spare us your filth and gossip." Then Waki' began to speak, saying, "The likes of me and the likes of Qutaybah are as the first one said:

He who fucks an ass fucks a catamite.93

Qutaybah sought to slay me, but I am deadly.
They tried me once; then they tried me again, from a distance of two bow shots and from a distance of a hundred bow shots. Until, when I grew old and they gave me white hair, they gave up on my rein and avoided me.

I am Abū Muṭarrīf!" According to Abū Muʿawiyah—Ṭalḥah b. Iyās: Wākī' recited on the day that Qutaybah was slain:

I am the son of Khindif.94 Her tribes ascribe good deeds to me. And my paternal uncle is Qays 'Aylān.95

Then he grabbed his beard and recited:

A shaykh who, when he is required to carry out an onerous task, keeps his ribs and his bosom tightly drawn.96

"By God, I will slay, indeed I will slay, and I will crucify, indeed I will crucify. I want to taste blood. This Marzubān97 of yours, the son of the adulteress, has inflated the prices of your goods. By God, if he does not set the price of one qaṣīz98 in the market tomorrow at four (dirhams), I will crucify him. Remember the Prophet in your prayers." Then he stepped down from the pulpit.

According to 'Ali-al-Muḥammad b. Muhammad and a shaykh from the Banū Tamim, and Maslamah b. Muḥārib: Wākī' demanded Qutaybah's head and his signet ring but was told, "The Azd have taken it." Wākī' emerged, saying, "You have added falsehood to falsehood, O Sa'd the blacksmith."99

---

94. The Khindif was a major division of the Muḍār that included the Hudhayl, the Tamim, and the Kinānah. See EP, s.v. Djazirat al-ʿArab.
95. Qays 'Aylān was one of the two subdivisions of Muḍār. See EP, s.v. Kays 'Aylān.
96. Compare text above, II/1293.
97. By referring to Qutaybah as a Marzubān, the Arabic form of the title of provincial governors in the Sasanian Empire, Wākī' likened him to an alien grandee after the Iranian fashion. See EI, s.v. Marzubān.
98. A qaṣīz is a measure of dry goods equivalent to eight makākik or twelve šā'. See Kazimirski, Dictionnaire, II, 788; Hinz, Islamische Masse und Gewichte, 48–50.
On which of my two days will I escape from death, a day that has not been ordained or a day that has been?
There is no good in a broad-breasted horse, the fleet ones that run in the races,
Is there a day on which I will neither frighten (others)
nor be frightened (myself)?

"By God—than Whom there is no other God—I will not leave until either Qutaybah's head is brought to me, or my head is added to his." Then he brought some wooden stakes and said,
"These horses must have riders"—thereby alluding to the threat of crucifixion. Ḥuḍayn said to him, "O Abū Muṭārrif, it will be brought to you, so calm down."

Ḥuḍayn came to the Azd and said, "Are you fools? We swore allegiance to Wāki' and accepted his leadership. He exposed himself to danger, and then you take Qutaybah's head! Give it up," that is, the head, "may God curse it." They brought out the head, saying, "O Abū Muṭārrif, this person is the one who cut it off, so reward him." He agreed and gave him three thousand dirhams.

According to Abū al-Dhayyāl: Among those who accompanied the head was Unayf b. Ḥassān, one of the Banū 'Adi.

According to Abū Mikhnaf: Wāki' paid Ḥayyān al-Nabaṭī in return for what the latter had given him.101

According to Khuraym b. Abī Yaḥyā—shaykhs from the Qays: Sulaymān asked al-Hudhayl b. Zufar, when Qutaybah's head and the heads of the members of his household were put in front of him, "Does this distress you, Hudhayl?" He replied, "If it distresses me, it distresses many others as well." Then Khuraym
b. 'Amr103 and al-Qa'qā' b. Khulayd104 spoke to Sulaymān saying,
"Grant permission to bury their heads." He said, "Certainly, for I did not want any of this."

According to 'Ali—Abū 'Abdallāh al-Sulāmī—Yazid b. Suwayd: A Persian from the army of Khurāsān said: "O ye Arabs, you have slain Qutaybah. By God, had Qutaybah been one of us and had he died among us, we would have put him in a coffin that would have served as a mascot for us in our raids. Nobody ever accomplished in Khurāsān what Qutaybah did. Nevertheless, he betrayed (us). This is because al-Hajjāj wrote to him, saying, 'Lay a trap for them and slay them, for the sake of God.'"

According to al-Ḥasan b. Rushayd: The Ḥisbaḥbadh105 said to a man, "O ye Arabs, you have slain Qutaybah and Yazid,106 the two lords of the Arabs." The man asked, "Which of the two, in your opinion, was more awesome and commanded more respect?" The Ḥisbaḥbadh replied, "If Qutaybah were in the Maghrib, in the deepest hole in the earth, tied up in chains, and Yazid was with us, in our country, serving as our governor, Qutaybah would still be more awesome and more highly respected than Yazid."

According to 'Ali—al-Muḥammad b. Ḥabīb: A man approached Qutaybah on the day he died, while he was holding court, and said, "Today the King of the Arabs will be slain"—they considered Qutaybah to be the King of the Arabs. Qutaybah said to him, "Sit down!"

According to Kulayb b. Khalaf—a man from among those who were with Waki' when Qutaybah was slain: On Waki'’s order, a man called out, "No spoils are to be taken from any corpse." But Ibn ‘Abīd al-Hajari passed by Abū al-Ḥujr al-Bāhili and stripped him. When Waki' was informed of this, he cut off the man's head.

According to Abū 'Ubaydah—'Abdallāh b. 'Umar from the Taym Allāt: Waki' mounted his horse one day, and they brought him a man who was drunk. On his order, the man was killed. Someone said to Waki', "He deserved to be flogged,107 not killed." He replied, "I punish with the sword, not the whip."

105. Ḥisbaḥbadh in Persian means "army chief"; it is the Islamic form of a military title used in the pre-Islamic Persian Empires. See EP, s.v. Ispahbadh.
106. Yazid b. al-Muhallab was slain in the year 102/720-21. See text below, II/1405, sub anno 102.
107. Text: hadd, a term that refers to certain acts, namely, unlawful intercourse, false accusation of unlawful intercourse, drinking wine, theft, and highway robbery, which have been forbidden or sanctioned by punishments in the Qur'ān. The punishment for drinking wine is eighty lashes. See EP, s.v. Hadd.
Nahār b. Tawsī’ah recited:

We used to cry because of al-Bāhili,
but this Ghudānī is much more evil.

He also recited:

When we saw al-Bāhili, Ibn Muslim, acting tyrannically, we struck him on the head with a sharp sword.

Al-Farazdaq recited, recalling the battle of Waki‘:

To us belongs the one who drew swords and sheathed them, the evening of the battle of the Gate of al-Qaṣr, from Farghanah.
The evening that no tribe could defend its sons
by invoking an Iraqi or Yemenite glory.
The evening that Ibn Gharrā‘ did not wish—when he called out—that he had parents from a tribe other than us.
The evening that the Hawāzin of ‘Āmir and Ghatafān did not cover the nakedness of Ibn Dukhān.
The evening that the people wished to be our slaves,
when the two armies were fighting.
They saw one mountain towering over the others, when the heads of their two leaders met, butting together.
Men for Islam who, as soon as they fought for religion, caused it to spread in every place.
Until a herald called out from the walls of every city, issuing the call to prayer.
But Waki‘ will be rewarded in the name of the community,
since he realized
its solidarity with a cutting sword and spearhead.
A reward for the deeds of men, just as a reward was given at Badr and al-Yarmūk from the shades of Paradise.

108. See Ibn Qutaybah, Shi‘r, I, 448–49, no. 95.
109. “Al-Bāhili” refers to Qutaybah, and “Ghudānī” to Waki‘.
110. See El2, s.v. Farghanā.
111. Ibn Dukhān is the nickname of Bāhilāh, Qutaybah’s tribe.
112. The text is ya‘lū-l-jībāl. Diwān, II, 332, has daqqa-l-jībāl, “They saw one mountain crushing the others.”
113. See Diwān, II, 331–32.
The Caliphate of Sulaymān b. ‘Abd al-Malik

Al-Farazdaq also recited about this:

I received the news, when my saddlebags were in Medina, about a battle waged by the family of Tamim; it was satisfying and comforting.\footnote{Text: \textit{aq’adat kulla qā’im}, literally, "It caused every standing person to sit down." See ibid., II, 310, l.4.}

According to ‘Ali—Khuraym b. Abi Yaḥyā—one of his paternal uncles—shaykhs from the Ghassān: We were in the gap of al-‘Uqāb\footnote{A gap in the mountains overlooking the oasis of Damascus. See Yāqūt, \textit{Mu’jam}, IV, 133.} when suddenly we encountered a man carrying a stick and a leather bag who looked like one of the Caliph’s messengers. We asked, "Where have you come from?" He replied, "From Khurāsān." We asked, "Is there any news?" He replied, "Yes, Qutaybah b. Muslim was slain yesterday." We were amazed at his statement, and, seeing that we did not believe him, he asked, "How far shall I be from Ifriqiyyah tonight, do you think?" He set off and we followed him on our horses, but he was so fast that he disappeared at the blink of an eye.

Al-Ṭīrīmmāḥ\footnote{Al-Ṭīrīmmāḥ b. Ḥakīm al-Ṭā’ī was a celebrated poet of the first century of Islam. See \textit{El}, s.v. al-Ṭīrīmmāḥ; Ibn Qutaybah, \textit{Shi’r}, II, 585–90, no. 160.} recited:

Had it not been for the horsemen of Madhḥij, the daughter of Madhḥij, and (the horsemen of) Azd, the army would have been discomfited and plundered
And dispersed in the lands, and nobody bringing news about them would have returned to the army of Iraq.
The bonds of the community would have been loosened, scorn heaped on the authority of the Caliph, and illicit doings would have become permissible.
People who slew Qutaybah by violence, while the horses were racing inclined to the ground, covered with dust.
In the meadow, the meadow of al-Šīn, where the Muḍār of Iraq understood who was the noblest and greatest.

\[1303\] When all of Rabi‘ah gave themselves up to despair, and the Mu‘āð and those who claimed to belong to the Mu‘āð were scattered abroad.

And the Azd of Iraq and the Madhhij advanced toward death, one common ancestor uniting them both.
The Qaqātān were smiting the head of every full-armed warrior;
they protect their eyes, but they do not see.\footnote{117}

And the Azd know that under their standard is either a glorious sovereignty or bloody death.
For by our strength the Prophet Muhammad triumphed, and through us it has come to pass that the pulpit is firmly established in Damascus.\footnote{118}

\’Abd al-Raḥmān b. Jumānah al-Bāhili recited:

It is as if Abū Ḥafṣ Qutaybah never led one army to the other, and never ascended a pulpit.
And the flags did not flutter when the tribe was standing around him, and the people never witnessed an army under his command.
The Fates called him, so he answered his Lord and went to Paradise, chaste and pure.
Islam did not suffer a loss—after Muḥammad—like that of Abū Ḥafṣ. So mourn him, ‘Abhar.\footnote{119}

”’Abhar” refers to an umm walad\footnote{120} belonging to Qutaybah.

Al-\’Aṣamm b. al-\’Hajjāj recited, elegizing Qutaybah:

Is it not time for the living to recognize (our distinction) for us?
Surely we are the people most deserving of praise and glory.
We lead the Tamīm, the clients, and the Madhhij, the Azd, ‘Abd al-Qays, and the tribe from Bakr.
We massacre whomever we wish by the power of our sovereignty.

\footnotesize{117. Text: taḥmi baṣā‘itahunna idh lā tubṣiru. See Diwān al-Tirmīmāh, p. 251, where the text is wa-‘alā baṣā‘iřāh wa-idh lā tubṣiru “[smiting the head of every full-armed warrior] and their eyes, and so they become unable to see.”
118. See The Diwāns of at-Tufail and at-Tirmīmāh, 147 (Arabic text), and 62 (translation).
119. See Nakā‘id Jarīr wa-l-Farazdaq, I, 363.
120. An umm walad is a slave girl who has borne her master a child; she becomes free on the death of her master. See El, s.v. Umm al-Walad.}
and force whomever we wish to succumb to disgrace and subjugation.

Sulaymān—Many are the soldiers that we rounded up for you by our spears while our horses were riding at full speed. Many are the impregnable fortresses that we ravaged. And many are the lowlands and the rocky mountains. And towns which no soldiers had raided before us, we raided, driving the horses month after month. Our horses became used to protracted raids, and to be quiet at the sight of charging warriors so that they were no longer frightened by them.

Even if the fire is kindled, and they are forced toward the fire, they rush into the brunt of fire in war. With their breasts they toy with spearheads and lances, while death is surging with black waves.

With these horses we have ravaged many a city of unbelievers, until they passed beyond the place where the dawn breaks.

And if Fate had not hurried us, they would have carried us beyond Dhū al-Qarnayn's wall of rock and molten brass.121

But the good Banū 'Amr met their preordained fate when their life-span came to an end.

[1305] In this year, Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Mālik dismissed Khālid b. 'Abdallāh al-Qasri as governor of Mecca, replacing him with Tālah b. Dāwūd al-Ḥāḍrami.

In this year, Maslamah b. 'Abd al-Mālik raided Byzantium in a summer expedition and conquered a fortress [hišn] known as "Hišn 'Awf."122

In this year, Qurrah b. Shank al-'Absi, the governor of Egypt, died, in the month of Safar [October 16–November 13], according to some of the biographers. Others said: Qurrah died during the

121. Text: wa-l-qātri, "and rain"; read wa-l-qiti, which means molten brass. Dhū al-Qarnayn ["the two-horned one"] refers to Alexander the Great who, according to Qur'ān 18:82–98, was given power on earth. In response to an appeal from oppressed people, he built a rampart of iron and brass against the incursions of Gog and Magog. See EI², s.v. al-Iskandar.

122. I have not been able to identify Hišn 'Awf.
lifetime of al-Walid (b. 'Abd al-Malik), in the year 95/714, in the month in which al-Ḥajjāj died.\textsuperscript{123}

In this year, the pilgrimage was led by Abū Bakr b. Muḥammad b. 'Amr b. Ḥazm al-Anṣārī—as I was told by Aḥmad b. Thābit, on the authority of the one he mentioned—on the authority of Ishaq b. Ḥsāʾ—on the authority of Abū Maʾshār; and the same was related by al-Wāqidī and others.

The governor of Medina in this year was Abū Bakr b. Muḥammad b. 'Amr b. Ḥazm, and the governor of Mecca was 'Abd al-'Azīz b. 'Abdallāh b. Khālid b. Asīd.\textsuperscript{124}

In Iraq, Yazīd b. al-Muhallab was in charge of military and religious affairs, and Ṣāliḥ b. 'Abd al-Rahmān was in charge of the fiscal administration. Sufyān b. 'Abdallāh al-Kindi, serving on behalf of Yazīd b. al-Muhallab, was governor of al-Ṭabarān. 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Udhaynah was in charge of the judiciary there. In charge of the judiciary in al-Ḫūfah was Abū Bakr b. Abī Mūsā. Wākiʾ b. Abī Sūd was responsible for military affairs in Khurāsān.\textsuperscript{125}

\textsuperscript{123} Al-Ḥajjāj died in Ramadān. See EIP, s.v. al-Ḥadjājdād b. Yusuf.

\textsuperscript{124} The identification of 'Abd al-'Azīz as the governor of Mecca may be a mistake. See text below, II/1314, sub anno 97, where Tabari indicates that Ṭalḥah b. Dāwūd continued to serve as governor of Mecca until the year 97/715–16, at which time he was replaced by 'Abd al-'Azīz b. 'Abdallāh b. Khālid b. Asīd.

\textsuperscript{125} See Yaʿqūbī, Taʾrikh, III, 41; Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 444–45.
The Events of the Year

97

(SEPTEMBER 5, 715—AUGUST 24, 716)

Among the events taking place in this year: Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik equipped the armies and dispatched them to Constantinople. He put his son, Dāwūd b. Sulaymān, in charge of the summer campaign, which resulted in the capture of Ḥiṣn al-Mar'ah.126

According to al-Wāqidi, in this year Maslamah b. 'Abd al-Malik raided Byzantium and conquered the fortress that had previously been taken by al-Waḍḍāhiyyah, the leader of the Waḍḍāhiyyah.127

In this year, 'Umar128 b. Hubayrah al-Fazārī undertook a naval expedition against Byzantium, where he spent the winter.

In this year, 'Abd al-'Azīz b. Mūsā b. Nuṣayr was killed in al-Andalus and Ḥabīb b. Abī 'Ubayd al-Fihrī brought his head to Sulaymān.

In this year, Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik appointed Yazid b. al-
Muhallab as governor of Khurāsān.129

126. "The Woman's Fortress" was in the region of Malatya. See text below, 1306, sub anno 98.
127. The Waḍḍāhiyyah were a separate military regiment of non-Arabs, named after their commander, a Berber freedman of 'Abd al-Malik. See Crone, Slaves, 38.
128. Text: 'Amr, read 'Umar, following the Cairo ed.
129. See Ibn Khayyat, Ta'rikh, I, 319; Ya'qūbī, Ta'rikh, III, 41; Kūfī, Futūh, VII, 278–85; Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 170.
The Events of the Year 97

The Appointment of Yazīd b. al-Muhallab as Governor of Khurāsān

The circumstances: When Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik became Caliph, he put Yazīd b. al-Muhallab in charge of military, religious, and fiscal affairs in Iraq.

According to Hishām b. Muḥammad—Abū Mikhnaf: Upon being given these responsibilities in Iraq, Yazīd reflected as follows: "Iraq has been ruined by al-Ḥajjāj. Today I am the hope of the people of Iraq. But if I go there and force the people to pay the tribute and punish them for nonpayment, I will have become just like al-Ḥajjāj, throwing the people into conflict and returning them to those prisons from which God had released them. On the other hand, if I do not send Sulaymān an amount equal to what was collected by al-Ḥajjāj, he will not be pleased with me." Therefore, Yazīd approached Sulaymān, saying, "I should like to bring to your attention a man who is very skillful in collecting the tribute, and whom you may want to put in charge of that function, so that you will receive it from him: Śāliḥ b. 'Abd al-Rahmān, a client of the Banū Tamīm." Sulaymān said to him, "We accept your suggestion." Whereupon Yazīd set off for Iraq.

According to 'Umar b. Shabbah—'Ali: Śāliḥ preceded Yazīd to Iraq, where he established himself in Wāsīt.130

According to 'Alī—'Abbād b. Ayyūb: Yazīd approached, and the troops went out to meet him. Someone said to Śāliḥ, "Yazīd is here, and the troops have gone out to meet him." However, he did not go out until Yazīd drew near to the city. Then Śāliḥ went out, wearing a tunic [durrā'ah]131 and [carrying] a small, yellow mace. He was leading four hundred men from the Syrian army. He met Yazīd and traveled along with him. When Yazīd entered the city, Śāliḥ pointed to a house, saying, "I have emptied this house for you." Yazīd dismounted and Śāliḥ went to his residence.

Śāliḥ placed severe restraints upon Yazīd, refusing to transfer any money to him. Yazīd prepared one thousand tables to feed his

---

130. Wāsīt was built by al-Ḥajjāj b. Yūsuf in 83–84/702–3 and served as the capital of Iraq for most of the Umayyad period; the city was called "Wāsīt" [middle] because it was equidistant between al-Kūfah and al-巴士rah. See El, s.v. Wāsīt.

131. See Dozy, Vêtements, 177–81.
men, but Şālih seized them. Yazīd said to him, “Charge the cost of the tables to me.” Yazīd purchased many goods and wrote checks to Şālih for the benefit of the vendors; however, Şālih would not accept the checks, and they referred to Yazīd. Yazīd became angry and said, “I have brought this upon myself.” Soon thereafter, Şālih came, and Yazīd set aside a place for him. He sat down and said to Yazīd, “What are these checks? The levies are not to be used for those purposes. Several days ago I cashed a check for one hundred thousand dirhams, and I have paid your (soldiers’) stipends promptly, and when you asked for money for the army, I gave it to you. But this expense cannot be covered.”

The Commander of the Faithful will not be pleased, and you will be questioned about it.” Yazīd said to him, “O Abū al-Walid, accept these checks, just this once.” And he joked with him. Şālih asked, “If I allow them, will you not ask me again?” Yazīd replied, “No, I will not.”

Our source continued: ‘Abd al-Malik b. al-Muhallab wrote to Jarīr b. Yazīd al-Jahdāmi and to some of his close associates, saying, “The Commander of the Faithful has offered me the governorship of Khurāsān.” The news reached Yazīd b. al-Muhallab in 132. On the use of checks and other instruments of credit, see Dictionary of the Middle Ages, s.v. Banking, Islamic.

133. Şālih is referring to the expense for the one thousand tables.
Iraq, where he was greatly vexed because Șāliḥ b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān was placing severe constraints upon him in such a way that Yazīd could not attain anything he wanted. Yazīd summoned ʿAbdallāh b. al-Aḥtam, saying, "I need your assistance in a matter that has been troubling me and I want you to resolve it for me." He said, "I am at your command." He said, "As you see, I am in straitened circumstances, and this has made me uneasy. At the same time, Khurāsān has no governor, and I have learned that the Commander of the Faithful has offered this position to ʿAbd al-Malīk b. al-Muhallab. Is there any stratagem we might employ (to get it)?" He said, "Yes. Send me to the Commander of the Faithful, and I hope to bring you your document of appointment as governor of Khurāsān." Yazīd said, "Don't tell anyone about our conversation." Yazīd wrote two letters to Sulaymān: In the first, he mentioned the condition of Iraq and spoke highly of Ibn al-Aḥtam, stressing the latter's knowledge of the country. He dispatched Ibn al-Aḥtam on a post-horse, giving him thirty thousand dirhams. He traveled for seven nights bringing Yazīd's letter to Sulaymān. When he reached Sulaymān, the Caliph was dining, so he sat off to the side and ate two hens that were brought to him.

Ibn al-Aḥtam entered, and Sulaymān said to him, "I will receive you on another occasion." Then Sulaymān summoned him three nights later and said to him, "Yazīd b. al-Muhallab wrote to me, praising you and mentioning your expertise with regard to Iraq and Khurāsān. What is the extent of your knowledge about these countries?" Ibn al-Aḥtam replied, "I know more about them than anyone, for I was born and raised there, and I have knowledge and information about them and their people." Sulaymān said, "The Commander of the Faithful needs someone like you to advise him about Iraq and Khurāsān. Whom do you recommend that I appoint as governor of Khurāsān?" Ibn al-Aḥtam answered, "The Commander of the Faithful knows best whom he wants to appoint as governor, but if he mentions the name of a candidate, I will tell him whether or not I think he is qualified for the appointment."

Sulaymān mentioned the name of a man from the Quraysh, and Ibn al-Aḥtam said, "O Commander of the Faithful, he is not the real man for Khurāsān." Sulaymān then said, "Then ʿAbd al-Malīk b. al-Muhallab." He said, "No." The Caliph enumerated the names of many men, the last one being that of Waki' b. Abi Süd. Ibn al-Ahtam said, "O Commander of the Faithful, although Waki' is bold, fearless, courageous, and brave, he is not right for the job, for he has neither led three hundred men nor acknowledged that he owes submission to anyone." The Caliph responded, "You are right, woe unto you, so whom?" Ibn al-Ahtam said, "There is one man whom I know and whose name you have not mentioned." He asked, "Who is he?" Ibn al-Ahtam replied, "I will not disclose his name unless the Commander of the Faithful assures me that he will keep this matter secret, and that he will protect me from the person in question should the latter learn of it." The Caliph said, "Agreed. Name him. Who is he?" He said, "Yazid b. al-Muhallab." [The Caliph] said, "But he is in Iraq, which he prefers to Khurāsān." He said, "That is true, O Commander of the Faithful, but if you compelled him to transfer, he would appoint a deputy governor over Iraq and go." At that, the Caliph said, "That is a good idea." Sulaymān then wrote a document in which he appointed Yazid as governor of Khurāsān. He also wrote him a letter, saying: "I found Ibn al-Ahtam to be as intelligent, pious, virtuous, and as wise as you mentioned." He gave the letter to Ibn al-Ahtam, together with Yazid's document of appointment. Seven nights after setting out, Ibn al-Ahtam reached Yazid, who asked him, "What news have you brought me?"

Ibn al-Ahtam gave him the letter, causing Yazid to exclaim, "Woe is you! Don't you have anything better than this?" Then he gave him the document of appointment, whereupon Yazid ordered that provisions be made for setting out immediately; he summoned his son, Makhlad, sending him ahead to Khurāsān.

Makhlad set out that very day, and Yazid set out soon thereafter, having designated al-Jarrah b. 'Abdallāh al-Hakami as his representative in Wāsīṭ, and 'Abdallāh b. Hilāl al-Kilābī as his deputy in al-Baṣrāh. He assigned to Marwān b. al-Muhallab, whom he considered the most trustworthy of his brothers, the responsibility for his personal wealth and affairs in al-Baṣrah.

Abū al-Bahā’ al-iyādī recited to Marwān:

I found Abū Qabiṣah every day to be the most noble among them under all circumstances.

When they refused to undertake the heavy part of the affair, he took on what he could.

And if they are overwhelmed by something,
you excel them in magnanimity and generosity.

As for Abū ‘Ubaydah Ma‘mar b. al-Muthannā—Abū Mālik:

When Waki’ b. Abī Sud sent an expression of his obedience, together with Qutaybah’s head, to Sulaymān, that made a great impression on the Caliph. But Yazid b. al-Muhallab promised ‘Abdallāh b. al-Ahtam one hundred thousand dirhams on the condition that he denounced Waki’ in the presence of Sulaymān. Therefore, Ibn al-Ahtam said to the Caliph: “May God cause the Commander of the Faithful to prosper! By God, there is no one who is more deserving of my gratitude and no one who has rendered me greater services than Waki’. He took blood revenge on my behalf and dealt with my enemy to my contentment. Nevertheless, my duty to the Commander of the Faithful is greater and more compelling, and the obligation to provide good counsel requires me to inform the Commander of the Faithful that Waki’ never assembled one hundred horsemen without thinking of an act of perfidy. He is nobody where the collective good is concerned, but remarkable in mischief.” Sulaymān said, “He is not, therefore, one of those upon whom we can call for help.”

Now the Qays were claiming that Qutaybah had not thrown off allegiance to the Caliph. When Sulaymān put Yazid b. al-Muhallab in charge of military affairs in Iraq, he gave him the following order: “If the Qays can prove that Qutaybah did not throw off allegiance and did not withdraw obedience, then retaliate against Waki’ for him.” But Yazid acted treacherously. He did not give ‘Abdallah b. al-Ahtam what he had promised him and he sent his son, Makhlad b. Yazid, against Waki’.

The transmission of the account returns to ‘Ali. According to ‘Ali—Abū Mīkhnaf—‘Uthmān b. ‘Amr b. Mihṣān and Abū al-Hasan al-Khurasani-al-Kirmani: Yazid sent his son, Makhlad, to Khurasan. When Makhlad approached Marw, he sent ahead 'Amr b. 'Abdallah b. Sinan al-'Ataki (also, al-‘Sunabih). Upon his arrival in Marw, 'Amr sent a message to Waki', saying, "Meet me." But he refused, and 'Amr sent to him, saying, "You stupid, foolish, crude Bedouin, come out to meet your commander." The leading men from the army of Marw went out to meet Makhlad, but Waki' held back from going out until 'Amr al-Azdi forced him to go out. When they reached Makhlad, all of the soldiers dismounted, except for Waki', Muhammad b. Humran al-Sadi, and 'Abbâd b. Laqît, one of the Banû Qays b. Tha'labah. Eventually, however, they were forced to dismount. When Makhlad reached Marw he put Waki' in prison and tortured him, and he seized his followers and tortured them. This took place prior to the arrival of his father.

According to 'Ali-Kulayb b. Khalaf-Idris b. Hanzalah: When Makhlad reached Khurasan, he put me in prison, whereupon Ibn al-Ahtam came to me, saying, "Do you want to save yourself?" I said, "Yes." He said, "Take out the letters that al-Qa'qâ' b. Khulayd al-‘Absi and Khuraym b. ‘Amr al-Murri wrote to Qutaybah about throwing off allegiance to Sulaymân." I asked him, "O Ibn al-Ahtam, are you tricking me out of my religion?" Then Ibn al-Ahtam called for some papyrus and said, "You are a fool." He wrote letters to Qutaybah in the name of al-Qa'qâ' and certain men from the Qays, saying, "Al-Walid b. 'Abd al-Malik has just died, and Sulaymân will send this Mazûnî to Khurasan. So renounce your allegiance to Sulaymân." I said, "O Ibn al-Ahtam, by God, you are destroying yourself. By God, if I enter into his presence, I will surely tell him that the letters were written by you."

In this year, Yazid b. al-Muhallab went to Khurasan as its governor.

According to 'Ali b. Muhammad-Abu al-Sari al-Azdi—his paternal uncle: After Qutaybah was slain, Waki' served as governor of Khurasan for nine or ten months. Yazid b. al-Muhallab arrived in the year 97/715–16. According to 'Ali—al-Mufaddal b. Muhammad—his father: Yazid drew near to himself the army of Syria\textsuperscript{137} and a group from the army of Khurāsān. [With respect to this,) Nahār b. Tawsi‘ah recited:

We never expected from any governor what we expected from Yazid.
But we were wrong about him and it has been our custom to abstain from dealing with the unworthy.
If a governor did not give us justice,
we set out toward him like lions.
So gently, O Yazid, come back to us,
and let aside the company of slaves.
We come, but you turn away from us,
although we send greetings from afar.
And we return disappointed, without any gifts.
What is the reason for the sour face and aversion?

According to 'Ali—Ziyād b. al-Rabi‘—Ghālib al-Qaṭṭān: I saw 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz standing at 'Arafāt\textsuperscript{138} during the Caliphate of Sulaymān—Sulaymān had performed the pilgrimage that year—saying to 'Abd al-'Azīz b. 'Abdallāh b. Khalīd b. Asid, “How strange that the Commander of the Faithful appointed (such) a man as governor of the Muslims' best frontier post! I have learned from one of the merchants coming from that direction that that governor gives one of his slave girls a stipend equal to that of a thousand soldiers. By God, the Caliph's appointment of him as governor was not done for the sake of God!” Knowing that 'Umar was referring to Yazid and the Juhani woman,\textsuperscript{139} I said to him, “He is rewarding them for their tribulations during the war against the Azāriqah.”\textsuperscript{140}

\textsuperscript{137} The Syrian government troops had been kept away from Khurāsān by al-Ḥajjāj, who employed them exclusively in India. See Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 446.
\textsuperscript{138} 'Arafāt is a plain about twenty-one km. east of Mecca; it is the site of the central ceremonies of the annual Pilgrimage. See EP, s.v. 'Arafa.
\textsuperscript{139} The Juhani woman was Yazid b. al-Muhallab's concubine.
\textsuperscript{140} The Azāriqah were a Khārijite sect named after their leader, Nāfi b. al-Azraq, who maintained that all adversaries should be put to death with their wives and children. The Azāriqah were defeated by Yazid's father, al-Muhallab b. Abi Ṣufrah, in 78/692, after several years of fighting. See EP, s.v. Azārika; Dixon, The Umayyad Caliphate, 181.
The Caliphate of Sulaymân b. 'Abd al-Malik

Our source continued: Yazid bestowed a gift upon 'Abd al-Malik b. Sallâm al-Salûlî, whereupon the latter recited:

Your copious rain, O Yazid, kept falling on my need until my thirst was quenched, and your generosity cannot be denied.

You are the spring by means of which, when starvation prevails, the sick and the destitute live.

The cloud of spring has spread over all your lands, so they drank their fill; and rain-bearing clouds yielded copious rain.

May God send you, wherever you are, a cloud full of rain, every evening and every morning.

In this year, Sulaymân b. 'Abd al-Malik led the pilgrimage. I was told that by Ahmad b. Thâbit—his source—Isâ b. 'Isâ—Abû Ma'shar.

In this year, Sulaymân dismissed Talhah b. Dâwûd al-Hadrâmi as governor of Mecca.

The governors of the garrison towns in this year were the same as they had been in the previous year, with the exception of Khurâsân, where Yazid b. al-Muhallab was responsible for military, fiscal, and religious affairs. His representative in al-Kûfah—according to some—was Ḥârmalâh b. 'Umâyr al-Lakhmî, who served for a few months, after which he was dismissed; he was replaced by Bashîr b. Ḥâsân al-Nahdî.

141. Text: hawbah, which means the same as hâjah.
142. See Kûfî, Futuh, VII, 285.
143. But see text above, II/1305, sub anno 96.
The Events of the Year

98

(AUGUST 25, 716—AUGUST 13, 717)

Maslamah b. 'Abd al-Malik Besieges Constantinople

Among the events which took place that year: Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik sent his brother, Maslamah b. 'Abd al-Malik, to Constantinople, and ordered him to stay there until he either conquered the city or received Sulaymān's order to return. So he spent the winter and the summer there.144

According to Muḥammad b. 'Umar—Thawr b. Yazīd—Sulaymān b. Mūsā: When Maslamah approached Constantinople, he ordered every horseman to load two mudds145 of food on the back of his horse so that he might bring it to Constantinople. Upon his command, the food was heaped as high as certain mountains. Then Maslamah said to the Muslims, "Do not eat any of this food; rather, attack their lands and sow for yourselves." He built houses made of wood and passed the winter in them. The soldiers

---

144. See Ya'qūbi, Ta'rikh, III, 44; Kūfī, Futūh, VII, 298–306; FHA, 25ff.; Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 174–75; Maqdisi, Bod', VI, 43–44.

145. Text: mudayn. The Cairo ed. has mudayn. A mudd is a dry measure for grain, used in Syria and Egypt. See Ṭabarī, Glossary, CDLXXXII; Hinz, Islamische Masse, 43–47.
cultivated the land, while the aforementioned food remained in the desert, totally exposed; the soldiers ate what they obtained from raiding and, later, from what they had sown. Maslamah remained, besieging Constantinople and oppressing its inhabitants; he was accompanied by the most illustrious commanders of the Syrian army: Khālid b. Ma‘dān, ‘Abdallāh b. Abi Zakariyyā‘ al-Khuţā‘ī, and Mujāhid b. Jabr. He remained there until he learned of Sulaymān’s death. A poet recited:

It carries her two mudds and the two mudds of Maslamah.

According to Ahmad b. Zuhayr—‘Ali b. Muhammad: When Sulaymān became Caliph he raided the Byzantines, setting up camp in Dābīq146 and sending Maslamah ahead. The Byzantines feared him. Leo147 came up from Armenia148 and said to Maslamah, “Send someone to negotiate with me.” Maslamah sent Ibn Hubayrah, who asked Leo, “What do you consider to be the height of stupidity?” He replied, “The man who fills his stomach with everything that he finds.”149 Ibn Hubayrah said to him, “We are men of religion, and our religion calls for obedience to our leaders.” Leo said, “You are right. In the past, we used to fight one another and get angry for the sake of religion. Today, however, we fight for the sake of conquest and sovereignty. (But, if you withdraw) we will give you one dinār for the head of every [soldier who leaves].” Ibn Hubayrah returned to the Byzantines the next day and said, “Maslamah does not accept your terms. I approached him after he had eaten the morning meal, filled his stomach, and taken a nap. When he woke up, he was groggy150 and did not understand what I said.”

The Byzantine commanders said to Leo, “If you rid us of Maslamah, we will make you emperor.” And they bound themselves to him by the oath. Then Leo came to Maslamah and said, “The people (of Constantinople) know that you will not advance against them in a bold attack and that you intend to prolong the siege as long as you have food. But if you were to burn the food, they would submit.” So Maslamah burned it. Then the enemy became strong, while the Muslims entered into dire straits until they were on the point of death. This was their situation until Sulaymān died.

When Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik set up camp in Dābiq, he swore to God that he would not leave until the army that he had sent against the Byzantines entered Constantinople.

When the Byzantine emperor died, Leo came to (Sulaymān), gave him the news, and assured him that he would deliver the land of the Byzantines (to the Caliph). So the latter sent Maslamah with Leo, and Maslamah set up camp there, collected all the food around Constantinople, and laid siege to the city. But Leo went to the inhabitants of the city, who made him emperor. He then wrote to Maslamah informing him of what had taken place and asking him to allow enough food to enter the city to feed the people; in this way, the people would believe that his word and Maslamah’s word were one and that they were safe from being captured and expelled from their lands; he also asked Maslamah to give them permission to gather food one night. Meanwhile, Leo had prepared ships and men. Maslamah agreed to his request, and the inhabitants of the city carried away large quantities of food from those enclosures in a single night. At this point, Leo began to act in a hostile manner, having deceived Maslamah by means of a trick that would shame even a woman. The Muslim army suffered what no army had suffered previously, to the extent that a soldier was afraid to leave camp by himself. They ate animals, skins, tree roots, leaves—indeed, everything except dirt. Meanwhile, Sulaymān, who was residing in Dābiq, was unable to send reinforcements due to the arrival of winter. This was the situation until Sulaymān died.\textsuperscript{151}

In this year, Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik had the oath of allegiance taken to his son, Ayyūb b. Sulaymān, making him his heir apparent.\textsuperscript{152}

According to 'Umar b. Shabbah—‘Ali b. Muhammad: 'Abd al-
Malik had charged al-Walid and Sulaymān to take the oath of allegiance on behalf of Ibn 'Ātikah, and to Marwān b. 'Abd al-Malik after him.

According to Tāriq b. al-Mubārak: Marwān b. 'Abd al-Malik died during the Caliphate of Sulaymān, on his way out of Mecca, whereupon Sulaymān took the oath of allegiance on behalf of Ayyūb. He withheld [the nomination] from Yazid, waiting for something bad to happen to him and hoping that he would die. But (it was) Ayyūb (who) died while he was heir apparent.

In this year, the city of the Slavs was conquered.

According to Muhammad b. 'Umar: In the year 98/716-717, Burjān attacked Maslamah b. 'Abd al-Malik when he was short of men. Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik dispatched either Mas'adah or 'Amr b. Qays with reinforcements, but the Slavs tricked them. Then God put them to flight after they had slain Sharāḥil (b. 'Abd) b. 'Abdah.

According to what has been claimed by al-Waqīdī, in this year al-Walīd b. Hishām and 'Amr b. Qays carried out a raid in which some soldiers from the army of Antioch were killed. Al-Walid killed people living on the outskirts of Byzantium, taking many of them captive.

[The Conquest of Jurjān and Ṭabaristān]

In this year, Yazīd b. al-Muhallab raided Jurjān and Ṭabaristān.

---

153. Ibn 'Ātikah is Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik, whose mother was 'Atikah bt. Yazid b. Mu'āwiyyah b. Abī Sufyān.
154. The city of the Slavs was a city immediately beyond the Byzantine border. See EP, s.v. Slavs.
155. Burjān is the name of the most important Bulghār state and its inhabitants. See EP, s.v. Bulghār.
156. Sharāḥil is Abū 'Āmir al-Sha'bi. The words within parentheses (b. 'Abd) are added by the Cairo ed.
159. Ṭabaristān is a Persian province north of Mount Alburz, called "the land of Ṭabar" because of the thick forests that cover the country. See El, s.v. Ṭabaristān; Le Strange, Lands, 368-76.
According to Hishām b. Muḥammad—Abū Mikhnaf: Yazid b. al-Muhallab reached Khurāsān, where he remained for three or four months; then he advanced toward Dihistān and Jurjān, sending his son, Makhlad, to serve (as deputy governor) over Khurāsān. When he reached Dihistān, which was inhabited by a tribe of Turks, he established himself there and besieged its inhabitants. With him were the armies of al-Ḵūfah, al-Ḡarbah, and Syria, together with the leading men from the armies of Khurāsān and al-Rayy. He had one hundred thousand soldiers, not including clients, slave soldiers, and irregular volunteers. The Muslims attacked the enemy, quickly putting them to flight and causing them to return to their fortress. Later, they would emerge from time to time and fight with intensity.

Jahm and Jamāl, the two sons of Zahr, had a favored position with Yazid, who honored them. Muḥammad b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Abi Sabrah al-Juʿfi was an eloquent and courageous man, except for the fact that he used to corrupt himself with drink. However, it was not his custom to visit Yazid and his household frequently. Perhaps the good influence they had on the two sons of Zahr, Jahm and Jamāl, kept him away. Now, when the herald would cry out, “O ye horsemen of God, mount up and rejoice at the good news,” Muḥammad b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Abi Sabrah would be the first horseman from among the troops to hasten to the brunt of battle. One day, the call went out to the soldiers, and Ibn Abi Sabrah preceded all the others. He was standing on a mound when ʿUthmān b. al-Mufaḍdal passed by him and said, “O Ibn Abi Sabrah, I have never been able to beat you to the muster.” He replied, “What good is that to me, when you prefer the boys of the Madhhij and ignore the worth of the elderly men of experience and prowess?” He said, “Had you wanted what we have, we would not have withheld from you what you deserve.”

Our source continued: The troops went out and fought with

160. A rich agricultural region located to the north of the lower Atrek. Its capital, Akhūr, was a four-day journey to the north of Jurjān, on the road to Khwārazm. See El², s.v. Dihistān; Le Strange, Lands, 379–80.
161. The capital of al-Jibāl; its ruins can be seen five miles south-southeast of modern Tehran. See Yāqūt, Muʿjam, III, 116–22; El, s.v. Raiy; Le Strange, Lands, 214–17.
162. Text: wa-l-mutafawwīn. On these unpaid and/or irregular volunteers, see Crone, Slaves, 53.
intensity. Muhammad b. Abi Sabrah attacked a Turk, whom the other soldiers had avoided. They exchanged blows, and the Turk’s sword became fixed in Ibn Abi Sabrah’s helmet. But Ibn Abi Sabrah struck him dead. Then he advanced, bloody sword in hand, with the Turk’s sword stuck in his helmet, and the soldiers witnessed the finest spectacle that they had ever seen on the part of a horseman. When Yazid saw the glitter of the two swords, the helmet, and the armor, he asked, “Who is that?” They answered, “Ibn Abi Sabrah.” He said, “How excellent a father who gave birth to such a son! What a man he would be, were it not for the fact that he drinks to excess!”

Subsequently, Yazid went out one day, seeking a place from which he might attack the enemy. Suddenly, a band of Turks attacked him from out of nowhere. With him at the time were the leading soldiers and their horsemen. He had approximately four hundred men, while the enemy had approximately four thousand. After fighting the Turks for a while, Yazid’s men said to him, “O Commander, leave and we will fight for you.” But he refused. Yazid himself engaged in the fighting on that day, like one of his soldiers. Ibn Abi Sabrah, the two sons of Zahr, al-Ḥajjaj b. Jāriyah al-Khath’ami, and his most distinguished followers fought valiantly. Finally, when they wanted to leave, Yazid put al-Ḥajjaj b. Jāriyah in charge of the rear guard; he fought those who were behind him until the others reached water, for they were thirsty. They drank, and the enemy moved away without gaining anything from them.

Sufyan b. Sa‘fwan al-Khath’ami recited:

Were it not for Ibn Jāriyah, the white-faced one,
you would have been given a bitter cup to drink.
He protected you with his horsemen and his horses until you reached water, unafflicted.

Then Yazid persisted in the siege, stationing the troops on every side of the city, thereby cutting off its supplies. When the Turks tired and were unable to fight the Muslims, for the 163. Text: lillāhi abī hu, which means, to God alone belongs the power to create the likes of this man from whom has proceeded this wonderful action. See Lane, Lexicon, pt. 1, p. 11.

164. Probably the city of Dihistañ.
The Events of the Year 98

seige and trial weighed heavily on them, Šül, the dihqān165 of Dihistān, sent to Yazid, saying, “I will make peace with you on the condition that you provide safe-conduct for me, for the members of my household, and for my animals, in which case, I will deliver the city to you, together with its contents and its inhabitants.” Yazīd made peace with Šül, who submitted to him; he carried out the agreement. He entered the city and seized the animals, treasures, and numberless captives, and put to the sword fourteen thousand defenseless Turks. He wrote about this to Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik.

Then he set out, making his way to Jurjān. Now, it had been customary for the Jurjānis to pay the army of al-Kūfah one hundred thousand, two hundred thousand, and sometimes even three hundred thousand (dirhams) in return for peace. These were the terms upon which they would make peace with them. When Yazīd came to them, they presented themselves to him with the peace treaty, for they regarded him with awe, and they offered him more than they were accustomed to paying. He appointed a man from the Azd by the name of Asad b. 'Abdallāh as their governor.

Yazīd then entered the territory of the ispahbadh in Ṭabaristān, accompanied by laborers who cut down trees and smoothed the roads. Finally, they reached him, and Yazīd set up camp, besieging the ispahbadh and occupying his land. The ispahbadh sued Yazīd for peace, offering him more than it was his custom to pay. But Yazīd refused, hoping to conquer the land by force. One day, he sent out his brother, Abū 'Uyaynah, leading the armies of al-Kūfah and al-Baṣrah; he climbed into the mountains making his way toward the ispahbadh. Meanwhile, the ispahbadh had sent to Daylam, summoning additional military forces. The two armies met in battle, and the Muslims prevailed over them for a while, putting them to flight. When the chief of al-Daylam166 came forward, challenging the Muslims, Ibn Abī Sabrah went out to engage him in combat and he slew him. The rout continued until the Muslims reached the opening of the mountain pass. As they began their ascent, the enemy soldiers, who were looking down on them, opened fire on them with arrows and stones. The soldiers fled from the opening of the mountain pass without suffering great losses, for the enemy did not have the strength to pursue them and search for them. But the Muslims began to press on one another, to the point that they began to fall over one another into the ravines, and the men rolled from the top of the mountain until they reached Yazid’s army, oblivious to their misfortune.167

165. The dihqān was the village head and a member of the lesser feudal nobility of Sassanian Persia who, after the Arab conquest, continued to be responsible for local administration and the collection of tribute. In Transoxiana, the local rulers were designated by the term dihqān. See El2, s.v. Dihkān.

166. The chief of Daylam is identified by Kūfī (Futūh, VII, 290) as Sulaymān al-Daylamī.

Yazid held his ground, unperturbed. Meanwhile, the ispahbadh wrote to the army of Jurjan, asking them to attack Yazid’s followers and to cut off his supplies and the roads between him and the Arabs, and promising to compensate them for their efforts. Accordingly, they fell upon the Muslims that Yazid had left behind, slaying those that they could. The survivors assembled and fortified themselves in a secluded spot, where they remained until Yazid rescued them. Yazid continued to press against the ispahbadh in his land until he made peace with him in return for seven hundred thousand dirhams, four hundred thousand in cash,168 two hundred thousand (garments),169 four hundred donkeys loaded with saffron, and four hundred slaves; on the head of each slave, he requested a cloak, and on the cloak a scarf, a silver cup, and a piece of fine white silk170—previously they had sued for peace in exchange for two hundred thousand dirhams. Then Yazid and his followers left, looking as if they had been defeated! Had it not been for the actions of the Jurjanis, he would not have left Tabaristan until he had conquered it by force.

As for sources other than Abu Mikhnaf on the subject of the encounter between Yazid and the Jurjanis: According to Ahmad b. Zuhayr—‘Ali b. Muḥammad—Kulayb b. Khalaf and others: Sa‘īd b. al-‘Āṣ171 made peace with the people of Jurjān.172 Subse-

---

167. Text: sharr, which may also mean “danger.”
169. The text states “two hundred thousand.” Ibn Kathir, Bidayah, IX, 176, adds the word thawb, “garments.”
170. See Baladhuri, Futūḥ (Cairo), II, 414.
172. For further details on the initial conquest of Jurjān, see Baladhuri, Futūḥ (Cairo), II, 411.
quently, however, they refused to pay and violated their treaty.\footnote{173} No Muslim went to Jurjān after Sa‘īd, for they blocked that road. Indeed, no one could travel the Khurāsān road from that direction except in fear and dread of the Jurjānis. This was the road to Khurāsān from Fārs\footnote{174} to Kirmān. The first person to traverse the road from Qūmis\footnote{175} was Qutaybah b. Muslim, when he became governor of Khurāsān. Then Masqalah raided Khurāsān, in the days of Mu‘āwiyyah, leading ten thousand soldiers. But he was slain when his army was in Rūyān,\footnote{176} which is adjacent to Ṭabaristān. They died in one of the wādis of that region when the enemy attacked them in the mountain passes, killing all of them. Therefore, it is called “Masqalah’s Wādi.” Our source said: He is the one referred to in the proverb, “Until Masqalah returns from Ṭabaristān.”\footnote{177}

According to ‘Ali—Kulayb b. Khalaf al-‘Ammī—Ṭufayl b. Mirdās al-‘Ammī and Idris b. Ḥanzalah: Sa‘īd b. al-‘Aṣ concluded a peace treaty with the people of Jurjān. Sometimes they would bring one hundred thousand (dirhams) and say, “This is our settlement.” And sometimes two hundred thousand, and sometimes three hundred thousand. Sometimes they would pay one of these amounts; at other times they would refuse to pay. Then they refused to pay and violated the treaty.\footnote{178} They failed to pay the tribute until Yazid b. al-Muhallab came to them, for no one opposed him when he reached Jurjān. When he made peace with Sul and conquered al-Buhayrah and Dihistān, he concluded a peace treaty with the people of Jurjān on the same terms they had received from Sa‘īd b. al-‘Aṣ.

According to Ahmad—‘Ali—Kulayb b. Khalaf al-‘Ammī—Ṭu-

---

173. The text specifies wa-kafaru, which literally means “and they turned away from Islam.” But since the Jurjānis had not become Muslims upon payment of the poll tax, the word kafaru here should be taken in the sense of naqadū l-‘ahd, “they violated the treaty.” I owe this point to Professor Abbas.

174. A Persian province bounded on the northwest by Khūzistān, on the northeast by Iṣfahān, on the east by Kirmān, and on the west and southwest by the Persian Gulf. See EP, s.v. Fārs; Le Strange, Lands, 248–98.

175. A small province lying to the south of the Alburz chain watershed between al-Rayy and Nishābūr. See EP, s.v. Kumis; Le Strange, Lands, 264–68.

176. Rūyān was an independent district attached to Ṭabaristān. See El, s.v. Rūyān; Yaqūt, Mu‘jam, III, 104–5; Le Strange, Lands, 373–74.

177. See Baladhurī, Futūḥ (Cairo), II, 411–12.

178. See note 173 above.
fayl b. Mirdās and Bishr b. Īsā—Abū Šafwān—ʿAli said (I was told this also by Abū Ḥafṣ al-Azdi—Sulaymān b. Kathir, and others): Šūl the Turk used to camp at Dihistān and at al-Buhayrah, an island in the (Caspian) sea five farsakhs (30 km.) from Dihistān, both of which were part of Jurjān, on the side of Khwārazm. Šūl used to carry out raids against Fayruz b. Qūl, the Marzubān of Jurjān—they were twenty-five farsakhs (150 km.) apart—during which he would kill their noble men and then return to al-Buhayrah and Dihistān. Now, a dispute broke out between Fayruz and one of his paternal cousins, who was called, “the Marzubān,” as a result of which the Marzubān separated himself from Fayruz and settled in al-Bayāsān.180 Fearing that the Turks would carry out raids against him, Fayruz set out for Yazid b. al-Muhallab in Khurāsān. Meanwhile, Šūl seized Jurjān. When Fayruz reached Yazid b. al-Muhallab, the latter asked him, “Why have you come here?” Fayruz replied, “I was afraid of Šūl, so I fled.” Yazid asked him, “Is there any stratagem we might use to fight him?” Fayruz answered, “Yes, there is one thing which, if you attain it, either you will kill him or he will submit.” Yazid asked, “What is it?” Fayruz counseled, “If he leaves Jurjān in order to establish camp in al-Buhayrah, and then you come to him there and lay siege to the island, you will be victorious over him. Therefore, write a letter to the ispahbādh in which you ask him to trick Šūl by having him remain in Jurjān. Pay him something for this and promise him more. He will then send your letter to Šūl, seeking to ingratiate himself with him, because he regards him with great honor. As a result, Šūl will leave Jurjān and set up camp in al-Buhayrah.”

[1324] Yazid b. al-Muhallab therefore wrote to the leader of Ṭabaristasān: “I intend to carry out a raid against Šūl while he is in Jurjān, but I fear that if he learns of my intention he will leave for al-Buhayrah and set up camp there. If he does go there, I will not be able to attack him. Now, he listens to you and considers you to be a faithful adviser. If you were to confine him in Jurjān this year, so that he would not go to al-Buhayrah, I will convey to you fifty thousand mithqāls. So devise some stratagem to keep him in Jurjān, for, if he stays there, he will be mine.” When the ispahbadh saw the letter, he sought to ingratiate himself with Šūl by sending the letter to him. When the letter arrived, Šūl ordered the troops to depart for al-Buḥayrah; he loaded foodstuffs so that he would be secure there.

180. A village in Marw al-Shāhījān. See Yaqūt, Mu’jam, I, 528.

Yazid learned that Šūl had traveled from Jurjān to al-Buḥayrah; he determined to leave for Jurjān. He set out, leading thirty thousand men, accompanied by Fayruz b. Qul. He appointed Makhlad b. Yazid as his deputy in Khurāsān, designated his son, Muʿāwiyyah b. Yazīd, as his deputy in Samarqand, Kiss, Nasaf, and Bukhārā, and appointed Hāṭim b. Qabiṣah b. al-Muhallab as his deputy in Ṭukhāristān. He marched to Jurjān which, at that time, was not a city, but rather a locality surrounded by mountains, with gates and rugged roads—when a man stood at one of the gates, no one could advance against him. Yazid entered Jurjān without encountering any resistance and he captured great wealth. The Marzubān fled, and Yazid set out, with his soldiers, for al-Buḥayrah, where he laid siege to Šūl.

When he attacked them, he recited:

The sword flashed and his hands trembled;
By him, himself, souls were saved.

Our source continued: He besieged them. Šūl would come out toward him during the day and fight, and then return to his fortress. With Yazid were the armies of al-Kūfah and al- Баşrah.

Then he mentioned the story of Jahm b. Zaḥr and his brother, and Muḥammad b. Abī Sabrah, more or less as was reported by

---

181. A unit of weight for gold, taken over by ‘Abd al-Malik from the Roman solidus of the Constantinian system, equivalent to 65.6 grains or 4.25 grams. “Mithqāl” is used as a synonym for “dīnār.” See EI, s.v. Mithkāl.
182. A town near Samarqand. See Yaqūt, Muʿjam, IV, 460.
184. Ṭukhāristān was the region situated between Balkh and Badakhshān. See EP, s.v. Badakhshān.
185. See Balādhuri Futūḥ (Cairo, II, 413): “Surrounded by a wall of baked bricks that reached to the sea.” See also Kūfī, Futūḥ, VII, 286; FHA, 21; ibn al-Athīr, Kāmil, V, 29.
Hishām, except that he said, regarding the Turk’s striking of Ibn Abī Sabrah: “The Turk’s sword became caught in Ibn Abī Sabrah’s shield.”

Then, returning to our original chain of transmission, our source said: They, that is, the Turks, were under siege for six months, during which time they would emerge, fight, and then return to their fortress. Finally, they were reduced to drinking ground water, whereupon they were afflicted with a disease known as al-su’ūd and began to die. At this point Sul sued for peace, but Yazid b. al-Muhallab said, “No, not unless he submits to my rule.” Sul refused and sent a message to Yazid, saying: “I will make peace with you on behalf of myself, my belongings, and three hundred members of my household and companions, on the condition that you provide safe passage for me. If you accept these terms, you may occupy al-Buhayrah.” Yazid agreed to these terms, and Sul emerged with his belongings and three hundred of his favorites and joined Yazid. Then Yazid put to the sword fourteen thousand defenseless Turks, letting the others go without killing any of them. The soldiers said to Yazid, “Give us our stipends,” so he summoned Idrīs b. Ḥanizational al-‘Ammī, saying, “O Ibn Ḥanizational, give us an account of al-Buhayrah’s wealth so that we may pay the troops.” Idris entered al-Buhayrah, but he was unable to estimate the value of its wealth. He said to Yazid, “I am unable to assess its wealth because it is stored in receptacles. We will have to count the sacks, make a sign indicating the contents of each sack, and say to the soldiers, ‘Enter and take.’ In this way, when someone takes something, we will announce what he took, that is, wheat, barley, rice, sesame, and honey.” At that, Yazid said, “That is a good idea.” They determined the 186. See text above, II/1319, where it is stated that the sword became stuck in Ibn Abī Sabrah’s helmet.

187. Wellhausen argues that the siege could not have lasted six months. See Arab Kingdom, 447, n. 1.

188. A disease that attacks the liver as a result of drinking brackish water. See Lane, Lexicon, pt. 4, p. 1462.
number of sacks, put a sign on each sack indicating its contents, and said to the soldiers, "Take." As each man left al-Buḥayrah, having taken clothing, food, or whatever could be carried away, the number of sacks he had taken would be recorded in his name. They took considerable amounts.

According to 'Ali—Abū Bakr al-Hudhali: Shahr b. Ḥawshab, who was in charge of Yazīd b. al-Muhallab's coffers, was accused of stealing a leather purse. Yazīd asked him about it, and Shahr brought it to him. Then Yazīd summoned the person who had made the accusation, rebuked him, and said to Shahr, "It's yours." Shahr said, "I have no need for it."

The following was recited by al-Quṭāmi al-Kalbi—some say by Sinān b. Mukammal al-Numayrī:

Shahr sold his religion for a purse of leather.

Now who will trust the Qur'ān reciters after you, O Shahr?

You received for it something insignificant and sold it to Ibn Jūnabūdh. Verily, this is perfidy.

Murrah al-Nakha'i recited, with regard to Shahr:

O Ibn al-Muhallab, what did you have in mind for a man who were it not for you, would have been an upright reciter (of the Qur'ān)?

According to 'Ali—Abū Muḥammad al-Thaqafi: Yazīd b. al-Muhallab acquired a crown in Jurjān in which there was a precious stone and he asked, "Do you know anyone who would not desire this crown?" They replied, "No." Yazīd then summoned Muḥammad b. Wāsī al-Azdi and said, "Take this crown—it's yours." He said, "I have no need for it." Yazīd said, "I insist." So Muḥammad took it and left. Then Yazīd ordered someone to 190. Ibn Kathir, Ḍiyāyah, IX, 176, adds: "With one hundred dinārs in it."

192. Text: al-qurā’, which could also mean "officials." See note 408 below.
193. Text: mā aradta ilā-mri’in.
observe what he would do with the crown. Muhammad met a beggar and gave it to him. Yazid’s agent took the beggar, brought him to Yazid, and told him what had happened. Yazid took the crown and gave the beggar a large sum of money in return.

According to ‘Ali: Every time that Qutaybah made a new conquest, Sulaymān b. ‘Abd al-Malik would say to Yazid b. al-Muhallab, ‘Don’t you see what God is accomplishing through Qutaybah?’ Yazid would reply, ‘What about Jurjān, which separated the soldiers from the ‘Main Road,’ and thus disrupted things in Qūmis and Abrashahr?’ Yazid would also say, ‘These conquests are nothing. Jurjān is what counts.’ Thus, when Yazid b. al-Muhallab became governor, his sole ambition was to conquer Jurjān. It is said: Yazid b. al-Muhallab had one hundred and twenty thousand fighting men, including sixty thousand soldiers from the Syrian army.

According to ‘Ali—the one who mentioned the Jurjān report—on their authority, supplemented by ‘Ali b. Mujāhid—Khalid b. Subayḥ: After Yazid b. al-Muhallab made peace with Sūl, he had a great desire to conquer Ṭabaristān. Having resolved to travel there, he designated ‘Abdallāh b. al-Mu’ammar al-Yashkuri as his governor in al-Bayāsān and Dihistān, leaving him with four thousand men. Then he advanced toward the nearest parts of Jurjān, adjacent to Ṭabaristān. He designated Asad b. ‘Amr—or b. ‘Abdallāh b. al-Rub’ah—as his governor in Andarastān, which is adjacent to Ṭabaristān, leaving him with four thousand men. Then Yazid entered the lands of the ispahbadh, who sent to him, suing for peace and asking him to leave Ṭabaristān. But Yazid refused, for he hoped to conquer it by force. He then sent his brother, Abū ‘Uyaynah, in one direction, his son, Khalid b. Yazid, in another, and Abū al-Jahm al-Kalbi in a third, saying, “When you join forces, Abū ‘Uyaynah is to be in command of the troops.” Yazid said to Abū ‘Uyaynah, as the latter set out leading the armies of 195. Abrashahr, the ancient name of Nishapūr, was the capital of one of the four quarters of the province of Khurāsān. See EP, s.v. Abrashahr; also EI, s.v. Tus; Le Strange, Lands, 383.

---

196. A village in Khwārazm, about one day’s march south of Jurjāniyyah. See Le Strange, Lands, 453.
The Events of the Year 98

al-Kūfah and al-Baṣrah, accompanied by Huraym b. Abī Ṭahmah, “Take counsel with Huraym, for he is a faithful adviser.” Yazid remained in the camp.

The ispahbadh sought support from the people of Jilān and al-Daylam, and they came to him. The two opposing armies met near the foot of a mountain. The polytheists were put to rout, and the Muslims pursued them until they reached the mouth of the mountain pass. But when the Muslims entered the passageway, the polytheists climbed up into the mountains, pursued by the Muslims. The enemy then shot at them with arrows and stones, putting Abū ‘Uyaynah and the Muslims to flight. They pressed on one another, falling over one another from the mountain, not stopping until they reached Yazid’s troops. At this point, the enemy gave up the chase.

The ispahbadh, fearing the Muslims, wrote to the Marzubān, the paternal cousin of Fayrūz b. Qūl, who was at the farthest reaches of Jurjān, adjacent to al-Bayāsān, saying, “We have slain Yazid [sic] and his followers, so kill the Arabs in al-Bayāsān.” The Marzubān and his men joined the army of Bayāsān, having reached a consensus to kill the Muslims, who were (carelessly asleep) in their dwellings. They were all slain during a single night. ‘Abdallāh b. al-Mu‘ammār was slain, together with four thousand Muslims—not one of them escaped; fifty of the Banū ‘Amm were slain, among them al-Ḥusayn b. ‘Abd al-Ḥāmān and Ismā‘il b. ʿIbrāhīm b. Shamās. The Marzubān wrote to the ispahbadh that he should take control of the mountain passes and the roads.

When Yazid learned that ‘Abdallāh b. al-Mu‘ammār and his followers had been slain, his men were distressed and frightened. Yazid, therefore, sought the assistance of Ḥayyān al-Nabatī, saying, “Do not let the misunderstanding between us prevent you from serving the Muslims.” We have heard the news from Jurjān, where that one (that is, the ispahbadh) has seized control of 198. Text: Yazid wa-ashabahu. Balādhurī, Futūḥ (Cairo), II, 413, has asḥāb Yazid, “Yazid’s followers,” which makes better sense.

199. The misunderstanding will be explained below.
the roads, so make peace." Hayyān agreed and approached the ispahbadh, saying, "I am one of you, even if religion has separated us. I will give you good advice, for you are dearer to me than Yazid. He has summoned reinforcements, and his soldiers are nearby. Since the Jurjānis eliminated only one segment of his army, I am concerned that you will not be able to withstand him. So relieve yourself from him and make peace with him, for, if you make peace with him, he will turn his weapons against the Jurjānis, who deceived and killed many Muslims." The ispahbadh made peace with Yazid, agreeing to pay seven hundred thousand dirhams.

According to 'Ali b. Mujāhid: The terms were five hundred thousand dirhams, four hundred loads of saffron or their value in ready money, and four hundred slaves—each slave wearing a cloak and a scarf and carrying a silver vessel, a piece of silk cloth and a suit of clothes.

Then Hayyān returned to Yazid b. al-Muhallab, saying, "Send some people to carry away the terms of the agreement that I have concluded with them." He asked, "Who is paying, we or they?" He replied, "They are." Yazid, who would have been happy to give them whatever they asked for and return to Jurjān, sent some people to carry away the terms of the agreement that Hayyān had worked out with them, and he set out for Jurjān. Previously, Yazid had penalized Hayyān two hundred thousand dirhams. This was why he feared that Hayyān would not provide him with good counsel.

The circumstances of his having penalized Hayyān in this manner were related to me as follows by 'Ali b. Mujāhid—Khālid b. Subayh: I was serving as a tutor to Hayyān's son, when he summoned me, saying, "Write a letter to Makhlad b. Yazid." Makhlad, at that particular time, was in Balkh, while Yazid was in Marw. I took up a scroll of papyrus, and he said, "Write: 'From Hayyān, the client of Maṣqalah, to Makhlad b. Yazid.'" But Mu-

200. It is reported that Hayyān was originally from al-Daylam. See text above, II/1291.
201. Text: ṣayyara haddahu 'alā ahl Jurjān. Kufi, Futūh, VII, 292, has yakūnu ḥarbuhu wa-sātwatuhu 'alayhim, "His war and attack will be against them."
203. See text above, II/1321, for another version of the agreement.
qāṭil b. Hayyān gestured to me, indicating, "Don't write that." Then he approached his father and said, "O my father! You write to Makhlad and yet mention yourself first!" He said, "Yes, my son, and if he does not like it he will suffer the same fate as Qutaybah." Then he said to me, "Write." So I wrote. He had Makhlad bring the letter to his father. This was why Yazid made Hayyān pay two hundred thousand dirhams.

In this year, Yazid reconquered Jurjān after the Jurjānis had treacherously waylaid his army and broken the agreement.204

According to ‘Ali—the group that transmitted to him the report about Jurjān and Ṭabaristān: Then, when Yazid made peace with the army of Ṭabaristān, he headed for Jurjān. He swore to God that if he triumphed over them, he would neither loosen his hold on them nor raise the sword from them until he mixed blood into the wheat, made bread out of the mixture, and ate the bread.

When the Marzubān learned that Yazid had made peace with the ispahbadh and was making his way toward Jurjān, he gathered his supporters and went to al-Wajāh,205 where he fortified himself. Whoever controls al-Wajāh needs no reserves of food or water. Meanwhile, Yazid arrived and surrounded the place, while the Marzubān and his men fortified themselves inside. Al-Wajāh was surrounded by dense thickets, so that only one way in and out was known. Yazid maintained the siege for seven months206 without making any progress against them, for he did not know of any way to approach them except from the one side. The Marzubān and his men would emerge during the day, fight, and then return to their fortress. Now, while matters were like this, it happened that a man—one of the Persians from Khurāsān who was with Yazid—went out to hunt, accompanied by members of his Shākirīyyah corps.207

According to Hishām b. Muhammad—Abū Mikhnaf: One of his soldiers, from the tribe of Tayyi’, went out to hunt and spotted an antelope climbing in the mountains. He followed it, saying to his companions, "Stay where you are." He climbed the mountain following the tracks. Suddenly he came upon their army, where-

---

204. See Ibn Khayyāt, Ta’rikh, I, 320–21; Ya’qūbī, Ta’rikh, III, 41; FHA, 23.
205. Apparently, the name of a fortress in the mountainous region of Jurjān.
206. Kufi, Futūh, VII, 293–94, specifies "four months."
207. On this term, see Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 496.
upon he turned back seeking his companions. Afraid that he would not be able to find his way back, he began to tear up his garment and tie markers on the trees. Finally, he reached his companions and then returned to the army camp. It is said: the man who was hunting was al-Hayyāj b. 'Abd al-Rahmān al-Azdi, a resident of Tūs208 and an avid hunter. When he returned to the army camp, he approached 'Āmir b. Aynām al-Wāshījī, who was the commander of Yazid's guard. But they would not let him enter, so he cried out, "I have important information."

According to Hishām—Abū Mikhnaf: Finally, he brought the matter to the attention of the two sons of Zahr b. Qays, who took him and brought him to Yazid. Al-Hayyāj gave him the report, and Yazid gave him an assurance, confirmed by al-Juhaniyyah, a slave girl of his who had borne him a child,209 to pay him an agreed-upon sum.

According to 'Alī b. Muḥammad—his companions: Yazid called for al-Hayyāj and asked, "What information do you have?" He replied, "Do you want to enter Wajāh without a fight?" He said, "Certainly." He said, "What will you give me?" He said, "Name your price." He said, "Four thousand." He said, "You are entitled to blood payment (diyah)."210 He said, "Give me four thousand now and whatever you give me later will be a gratuity." Whereupon Yazid gave an order to pay him four thousand dirhams. Then he called out to his soldiers, fourteen hundred of whom responded. Al-Hayyāj said, "Due to the density of the thickets, the path will not bear such a large group." Yazid therefore chose three hundred and sent them off under the command of Jahm b. Zahr.

Some sources said: He put his son, Khalid b. Yazid, in command of them, saying, "You may be deprived of life, but you cannot be deprived of death.211 God help you if I see you in my presence after having been put to flight." He sent Jahm b. Zahr along with him. Yazid asked the man who called out to the sol-

208. A district in Khurāsān containing the towns of Nawqān and Tābarān. See EI, s.v. Tūs; Le Strange, Lands, 388–90.
209. See text above II/1313, sub anno 97.
210. A specified amount of money [either one thousand dinārs or twelve thousand dirhams], or goods, due in cases of homicide or other injuries unjustly committed upon the person of another. See EI2, s.v. Diya.
211. Text: in ghillība 'alā-l-ḥayāt fa-lā tughlibānna 'alā-l-mawt, that is, "Do not let fear of death dampen your courage."
The Events of the Year 98

soldiers, "When will you reach them?" He replied, "Tomorrow at noon, in the interval between the two prayers." He said, "Go, with the blessing of God, and I will endeavor to engage them tomorrow at the time of the noon prayer." They set out. The next day, shortly before the time of the afternoon prayer, Yazid ordered his men to set fire to some wood that he had collected and put into piles during the course of the siege. They set fire to the piles of wood, and before the sun had declined from the meridian, his army was surrounded by mountain-like flames of fire. When the enemy saw the fire, they were frightened by the magnitude of what they saw and they came out toward them. When the sun had declined from the meridian, Yazid ordered his men to pray, and they combined the two prayers. Then they marched off toward them, and the two armies met in battle.

Meanwhile, the other contingent marched for the remainder of that day and the morrow, and attacked the Turk's army shortly before the time of the afternoon prayer. The Jurjānis, engaged in combat with Yazid on the one side, and, believing themselves to be secure on the other, did not sense anything until the moment when they heard the takbīr behind them, whereupon they all headed for their fortress, with the Muslims in hot pursuit. They surrendered, submitting to Yazid's rule. He captured their women and children and slew their soldiers, crucifying them at a distance of two farsākhs (12 km.) to the left and right of the road. He also drove twelve thousand of them to al-Andarhaz, the Wādi of Jurjān, and said, "Whoever seeks blood revenge from them may slay whomever he wishes." A single Muslim slew as many as four or five men in the wādi, turning the wādi's water into blood. There was a millstone by the wādi, and Yazid was able to mix blood into the ground wheat, thereby releasing himself from his oath. He ground wheat, made bread, ate, and built the city of Jurjān.

Some sources said: Yazid killed forty thousand of the people of

---

212. The noon and midday prayers.
213. The takbīr is the formula "God is great." See EI, s.v. Takbir.
216. See text above, II/1330.
Jurjān. There had been no city there previously. Then he returned to Khurāsān, leaving Jahm b. Zahr al-Ju'fi as his governor of Jurjān.

According to Hishām b. Muḥammad–Abū Mikhnaf: Yazid summoned Jahm b. Zahr and sent four hundred men with him. They began with the place to which they had been directed, having been instructed by Yazid as follows: "When you reach the city, wait until daybreak, then pronounce the takbir and proceed toward the city gate. You will find me there, having already rushed all of the men to the gate." Accordingly, when Ibn Zahr entered the city he waited until the hour at which Yazid had ordered him to attack and then ordered his men to advance. They slew every single one of the guards that they encountered and pronounced the takbir. The inhabitants of the city were filled with terror the likes of which they had never experienced previously. All of a sudden they saw the Muslims with them in their city pronouncing the takbir, which astonished them. God cast terror in their hearts until they didn’t know in which direction they were turning. However, one group of men—not a large one—advanced toward Jahm b. Zahr, and the two sides fought for a while. Jahm’s hand was broken, but he and his men held their positions; it was not long before they killed most of them. When Yazid b. al-Muhallab heard the takbir, he drove the soldiers toward the gate, where they found that the guards had been drawn away by Jahm b. Zahr; thus, there was no one there to keep Yazid from entering, or to put up serious resistance. He stormed the gate and entered the fortress at that very hour. He brought out the soldiers that were inside and, after erecting palm trunks at a distance of two farsakhs (12 km.) to the right and left of the road, he crucified them over the course of four farsakhs (24 km.). Yazid then captured the inhabitants of the fortress and took possession of its contents.

According to 'Ali—his authorities: Yazid wrote to Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik: "Now then, God has made a great conquest on behalf of the Commander of the Faithful and He has performed the greatest favor for the Muslims. Praise be to our Lord for His blessings and His kindness, for He has granted us victory, during the caliphate of the Commander of the Faithful, over Jurjān and Tabaristān—something which had escaped Sābūr Dhū al-Ak-
the events of the year 98

Likewise, al-Farūq 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb, 'Uthmān b. 'Affān, and the Caliphs of God who succeeded them were unable to achieve this, until God made this conquest on behalf of the Commander of the Faithful, in order to bestow His honor upon him, and in order to increase the blessing He has bestowed upon him. Now, I have in my possession the fifth that God has bestowed upon the Muslims, after every man took the share of the booty to which he was entitled, which amounts to six million (dīnārs), and I shall bring this to the Commander of the Faithful, if God wills."

But his scribe, al-Mughirah b. Abi Qurrah, a client of the Banū Sadūs, said to him, "Do not mention a specific amount of money, for you will be caught between two possible responses: Either he will consider it to be a large sum of money, in which case he will order you to bring it to him; or he will express disdain for it and confer it on you, in which case you will be obligated to make a gift. In the latter case, he will find whatever he receives from you to be insignificant. It seems to me that you would risk all that you have named without impressing him. The amount you name will remain forever in their records as a debit against you. Thus, if someone assumes authority after him, he will claim it from you; furthermore, if the person who assumes authority does not favor you, he will not accept even twice that sum from you. Therefore, do not send your letter; rather, write about your victory and ask him for permission to appear before him so that you can speak to him directly about whatever you desire. But shorten your account, for it is more appropriate to abbreviate the account.

217. Shāpūr II b. Hurmizd (A.D. 310–79) was called Dhū al-Aktāf because he had the shoulders of Arab prisoners dislocated or pierced. See EL, s.v. Shāpūr.

218. Khusraw I b. Kawād (r. 531–79), a Sāsānian King of Persia, known in Persian sources as Anūshirvān [of the immortal soul]. See EL, s.v. Sasanians.

220. The khums is the share of God and the Prophet that is to be spent on the community as a whole. See EI, s.v. Bayt al-Mil.

221. The translation follows FHA, 24, where dinārs are specifically mentioned. Kūfī, Futrūh, VII, 297, mentions "twenty million dirhams."

222. Text: sakhat nafsuhu laka bihi. Ibn al-Athīr, Kāmil, V, 35, has samabat nafsuhu laka bihi, "He will treat you generously regarding it."

223. Text: istaqallahu; the Cairo ed. has istaqbalahu: "He will accept it."
you wish to make than to exaggerate it." But Yazid refused and he sent the letter.

Some said: The letter mentioned the figure of four million dirhams.\(^{224}\)

Abū Ja'far (al-Ṭabarī) said: In this year, Ayyūb b. Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik died.\(^{225}\) According to 'Alī b. Muḥammad—'Ali b. Muḥājīd—a shaykh from al-Rayy who was a contemporary of Yazid: After finishing with Jurjān, Yazīd b. al-Muhallab went to al-Rayy, where he learned of Ayyūb b. Sulaymān's death while he was walking in the vineyard of Abū Šālīḥ, near the gate of al-Rayy. A poet recited some rajaz verse\(^{226}\) in his presence:

Although Ayyūb has died,

Dāwūd has taken his place,

Restoring whatever power had been lost.\(^{227}\)

In this year, the city of the Slavs was conquered.\(^{228}\)

In this year, Dāwūd b. Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik raided the land of the Byzantines and conquered “Ḥiṣn al-Mar’āh,” which is near Malatyah.\(^{229}\)

In this year, the pilgrimage was led by 'Abd al-'Azīz b. 'Abdallāh b. Khālid b. Asid who, at that time, was governor of Mecca. I was informed of this by Aḥmad b. Thābit—on the authority of the one he mentioned—Iṣḥāq b. 'Isā—Abū Ma'shar.

The governors of the garrison towns in this year were the same as in the year 97/715-716, as noted earlier, except that Yazid b. al-Muhallab's governor over al-BAšrāh in this year was, according to some, Sufyān b. 'Abdallāh al-Kindī.

\(^{224}\) Balādhuri, Futūḥ (Cairo), II, 414, mentions the figure of twenty-five million dirhams.

\(^{225}\) Ayyūb was the heir apparent. See text above, II/1317.

\(^{226}\) Rajaz verse is the simplest and, according to the tradition, the oldest meter of Arabic poetry. See EI\(^2\), s.v. 'Arūd.

\(^{227}\) See Kūfi, Futūḥ, VII, 307.

\(^{228}\) See text above, II/1317, note 154. See also Ibn Khayyāt, Ta'rikh, I, 321; Ya'qūbī, Ta'rikh, III, 44; FHA, 25.

\(^{229}\) See text above, II/1306, sub anno 97, note 126.

\(^{229}\) An old city, not far from the upper Euphrates, that served as headquarters for the summer campaign against Byzantium. See EI, s.v. Malatya, Yāqūt, Mu'jam, V, 192-93.
Among the events taking place that year was the death of Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik.232 I was told on the authority of Hishām—Abū Mikhnafl, that he died in Dābiq, in the province of Qinnasrin,233 on Friday the nineteenth of Ṣafar (October 1, 717). Thus, his term of office was two years and eight months, less five days.

It is said that he died on the tenth of Ṣafar (September 22, 717).234 According to some, his caliphate lasted two years and seven months, while others maintain that it lasted two years, eight months, and five days.

According to al-Ḥasan b. Ḥammād—Ṭalḥah Abū Muḥam-Sulayman b. 'Abd al-Malik served as caliph after al-Walid for three years. 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz prayed over his body.

According to Ahmad b. Thabit—his source—Ishaq b. 'Isa—Abū Ma'shar: Sulayman b. 'Abd al-Malik died on Friday the nineteenth of Ṣafar in the year 99 (October 1, 717). His caliphate lasted three years, less four months.

Aspects of His Character

According to 'Ali b. Muhammad: The people used to say, "Sulaymān is the key to goodness." When al-Ḥajjāj left them and Sulaymān assumed power he freed the captives, released the prisoners, treated the people well, and designated 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz as his successor.

Ibn Bīḍ recited:

Your grandfather and your father both assumed the caliphate, amidst the anger of the malcontent, or the obedient one. Your grandfather and your father, then your brother became the third, and on your forehead is the light of the kingship of the fourth.

According to 'Ali—al-Mufadḍal b. al-Muhallab: I went in to see Sulaymān at Dābiq on Friday, and he called for some robes. He put them on, but he did not like them, so he called for others—for green Sūṣī robes that had been sent by Yazid b. al-Muhallab. After he put them on and arranged his turban, he asked, "O Ibn al-Muhallab, do you like them?" I replied, "Yes." He uncovered his forearms and said, "I am a king in the prime of his manhood." Then he prayed the Friday prayers for the last time. He wrote his last will and testament and summoned Ibn Abī Nu'aym, the bearer of the seal, who sealed it.

According to 'Ali—some of the scholars: One day Sulaymān

235. Sulaymān was called "the key to goodness" (mithāb-l-khayr) because his reign opened and closed with acts of goodness. See FHA, 17.

236. This is a conjectural translation. The text gives min bayna sukhtatī sūkhit aw ṭā'ī.

237. Sūs was a town in Khūzistān famous for its weaving and silk. See El, s.v. al-Sūs; Le Strange, Lands, 240. put on a green robe and a green turban and he looked in the mirror and said, "I am a king in the prime of his manhood." He lived only one week after that.

According to 'Ali—Suḥaym b. Ḥafṣ: A slave girl belonging to Sulaymān looked at him one day, and he asked, "How do you like what you see?" She recited:

You are the best object of delight—if only you would last.

But man does not possess immortality.

I do not know of any blemish in you that other people have, except that you will pass away.

He then unwound his turban.

According to 'Ali: Sulaymān's qāḍī was Sulaymān b. Ḥabīb al-Muḥāribī. Ibn Abī Ḥayyān used to tell stories in his presence.

According to Abū 'Ubaydah—Ru'bah b. al-'Ajjāj: Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik performed the pilgrimage, accompanied by the poets, myself included. When he was in Medina, on the way back, the troops came to meet him with approximately four hundred Byzantine prisoners. Sulaymān sat down and the person sitting closest to him was 'Abdallāh b. al-Ḥasan b. al-Ḥasan b. 'Ali b. Abī Tālib. The Byzantine commander was brought forward, and Sulaymān said, "O 'Abdallāh, strike off his neck." 'Abdallāh stood up, but no one gave him a sword; eventually, one of the guards handed him his sword, and 'Abdallāh smote the commander, severing his head and cutting off his forearm and part of the chains. Sulaymān exclaimed, "By God, it is not because of the excellence of the sword that the stroke was exquisite, but because of his ancestry." Sulaymān continued to hand over the rest of the prisoners to the commanders and men for execution. Eventually, he gave one of the prisoners to Jarīr, into whose hand the Banū 'Abs thrust a sword sheathed in a white scabbard, whereupon he smote him and severed his head. Then one of the prisoners was given to al-Farazdaq, but he could not find a sword. Into his hand they thrust a crooked,239 blunt sword that would not cut, and he smote the prisoner with it several times, but nothing happened. Sulaymān and the people laughed, and the Banū 'Abs, Sulaymān's

---

238. Text: fa-nafada, "to shake off." This should be amended to read fa-naqada. I owe this point to Professor Abbas.

239. Text: matin, "strong, solid"; read muthniyyan, following the Cairo ed.
maternal uncles, delighted in al-Farazdaq's misfortune. He threw down the sword and began to speak, making excuses to Sulaymān and recalling how the sword of Warqā' glanced off the head of Khālid:

If there was ever an unreliable sword, or a fate which delayed the soul of someone whose destiny has yet to arrive.

Then it is the sword of the Banū `Abs; they struck with it, through the hand of Warqā', and it glanced off Khālid's head.

Such are the swords of India; sometimes their edges have no effect.

Although sometimes they cut necks.240

Warqā' is Warqā' b. Zuhayr b. Jadhimah al-`Absi, who struck Khālid b. Ja'far b. Kilāb. Khālid was on top of Warqā's father, Zuhayr, smiting him with the sword and felling him. Warqā' b. Zuhayr approached and struck Khālid, but the blow had no effect, and so the former recited:

When I saw Zuhayr under Khālid's chest,
   I approached, running, like a mother bereft of her child, hurrying.
May my right hand be paralyzed if I smite Khālid, and double armor protects him from me.241

Al-Farazdaq recited at the same session:

Are the people surprised that I made the best of them laugh, God's Caliph, by whom rain is invoked?

The sword did not fail due to cowardice or bewilderment in the presence of the Imām; rather, his day was delayed by fate.

Had I struck his neck with the intent to kill,242 his body would have fallen separated from his head.

(It would have rolled away from him when I smote him,

241. See Aghānī (Beirut), XI, 84.
242. The text is 'alā 'Amrin. This should be amended to read 'amdan. I owe this point to Professor Abbas.
like a stone that rolls off a slippery spot). The soul is not hastened before its preordained time of death by a two-handed grip, or by the sharp sword itself.

Jarîr recited in connection with this:

With the sword of Abû Raghwān, the sword of Mujâshî', you struck. But you did not strike with the sword of Ibn Zâlim.

You struck with it in the presence of the Imām, and your hands trembled. So they said, "That is an inexperienced sword, not a cutting one."

According to 'Abdallâh b. Aḥmad—his father—Sulaymān—'Abdallâh b. Muḥammad b. 'Uyaynāh—Abû Bakr b. 'Abd al-'Azîz b. al-Ḍâhhâk b. Qays: Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik attended a funeral in Dābiq at which the corpse was buried in a field. He picked up some of the soil and said, "How good and how fine is this soil!" Before a week or so had passed, he was buried next to that grave.

243. This verse, omitted by Ţabari, is supplied from Diwān al-Farazdaq, I, 291, where the text has idhan tadahda 'anhu ḥina aḍribuhu kamlā tadahdā 'ani-l-zuhlūfati al-ḥajarū.

244. See Diwān al-Farazdaq, I, 291.

245. See Nakā'id Jarîr wa-l-Farazdaq, I, 413, ll. 15–16.
The Caliphate of ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Azīz
The Events of the Year

99 (cont’d)

(AUGUST 14, 717–AUGUST 2, 718)246

In this year ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Aziz b. Marwân b. al-Ḥakam was appointed as Caliph.247

The Reason Why Sulaymān Appointed ‘Umar as Caliph248

According to al-Ḥārith—Ibn Sa’d—Muḥammad b. ‘Umar—al-Haytham b. Wāqîd: ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Aziz was appointed as Caliph at Dābiq, on Friday, the tenth of Ṣafar, in the year 99 (September 22, 717).

According to Muḥammad b. ‘Umar—Dāwūd b. Khālid b. [1341]
Dinār—Suhayl b. Abī Suhayl—Rajā’ b. Ḥaywah:249 On Friday, Sulaymān b. ‘Abd al-Malik put on green robes made of silk and looked in the mirror, saying, “By God, I am a king in the prime of his manhood.” Then he went out to lead the people in the Friday prayers. Upon his return, however, he fell ill. When his condition deteriorated, he entrusted the succession, in a document he wrote himself, to one of his sons, a youth who had not yet attained puberty.250 I said to him, “What are you doing, O Commander of the Faithful? One of the things that preserves a caliph in his grave is the appointment of an upright man251 to serve as his successor over the Muslims.” Sulaymān replied, “I will ask God for guidance, and I will consider the matter, for I have not made up my mind yet.”

Sulaymān tarried a day or two and then tore up the document. He called for me and asked, “What is your opinion of Dawīd b. Sulaymān?” I replied, “He is away in Constantinople, and you do not know whether he is dead or alive.” He asked me, “Whom would you propose, then?” I replied, “The decision is yours, O Commander of the Faithful.” I wanted to see whom he would mention. He asked, “What is your opinion of ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Aziz?” I replied, “By God, I know him to be a worthy, excellent man and a sincere Muslim.” He said, “By God, he is exactly as you describe him.” Then he said, “But if, by God, I appoint him and do not appoint anyone else, there will surely be civil strife, for (the Banū ‘Abd al-Malik) will never allow him to rule over them, unless one of them is put next in succession.” Now Yazid b. ‘Abd al-Malik was away at that moment on the pilgrimage. Sulaymān said, “Therefore, I will appoint Yazid b. ‘Abd al-Malik to be Caliph after him; that should placate them, and they will accept him.” I said, “The decision is yours.”
Sulaymān, Commander of the Faithful, to 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz. I have appointed you to be my successor to the caliphate, and you are to be succeeded by Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik. Therefore, hearken to him, O people, and obey; fear God and avoid dissension, lest enemies take advantage of you." He sealed the document and sent a message to Ka'b b. Ḥāmid al-'Absi, his Commander of the Guard, saying, "Order the members of my household to assemble." Ka'b ordered them to assemble, and they did so. After they had gathered, Sulaymān said to Raja', "Take this document of mine to them, tell them that it is my document, and order them to swear the oath of allegiance to whomever I have appointed." Raja' did as he was told. When Raja' said that to them they asked, "May we go in to greet the Commander of the Faithful?" He replied, "Yes." They entered, and Sulaymān said to them, "This document"—to which he was directing their attention and at which they were looking, in the hand of Raja' b. Ḥaywah—"is my succession covenant, so listen, obey, and swear allegiance to the person I have named in this document." Accordingly they swore allegiance to him, individually. Then the document was taken out, still sealed, in the hand of Raja' b. Ḥaywah.252

Raja' said: After they had dispersed, 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz approached me and said, "I fear that Sulaymān has involved me in this matter. I beseech you by God, and by your deference to and your affection for me, let me know if this is the case so that I might ask to be excused now, before a situation develops in which I am unable to accomplish what I can accomplish at the present moment." Raja' answered, "No, by God, I will not tell you a single word." Thus, 'Umar went away, furious.

Raja' continued: Hishām b. 'Abd al-Malik met me and said, "O Raja', you have a long-standing feeling of deference to and affection for me, and I owe you a debt of gratitude, so tell me about this affair. If I have been appointed, I will be aware of it; and if someone else has been appointed, I can speak up, for a man like me cannot be sold short. Tell me, and I swear to you in the name of God that I will never mention anything about this." Raja' said: But I refused, saying, "By God, I will not tell you a single word of 252. The validity of this document, for which there were apparently no witnesses, was subsequently disputed by the jurists. See Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 197.

---

what has been confided to me." Hishâm departed in despair, striking one hand over the other and saying, "In favor of whom have I been passed over? Will the caliphate pass out of the hands of the sons of 'Abd al-Malik?"

Rajâ' said: I went in to see Sulaymân and found him dying. When the agony of death came over him, I set about turning him toward the qiblah, but whenever he recovered his senses he would say, "The time for that has not yet arrived, Rajâ'." I did this twice, and on the third attempt he said, "Do it now, Rajâ', if you wish to do something. I bear witness that there is no God but God and I bear witness that Muḥammad is His servant and His messenger."253 I turned him toward the qiblah and he died. After shutting his eyes, I covered him with a green velvet coverlet and locked the door. His wife sent a messenger to me, asking, "How is he?" I replied, "He is sleeping and has covered himself." The messenger looked at him, wrapped in the coverlet. He returned and told her this report, which she accepted, imagining that he was asleep.

Rajâ' said: I stationed a trustworthy man in front of the door and ordered him not to leave until I returned and not to let anyone go in to the Caliph. I left and sent a message to Ka'b b. Ḥāmid al-'Absi, who gathered the household of the Commander of the Faithful. When they had assembled in the mosque of Dābiq, I said, "Swear the oath of allegiance." They replied, "We have already sworn once. Why should we swear again?" I said, "This is the Commander of the Faithful's command, so swear allegiance, in accordance with his command, to the person named in this sealed document." They then swore the oath of allegiance a second time, individually.

Rajâ' continued: When they had sworn the oath of allegiance after Sulaymân's death, and I realized that I had put the matter on a solid footing, I said, "Rise out of reverence for your master, for he has just died." They recited, "Surely we belong to God, and to him we return."254 Then I read the document to them. When I reached the point at which 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz is mentioned, Hishâm b. 'Abd al-Malik cried out, "We will never swear allegiance to him." I said, "By God, then I will cut off your head. Rise and swear allegiance." Reluctantly, he stood up.

253. That is, he died with credo of the faith (shahādah) on his lips.
254. Qur'ān 2:156.

Rajā' said: While he was reciting innā lillāhī on account of what had happened to him, I took 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz by the arms and seated him on the pulpit. At the same time Hishām was reciting innā lillāhī on account of what had escaped him. When Hishām finally reached 'Umar, the latter exclaimed, "'Surely we belong to God, and to Him we return,' when what I dislike has come to me,"—because he did not want to become Caliph. Meanwhile, [Hishām] was reciting, "'Surely we belong to God, and to him we return,' when I have been passed over."

Sulaymān's body was washed and wrapped in a shroud, and 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz prayed over him. When the burial ceremony had been completed, the caliphal stable of animals was brought out to 'Umar: There were slow-paced horses, swift riding horses, and mules, each animal with its own groom. 'Umar asked, "What is this?" They replied, "The Caliph's stable." He said, "My own mount will suffice." Then 'Umar mounted it and, after those animals had been sent away, he departed.256 Someone asked, "Will you occupy the Caliph's residence?" 'Umar replied, "The family of Abū Ayyūb (that is, Sulaymān) is still living there, and my own pavilion will suffice until they leave." He therefore remained in his own living quarters until they eventually vacated the Caliph's residence.

Rajā' said: On the evening of the same day, 'Umar said, "'O Rajā', summon a scribe for me." I called one. Now up to this point I was pleased with everything that he had done, that is, the actions he had taken with regard to the riding animals and Sulaymān's residence. I said to myself, "How is he going to handle writing? Will he make drafts or what?" When the scribe had taken his seat, 'Umar dictated a single letter, directly from his mouth to the hand of the scribe, without any preliminary drafts. He dictated in the finest, most eloquent and most succinct manner possible. He then decreed that copies of the letter should be sent to every land.

255. Qur'ān 2:156.
256. Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 183, adds: "Then he rode to Damascus with the soldiers."
Meanwhile, 'Abd al-Aziz b. al-Walid, who was away at the time, learned of the death of Sulayman b. 'Abd al-Malik. Since he was unaware of the fact that the people had sworn allegiance to 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz and that Sulayman had designated 'Umar as his successor, he unfurled the banner and summoned the people to acknowledge him as the next Caliph. Subsequently, when he learned that the people had sworn allegiance to 'Umar in accordance with Sulayman's succession covenant, he went to see 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz. 'Umar said to him, "I have been informed that you made your supporters swear the oath of allegiance to you and that you wanted to enter Damascus." 'Abd al-'Aziz replied, "Both of those things are true, but I only acted in that manner because I was told that the Caliph, Sulayman, had not appointed a successor; I feared that the holdings of the treasury would be plundered." 'Umar said, "If the oath of allegiance had been sworn to you and if you had taken power, I would not have opposed you; indeed, I would have remained in my house." 'Abd al-'Aziz said, "There is no one beside you that I would like to have seen assume power." He then swore the oath of allegiance to 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz. People invoked God's blessings upon Sulayman because he appointed 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz as his successor and passed over his own children.258

[1346] In this year, 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz sent a message to Maslamah, who was in Byzantine territory, ordering him to return together with the Muslims who were accompanying him.259 'Umar sent him swift and excellent horses and considerable quantities of food; he urged the people to render assistance to Maslamah and his men. According to some sources, the number of purebred horses that he sent to him was five hundred.

In this year, the Turks attacked Adharbayjan,260 killing a group of Muslims and causing serious damage.261 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz dispatched Ibn Ḥātim b. al-Nu'mān al-Bāḥili,262 who killed those 257. Text: bā'yātā; read bāyi'ta, following the Cairo ed.

258. See note 250 above.
260. Adharbayjan was a Persian province. See EP, s.v. Ādharbaydjān; Le Strange, Lands, 159–71.
261. See Ibn Khayyat, Ta'rikh, I, 326.
262. Some sources give his name as 'Abd al-'Aziz b. Ḥātim, others as Ḥātim b.
Turks; only a small number managed to escape. He brought fifty of them as prisoners to 'Umar in Khunāṣirah.263

In this year, the pilgrimage was led by Abū Bakr Muḥammad b. 'Amr b. Ḥazm, who was 'Umar’s governor in Medina.

'Umar’s governor in Mecca in this year was 'Abd al-ʿAzīz b. Abdallāh b. Khālid b. Asid. Al-Kūfah and its surrounding territory were governed by 'Abd al-Ḥamīd b. 'Abd al-RAḥmān, while al-BAṣrāh and its surrounding territory were governed by 'Adī b. Arṭāt. Khurāsān was governed by al-Jarrāḥ b. 'Adī b. Arṭāt. The judiciary of al-BAṣrāh was in the charge of Iyās b. Muʿāwiyah b. Qurrah al-Muzani. As mentioned earlier, 'Adī had initially appointed al-Ḥasan b. Abī al-Ḥasan,265 but when the latter complained, he asked Iyās b. Muʿāwiyah to take charge of the judiciary. The judiciary of al-Kūfah in this year was reportedly in the charge of 'Amr al-Shaʾbī.

Al-Wāqidi had reported: Al-Shaʾbī was in charge of al-Kūfah’s judiciary in the days of 'Umar b. 'Abd al-ʿAzīz, serving on behalf of 'Abd al-Ḥamīd b. 'Abd al-RAḥmān, while al-Ḥasan b. Abī al-Ḥasan al-BAṣrī was in charge of al-BAṣrāh’s judiciary, serving on behalf of 'Adī b. Arṭāt. But when al-Ḥasan asked 'Adī to excuse him from that office, the latter complied with his request and appointed Iyās in his place.

263. See Ibn Khayyat, Taʾrīkh, I, 326, Ibn Kathīr, Bidāyāh, IX, 185. Khunāṣirah is a settlement located sixty km. to the southeast of Aleppo and one hundred km. to the northeast of Ḥamāh where 'Umar had a stronghold constructed in which he resided frequently. See EP, s.v. Khunāṣirah.

Among those events was the revolt of the Khārijites, who rebelled against 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azîz in Iraq.

The Revolt of the Khārijites

According to Muḥammad b. 'Umar—Ibn Abī al-Zinād: The Ḥarūriyyah in Iraq rose up in rebellion, and 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz wrote to 'Abd al-Ḥamīd b. 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Zayd b. al-Khaṭṭāb, his governor in Iraq, ordering him to summon the rebels to act in accordance with the Book of God and the sunnah of His Prophet. When they ignored his summons, 'Abd al-Ḥamīd sent an army against them, but it was defeated by the Harūris. Upon being informed of this, 'Umar sent Maslamah b. 'Abd al-Malik against them leading a regiment of the Syrian army that he had equipped in al-Raqqah.271 'Umar wrote to 'Abd al-Ḥamid as follows: "Having learned of the defeat of your army—the evil army—I have dispatched Maslamah b. 'Abd al-Malik, who is to be given free access to the rebels." Maslamah engaged them in battle, leading the Syrian army, and it was not long before God granted him victory over them.

Abū 'Ubaydah Ma'mar b. al-Muthannā mentioned that the person who headed the revolt against 'Abd al-Ḥamid b. 'Abd al-Raḥmān, in Iraq, during the caliphate of 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz, was Shawdhab—his real name was Bistām—one of the Banū Yashkur. His rebellion was based in Jūkhā,272 where he commanded eighty horsemen,273 most of them from the tribe of Rabī'ah. 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz wrote to 'Abd al-Ḥamid, saying, "Do not engage them in combat unless they shed blood or cause corruption in the earth. But if they do act in that manner, intervene so as to prevent that. Choose a man who is strong and endowed with good judgment and send him against them with a detachment of soldiers, having charged him as I have commanded you." As a result, 'Abd al-Ḥamid put Muhammad b. Jarir b. 'Abdallāh al-Bajali in command of two thousand Kūfans, charging him as he had been charged by 'Umar.

Meanwhile, 'Umar wrote to Bistām, summoning him and asking him about his revolt. Bistām received 'Umar's letter after Muhammad b. Jarir had arrived and deployed his troops opposite him, without, however, engaging him in combat or provoking him. 'Umar's letter to Bistām contained the following statement: "I have been informed that you have rebelled in anger for the sake of God and His Prophet. But you have no better right to that than I do. Come to me, then, so that I may discuss the matter with you:

---

272. A district in the Sawād of Baghdad, between Khāniqin and Khūzistān. See Yāqūt, Mu‘jam, II, 179; Morony, Iraq, 137ff. According to Mas‘ūdī, the revolt took place in al-Jazirah. See Murūj (Beirut), II, 190.

273. It is also reported that Bistām commanded either three hundred or six hundred horsemen. See FHA, 47.

274. Text: aw. Ibn al-Athīr, Kāmil, V, 45, has wa, "and."
if we are in the right, you will join (the community) in what the people [believe]; but if you are in the right, we will reconsider our position." 275 As a result, Bīstām did not engage the Caliph's forces in combat and he wrote to 'Umar, saying, "You have been fair, and I am therefore sending you two men who will confer and debate with you."

According to Abū 'Ubaydah: One of the two men who were sent by Shawdhab to 'Umar was Māmzūj, a client of the Banū Shaybān, 276 and the other was a descendant of the Banū Yashkur.

Our source continued: It is reported that Bīstām sent a group of men that included the aforementioned two, but that 'Umar sent a message to the group calling upon them to choose two men. They chose these two, who then went in to visit 'Umar. They engaged him in debate, saying, "Tell us about Yazid. Why do you acknowledge him to be your successor as Caliph?" 277 'Umar replied, "Someone else appointed him as my successor." They said, "Consider the following case: Suppose you were administering some property that belonged to someone else and you then entrusted it to someone who was unreliable. Do you think that you would have conveyed the trust to its owner?" 278

'Umar said, "Give me three days," and the two men left. The Banū Marwān 279 were afraid that 'Umar would confiscate the properties that they owned and administered and that he would renounce Yazid; therefore, they had someone poison his drink. He died less than three days after the two men left him. 280

---

275. A longer version of 'Umar's letter is cited in FHA, 41-42.
276. Some sources give the client's name as 'Āṣim and indicate that he was an Ethiopian. See Mas'ūdī, Murūj (Beirut), III, 190; FHA, 43.
277. For longer versions of this debate, see Ibn Qutaybah, Ta'rikh, I, 99-100; Mas'ūdī, Murūj (Beirut), III, 191-92; FHA, 43-46; Ibn al-Athir, Kāmil, V, 45-47.
278. Text: a-turā̈ka kunta addayta al-amānah ilā man itamanaka. Ibn al-Athir, Kāmil, V, 48, has a-tarā'hu addā-l-haqq alladhi yalzamuhu billāhi aw tarā'hu qad salama, "Do you think that he fulfilled the obligation incumbent upon him [in the eyes] of God, or do you consider him blameless?" See also FHA, 46.
279. The Banū Marwān were the descendants of Marwān b. al-Ḥakam, the fourth Umayyad Caliph and father of the Marwānid branch of the Umayyad family. See EI, s.v. Marwān b. al-Ḥakam.
280. It is also reported that one of the two messengers acknowledged the validity of 'Umar's arguments and stayed with the Caliph, who awarded him a stipend, and that 'Umar died not three, but fifteen days later. See Ibn Qutaybah, Ta'rikh, I, 100; Mas'ūdī, Murūj (Beirut), III, 192-93; FHA, 47; and Ibn al-Athir, Kāmil, V, 48. The claim that 'Umar was poisoned by the Marwānids was discounted by Well-
The Events of the Year 100

In this year, 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz sent al-Walid b. Hishâm al-Mu'aytî and 'Amr b. Qays al-Kindî, from the army of Himṣ, in order to serve as 'Umar's governor over that province.

In this year, Yazid b. al-Muhallab was transported from Iraq to 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz.

The Capture of Yazid b. al-Muhallab

The biographers disagree on this subject. According to Hishâm b. Muḥammad—Abū Mikhnaf: When Yazid b. al-Muhallab made his way to Wāsît and then embarked on ships with the intention of sailing to al-Baṣrah, 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz sent 'Adi b. Arṭât to al-Baṣrah to serve as governor. 'Adi dispatched Mūsâ b. al-Wajih al-Ḥimyari, who arrested Yazid after overtaking him at the Baṣrah bridge of the Ma'qil Canal. 'Adi sent Yazid to 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz in the custody of Mūsâ b. al-Wajih. When the prisoner arrived, 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz summoned him. Now 'Umar, who detested Yazid and his household, used to say, "They are tyrants, and I do not approve of people like them." Yazid b. al-Muhallab, likewise, hated 'Umar and used to say, "I suspect that he is a hypocrite." But when 'Umar came to power Yazid learned that 'Umar was anything but a hypocrite. 'Umar summoned Yazid and asked him about the moneys that the latter had mentioned in his letter to Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik. Yazid replied, "You know what my position was in the eyes of Sulaymān. I wrote to Sulaymān only in order to augment his reputation among the people; I knew that Sulaymān would not hold me accountable for something that I said (and I did not fear that he would treat me) in an 281. Himṣ is a town (Homṣ) in Syria on the eastern bank of the Orontes; it is situated midway along the route joining Aleppo and Damascus. See EP, s.v. Himṣ.

---

The Caliphate of 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz unpleasant manner." 'Umar said to him, "I see no alternative in your case but to put you in prison. Fear God and hand over whatever is in your possession, for it belongs to the Muslims and it is not in my power to abandon it." The Caliph returned Yazid to his place of confinement. Then he sent a message to al-Jarrāh b. 'Abdallāh al-Ḥakami, ordering him to leave for Khurāsān (where he would serve as governor).

Meanwhile, Makhlad b. Yazid advanced from Khurāsān, distributing stipends to the soldiers and bestowing large sums of money on the inhabitants of every district through which he passed. Then he left Khurāsān and made his way to 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz. When he went in to see the Caliph, he praised God and said, "O Commander of the Faithful, God has favored the Muslim community by putting you in charge. But we (that is, the Muhallabids) have been smitten by you. Let us not be reduced to the utmost destitution on account of your taking power. On what grounds have you imprisoned this old man? I will take responsibility for whatever he owes. Make an agreement with me for (part of) the amount that you are asking from him." 'Umar said, "No, not unless you take responsibility for the entire amount that we seek from him." He replied, "O Commander of the Faithful, if you have clear proof, produce it, but if you do not have clear proof, accept what Yazid says as the truth. If you do not believe him, ask him to swear the oath; if he refuses to swear, work out a compromise with him." 'Umar said to him, "I have no alternative but to hold him accountable for the entire sum of money." When Makhlad left, 'Umar said, "I prefer him to his father." But Makhlad died shortly thereafter. Thus, when Yazid refused to give any of the money to 'Umar, the latter had him dressed in a wool garment and placed on a camel. Then he said, "Take him to Dahlak." When Yazid had been taken out and paraded in front of the people, he was led to a house of detention, and 'Umar told his son, "You are now a prisoner and a subject to me," and gave him over to a guard to look after him.

---

288. Abū 'Uqbah al-Jarrāh b. 'Abdallāh al-Ḥakami, an Umayyad general, called "hero of Islam" and "cavalier of the Syrians." See EP, s.v. al-Djarrah b. 'Abdallāh; Crone, Slaves, 132, no. 16.

289. A group of islands off the west coast of the Red Sea, opposite Eritrea; Dahlak al-Kabir, one of the largest islands, was used as a place of exile or prison by the Umayyad caliphs. See EP, s.v. Dahlak.
of the soldiers, he exclaimed, "Have I no kinsmen? Why should I be transported to Dahlak? Only sinners, disquieters, and thieves are sent to Dahlak. Praise be to God! Have I no kinsmen?"

Then Salāmah b. Nu‘aym al-Khwālānî approached 'Umar and said, "O Commander of the Faithful, send Yazid back to his place of confinement, for I fear that if you send him away, his tribe will attempt to recover him. Indeed, I know that his tribe is angry on his behalf." ‘Umar therefore sent him back to prison. And it happened that Yazid was still in prison when he learned that ‘Umar had taken ill.

As for sources other than Abū Mikhnaf: ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Azīz wrote to ‘Adī b. Arṭāt, ordering him to arrest Yazid b. al-Muhallāb291 and deliver him to the soldiers at ‘Ayn al-Tamr. ‘Adī b. Arṭāt sent Yazid with Wāki‘ b. Ḥassān b. Abī Sūd al-Tamīmī, bound in chains, on a boat. When he had been brought as far as the Abān Canal,292 some men from the tribe of Azd confronted Wāki‘ in an effort to seize Yazid. But Wāki‘ leapt down, drew his sword and cut the ship’s cable. Then he took Yazid b. al-Muhallāb’s sword and swore a weighty oath293 to the effect that he would strike off Yazid’s head unless they dispersed. Yazid b. al-Muhallāb called out to them, informing them of Wāki‘s oath, whereupon they dispersed. Wāki‘ proceeded until he had delivered Yazid to the soldiers at ‘Ayn al-Tamr, and he then returned to ‘Adī b. Arṭāt. The soldiers who were at ‘Ayn al-Tamr took Yazid b. al-Muhallāb to ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Azīz, who threw him into prison.

Abū Ja‘far (al-Ṭabari) said: In this year, ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Azīz dismissed al-Jarrāḥ b. ‘Abdallāh from Khurāsān, replacing him with ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Nu‘aym al-Qushayrī.294 Al-Jarrāḥ’s term of office in Khurāsān had been one year and five months; he had gone there in the year 99/717–718 and left toward the end of the month of Ramadān in the year 100 (March 27–April 25, 719).

The Dismissal of al-Jarrāḥ b. `Abdallāh

The reason for this, according to 'Ali b. Muḥammad—Kulayb b. Khalaf—Idris b. Ḥanẓalah and al-Mufaqdāl—his grandfather and 'Ali b. Mujāhid—Khālid b. 'Abd al-'Azīz: When Yazīd b. al-Muhallab left Jurjān, he designated Jahm b. Zahr as governor of that province.295 But when Yazīd's fate took a turn for the worse,296 the governor of Iraq sent someone from Iraq to serve as governor of Jurjān. The [new] governor approached Jurjān from the direction of Iraq, but Jahm b. Zahr seized him, together with a group of men who had accompanied him, and bound them in shackles. Then Jahm set out, leading fifty of the Yaman, headed for al-Jarrāḥ in Khurāsān, whereupon the people of Jurjān released their governor from prison. Al-Jarrāḥ said to Jahm, "Were it not for the fact that you are my paternal cousin, I would not have allowed you to do that." To which Jahm replied, "Were it not for the fact that you are my paternal cousin, I would not have come to you" (Jahm was related to al-Jarrāḥ by ties of marriage, since their respective wives were the daughters of Ḥuṣayn b. al-Ḥārith; the two men were also paternal cousins, because their respective fathers, al-Ḥakam and Ju’fī, were the sons of Sa’d). Al-Jarrāḥ said to Jahm, "You have defied your Imām and risen up in rebellion. Carry out a raid; perhaps, if you are successful, you can improve your position with your Caliph." He therefore sent him toward Khuttal.297 Jahm left and, upon approaching them, he traveled in disguise together with three men, having left in command of his army his paternal cousin, al-Qāsim b. Ḥabīb, who was also the husband of his daughter, Umm al-Aswad. When he finally made his way into the presence of the leader of the Khuttal, he said to him, "Come with me so that we can speak privately." They met privately. Jahm claimed to be the son of so-and-so, whereupon the 295. See text above, II/1333, sub anno 98.

296. Text: fa-lammdā kāna min amri Yazīd mā kāna. The reference is to Yazīd's imprisonment.
leader of the Khuttal came down from his throne and gave him whatever he needed. They say: The Khuttal are the clients of al-Nu'man; thus, he acquired booty.

Al-Jarrāḥ then wrote to 'Umar. He also sent a delegation that included two Arab tribesmen and a client of the Banū Ḥabīb. The latter went by the patronymic of Abū al-Ṣaydāʾ and his name was Šāliḥ b. Ṭarīf; he was virtuous in matters of religion. According to one source: The client was Saʿīd, the brother of Khālid or Yazid al-Nahwī. The two Arab tribesmen spoke, while the other delegate remained in his seat. 'Umar asked him, "Are you not a member of the delegation?" He replied, "Yes, I am." He said, "Then what prevents you from speaking?" He said, "O Commander of the Faithful, there are twenty thousand clients who make raids without receiving any stipend or allowance, and there are a similar number of 'protected people' ('ahl al-dhimmah)'298 who have converted to Islam, yet are still made to pay the tribute. Our governor is a partisan of the Arabs, a rough man who stands on the pulpit and proclaims, 'I come to you out of solicitude. Today, I am a partisan of the Arabs and, by God, one man from my tribe is dearer to me than a hundred men who are not.' His harshness reached the point that the sleeve of his coat of mail is equal in value to one-half of another's coat of mail.299 He is, after all,300 one of the swords of al-Ḥajjāj, who committed acts of tyranny and oppression." 'Umar said, "Let them send messengers like you."

'Umar then wrote to al-Jarrāḥ, saying, "Whoever prays with you in the direction of the qiblah is to be relieved of the poll tax." As a result, many people hastened to accept Islam. Someone said to al-Jarrāḥ, "The people are rushing to accept Islam in order to avoid the poll tax, so test them by requiring that they submit to circumcision." Al-Jarrāḥ conveyed this suggestion to 'Umar, who wrote back, "God sent Muḥammad in order to summon people to Islam, not to circumcise them."

'Umar said, "Find me a trustworthy man who can advise me about the situation in Khurāsān." Someone replied, "You have

---

298. That is, non-Muslim adherents of a revealed religion. See EP, s.v. Dhimma.
299. Text: yablaghu nisf dir'ihi. The translation is conjectural.
300. Text: ba'du. The reading yu'addu, "He is considered," is also possible.

Al-Jarrāḥ then addressed the soldiers, saying, “O army of Khurāsān, I came to you wearing the clothes that are on my back and riding my own horse. I have not taken any of your wealth, except for the ornamentation on my sword.” Indeed, he had nothing except a horse and a she-mule whose faces had turned white. He set out in the month of Ramadān (March 27–April 25), leaving ’Abd al-Raḥmān b. Nu‘aym as his deputy. When he arrived, ’Umar asked him, “When did you set out?” He replied, “In the month of Ramadān.” He said, “Whoever described you as being coarse spoke the truth! Why didn’t you wait there until you had broken the fast before setting out?” Al-Jarrāḥ used to proclaim, “By God, I am a partisan of the Arabs who travels during Ramadān in order to promote the cause of the Arabs.”

Now, when al-Jarrāḥ first arrived in Khurāsān, he had written to ’Umar, saying, “I have reached Khurāsān and found people who have become arrogantly seditious, leaping and bounding in mischief. There is nothing that they would like better than to revolt so that they might withhold what they owe God. Nothing will check them except the sword and whip, but I would not want to undertake that without your permission.” ’Umar wrote back, saying, “O son of the mother of al-Jarrāḥ, you desire sedition even more than they do! Do not apply the whip to a believer or to one of the tributaries unless he deserves it and do not inflict punishment, for you will arrive in the presence of one who ‘knows the treachery of the eyes and what the breasts conceal’ and you will recite a Book ‘that leaves nothing behind, small or great, but it has numbered it.’”

When al-Jarrāḥ was preparing to leave Khurāsān on his way to ’Umar b. ’Abd al-‘Azīz, he took twenty thousand dirhams—according to some sources: ten thousand—from the Public Treasury and said, “I am borrowing this until I turn it over to the

---

301. Text: ‘aṣabī ‘aqabī yuridu min al-‘aṣabiyyah. The translation is conjectural.
Caliph.” He reached ‘Umar, who asked him, “When did you set out?” He replied, “At the end of the month of Ramadān. I owe money, so settle the debt.” He said, “Had you set out after you broke the fast, I would have settled it for you.” As a result, his kinsmen paid for him out of their stipends.

The reason for this, according to what was reported to me: al-Jarrāḥ b. `Abdallāh was dismissed from his position in Khurāsān at the time that the complaint was lodged against him. He was summoned by `Umar b. `Abd al-`Aziz and went to see him, as I have already reported above.305

According to ‘Ali b. Muḥammad—Khārijah b. Muṣ’ab al-Ḍabbī and `Abdallāh b. al-Mubārak, and others: Then, when `Umar wanted to appoint someone as governor of Khurāsān, he said, “Find me a trustworthy man who might advise me about conditions in Khurāsān.” Someone said to him, “Abū Mijlaz Lāḥiq b. Ḥumayd.” The Caliph wrote a letter summoning Abū Mijlaz, who came to him. Abū Mijlaz, who was not the type of man who stands out in a crowd, went in to see `Umar, together with a group of people. But `Umar did not recognize him, and he left with the other men. Later, when `Umar asked about him, he was told, “He entered with the group of men and then left.” `Umar then summoned him and said, “O Abū Mijlaz, I did not recognize you.” He responded, “When you failed to recognize me, why didn’t you ask about my identity?” He said, “Tell me about `Abd al-Rahmān b. `Abdallāh.” He said, “He rewards those who are competent but treats enemies with hostility. He is a military commander who acts independently and will advance boldly if he finds supporters.” `Umar asked, “What about `Abd al-Rahmān b. Nu`aym?” He replied, “Soft, flexible, forgiving, and gentle.”`306 `Umar said, “I prefer the one who is

304. Text: wa-`alayya dayn fa-qādihi. See Balādhuri, Futūḥ (Cairo), III, 524, where the text is kāna `alayhi dayn fa-qādāhu, which Murgotten (Origins, II, 197) translates as “`Umar owed him a debt, but paid him.”

305. See text above, II/1352–55.

306. Text: ta’attā lahu. Ibn al-Athīr, Kāmil, V, 52, has wa-l-ta’anni. The two verbs are synonymous.
forgiving and gentle." He therefore put 'Abd al-Rahmân b. Nu‘aym in charge of prayer and military affairs and 'Abd al-Rahmân al-Qushayrî—he was one of the Banû al-A‘war b. Qushayr—in charge of the fiscal administration. 'Umar wrote to the army of Khurasân as follows: "I have put 'Abd al-Rahmân b. Nu‘aym in charge of your military affairs and 'Abd al-Rahmân b. 'Abdallâh in charge of your fiscal administration, not on the basis of any personal knowledge of them and without choosing them from a list of candidates, but rather on the basis of what was reported to me about them. If you are satisfied with them, praise God; but if they act in a manner that displeases you, seek help from God, for there is no power and no strength, save in God."

According to 'Alî—Abû al-Sari al-Azdi—Ibrâhîm al-Sa‘îgh: 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azîz wrote to 'Abd al-Rahmân b. Nu‘aym as follows: "Now then, if you are a sincere servant of God with regard to His servants, no reproach that anyone might utter will have any effect on you in the cause of God, for God is closer to you than the people are, and what you owe Him is greater than what you owe them. Do not commission anything in the affairs of the Muslims except that which is known to be good for them and that which promotes their welfare, and be faithful to what is entrusted to you. Beware lest you incline toward anything but what is right, for the unseen is not concealed from God. And do not walk along a path that leads away from God, for there is no refuge from God, except with Him."

According to 'Alî—Muḥammad al-Bâhîlî—Abû Nuhayk b. Ziyâd and others: 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azîz sent the document of appointment in which he put 'Abd al-Rahmân b. Nu‘aym in charge of military affairs in Khurasân and Sîsistân in the hands of 'Abdallâh b. Ṣâkhra al-Qurashi. 'Abd al-Rahmân b. Nu‘aym was still in office in Khurasân when 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azîz died, and he remained in office until Yazîd b. al-Muhallab was slain, at which time Maslamâh appointed Sa‘îd b. 'Abd al-'Azîz b. al-Hârîth b. al-Ḥakam. Thus, 'Abd al-Rahmân’s term of office was more than a year and a half; he took office in the month of Ramadân in

---

308. The border district between Persia and Afghanistan. See EP, s.v. Sîstân; Le Strange, Lands, 334–51.
309. That is, Sa‘îd Khudhâynah. See text below, II/1417ff., sub anno 102.
the year 100 (March 27–April 25, 719) and was dismissed in the year 102/720–721, after Yazid b. al-Muhallab was slain.

According to 'Ali: 'Abd al-Raḥmān b. Nu'aym's term of office in Khurāsān was sixteen months.

The Beginning of the Da'wah

Abū Ja'far (al-Ṭabarī) said: In this year, that is to say, the year 100/718–719, Muḥammad b. 'Ali b. 'Abbās sent Maysarah from the land of the Sharāṭī to Iraq, and he sent Muḥammad b. Khunays, Abū 'Ikrimah al-Sarrāj, that is, Abū Muḥammad al-Ṣādiq, and Ḥayyān al-ʿAṭṭār, the maternal uncle of Ibrāhīm b. Salamah, to Khurāsān. At that time, Khurāsān was governed by al-Jarrāḥ b. 'Abdallah al-Hakami, on behalf of 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz. Muḥammad b. 'Ali ordered them to recruit for him and for the members of his household. They met with certain people and then departed, bearing letters to Muḥammad b. 'Ali from those people who had responded to their call. They conveyed these letters to Maysarah, who sent them on to Muḥammad b. 'Ali. Abū Muḥammad al-Ṣādiq chose for Muḥammad b. 'Ali the following twelve chiefs: Sulaymān b. Kathīr al-Khuzaʿī; Lāhīz b. Qurayy al-Tamīmī; Qaḥtabah b. Shabīb al-Ṭāʾī; Mūsā b. Kaʿb al-Tamīmī; Khālid b. Ibrāhīm Abū Dāwūd, one of the Banū 'Amr b. Shaybān b. Dhuḥl; al-Qāsim b. Mūjāshi' al-Tamīmī; 'Imrān b. Ismāʿīl Abū al-Najīm, a client of the family of Abū Muʿayṭ; Mālik b. al-Haytham al-Khuzaʿī; Ṭalḥah b. Zurayq al-313. The subject here could be either Muḥammad or Maysarah. See text below, II/1434, sub anno 102, where Maysarah is specifically mentioned. But according to Dinawari, Akhbār, 334, and Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 189, it was Muḥammad b. 'Ali who sent Abū 'Ikrimah and Ḥayyān al-ʿAṭṭār to Khurāsān. See Akhbār al-dawlah for the fullest version of this report.

---

Khuzā’i; ‘Amr b. A’yan Abū Ḥamzah, a client of the Khuzā’ah; Shibli b. Ţahmān Abū ‘Ali al-Harawi, a client of the Banū Ḥanīfah; and ‘Īsā b. A’yan, a client of the Khuzā’ah. Abū Muḥammad al-Ṣādiq also chose seventy men, and Muḥammad b. ‘Ali wrote a letter to them so that they might have a plan of action to follow.\footnote{315}

In this year, the pilgrimage was led by Abū Bakr b. Muḥammad b. ‘Amr b. Ḥazm. This was related to me by Aḥmad b. Thābit—the person he mentioned—Iṣḥāq b. ‘Īsā—Abū Ma’shar. The same was reported by al-Wāqidi.

The governors of the garrison towns in this year were the same as in the previous year, as mentioned above,\footnote{316} with the exception of Khurāsān, for its governors, at the end of the year, were ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. Nu‘aym, who was in charge of prayer and military matters, and ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. ‘Abdallāh, who was in charge of the fiscal administration.

\footnote{315}{Compare text below, II/1988, sub anno 130, where Tabari mentions a second list of twelve chiefs. References to ‘Abbāsid propaganda in the years following A.H. 100 have been collected by Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 506–14. The problem of the organization of the Da’wah is discussed in Sharon, Black Banners, 153–200.}

\footnote{316}{See text above, II/1346–47, sub anno 99.}
The Events of the Year

IOI

(JULY 24, 719—JULY 11, 720)

These events include the escape of Yazid b. al-Muhallab from the prison of 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz.317

The Escape of Yazid b. al-Muhallab

According to Hisham b. Muhammad—Abu Mikhnaf: 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz, upon being addressed on behalf of Yazid b. al-Muhallab at the time that he wanted to banish him to Dahlak—that is, when someone said to him, "We fear that his tribe will attempt to recover him"—sent Yazid back to prison,318 where he remained until he learned that 'Umar had taken ill. At this point, Yazid began to plot his escape from prison, due to his fear of Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik, whose in-laws, the family of Abu 'Aqil,319 had been tortured by him.320 Umm al-Hajjāj, the daugh-

317. See Ibn Khayyāt, Ta'rikh, I, 328; Ya'qūbī, Ta'rikh, III, 52; Kūfī, Futūḥ, VII, 322. Azdī, Ta'rikh, 3; FHA, 50; Ibn Kathīr, Bidāyah, IX, 191; Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 313.
318. See text above, II/1351, sub anno 100.
319. The text specifies 'Uqayl.
320. See text above, II/1282, sub anno 96.
Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik had sworn to God that if God would enable him to overcome Yazid b. al-Muhallab, he would cut off one of his limbs. Fearing such an outcome, Yazid b. al-Muhallab sent a message to his clients, who prepared some camels for him. Now 'Umar had taken ill in Dayr Sim'an,322 and when his illness became more severe Yazid called for his camels, which were brought to a spot near the prison. When it became clear to Yazid that 'Umar was seriously ill, he slipped out of the prison and set off on foot until he reached the place that he had agreed upon with his clients.323 But he did not find them there, and his comrades-in-flight became anxious and annoyed.324 Yazid said to them, "Do you think that I am going to return to prison? No, by God, I will never return." Finally, the camels arrived, and he mounted and set off, accompanied by his wife, 'Atikah, the daughter of al-Furst b. Mu'awiyah al-'Amiriyyah, one of the Banū al-Bakkā, who rode in the enclosure of the camel litter. He traveled for a while and when he had gone a certain distance he wrote to 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz as follows: "By God, if I knew that you were going to live, I would not have left my place of confinement; but I do not trust Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik." 'Umar exclaimed, "O God, if Yazid (b. al-Muhallab) wishes evil on this community, ward off his evil deed, and turn this hostile action back on his own neck." Yazid b. al-Muhallab proceeded until he passed by Hadath al-Zugaq,325 where al-Hudhayl b. Zufar, accompanied by tribesmen from the Qays, was present. The Qaysis pursued Yazid b. al-Muhallab at the point where he had passed by them and managed to capture part of his traveling apparatus and some of his

321. Umm al-Hajjāj had been tortured by Yazid b. al-Muhallab, despite Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik's efforts to intervene on behalf of his wife. See Ibn al-Athir, Kāmil, V, 57. On al-Walid b. Yazid, see text below II/1775ff., sub anno 126.
323. Yazid reportedly secured his release from prison by bribing both the guards and the governor of Aleppo. See FHA, 50; Ibn al-Athir, Kāmil, V, 58.
324. Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 191, states that Yazid escaped with a group of people, including his wife.
young slaves. But al-Hudhayl b. Zuwar sent after the Qaysis, and when they had come back, he asked, "Tell me what you want. Do you seek blood revenge from Yazid b. al-Muhallab or from one of his kinsmen?" They replied, "No." He asked, "Then what do you want? He is merely a man who fled from captivity out of fear for his life."

Al-Wāqiqī maintained that Yazid b. al-Muhallab did not escape from prison until after 'Umar's death.

In this year 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz died.326

[The Death of 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz]327

According to Aḥmad b. Thābit—the person he mentioned—Ishāq b. 'Isā—Abū Ma'shar: 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz died on the twenty-fifth of Rajab in the year 101 [February 10, 720]. Muḥammad b. 'Umar reported likewise.

According to al-Ḥārith—Ibn Sa'd—Muḥammad b. 'Umar—'Amr b. 'Uthmān: 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz died on the twentieth of Rajab in the year 101 [February 5, 720].

According to Hishām—Abū Mikhnaf: 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz died on Friday the twenty-fifth of Rajab, in Dayr Simān, in the year 101 [February 10, 720]. He was thirty-nine years and a few months old and had been Caliph for two years and five months. He died in Dayr Simān.

According to al-Ḥārith—Aḥmad b. Sa'd—Muḥammad b. 'Umar—his paternal uncle, al-Haytham b. Wāqīd: I was born in the year 97/715–716, and 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz was appointed as Caliph in Dābiq on Friday the nineteenth of Ṣafar in the year 99 [October 1, 717]. I have three dinārs that were distributed by him.328 He died in Khunāširah on Wednesday the twenty-fifth of Rajab in the year 101 [February 10, 720] after an illness that lasted for twenty days. He had been Caliph for two years, five months,

---

326. See Ibn Khayyāt, Ta'rikh, I, 328; Ya'qūbī, Ta'rikh, III, 52; Kūfī, Futūḥ, VII, 323; Mas'ūdī, Murūj [Beirut], III, 182; FHA, 63–64; Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 193, 212.

327. The rubric, which is not in the Leiden ed., is added from the Cairo ed.

328. Text: fa-āsābāni min qismihī, which may also mean, "that were minted by him."
and four days. He died at the age of thirty-nine years and a couple of months and was buried in Dayr Sim‘ān.

Some sources report: He was thirty-five years and five months old on the day he died. According to other sources: He was forty years old.

Hishām reported: ‘Umar died at the age of forty years and a few months. His patronymic was Abū Hafṣ. The following verses were addressed to ‘Umar by al-‘Uwayf after the two of them had witnessed a funeral procession together:

Answer me, Abū Hafṣ. Did you meet Muḥammad at his pool, giving good tidings to those who were behind you?
You are a man whose two hands are both useful.
Your left hand is better than the right of others.

His mother was Umm ‘Āṣim, the daughter of ‘Āṣim b. ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb. He was known as “The Umayyad with the scar on his forehead” because one of his father’s riding animals had wounded him in the face.

According to al-Ḥārith— Ibn Sa‘d— Sulaymān b. Ḥarb— al-Muḥārak b. Faḍālah— al-‘Ubaydallāh b. ‘Umar— Nāfi’: I frequently used to hear Ibn ‘Umar329 say, “Would that I knew who from among the children of ‘Umar will have a sign on his face. That one will fill the world with justice.”

According to Manṣūr b. Abī Muzāḥim— Marwān b. Shujā’— Sālim al-Aftās: When ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Azīz was a child in Damascus, he was kicked by an animal and carried to his mother, Umm ‘Āṣim, the daughter of ‘Āṣim b. ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb, who took him in her arms and wiped the blood from his face. His father came in to see her while she was taking care of the boy, and she turned to him and scolded him, blaming him for the accident, saying, “You have destroyed my son! Why didn’t you make sure that he had a servant or a nurse to protect him from something like this?” He said to her, “Be quiet, Umm ‘Āṣim. All is well that ends well, since he is destined to be ‘The Umayyad with the scar on his forehead.’”

---

Aspects of His Character

According to 'Ali b. Muḥammad—Kulayb b. Khalaf—Idris b. Ḥanẓālah and al-Mufaḍḍal—his grandfather and 'Ali b. Mujāhid—Khālid: When 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz became Caliph, he wrote to Yazīd b. al-Muhallab as follows: "Now then, Sulaymān was one of God's servants upon whom God bestowed His blessing and then took him away. He designated me as his successor and he designated Yazīd b. 'Abd al-Malik—if he is still alive—to succeed me. The office that God has entrusted and allotted to me is not easily borne. Were it my desire to take many wives and acquire wealth, then the sums that He has already given me are greater than that attained by any of his creatures. But I fear, in connection with the office for which I have been chosen, a difficult reckoning and a painful questioning, except for whatever defense from trial God may grant me, in His mercy. Those at our end have sworn the oath of allegiance, so now let those at your end do the same."

The letter was brought to Yazīd b. al-Muhallab, who showed it to Abū 'Uyaynah. After the latter had read it, [Yazīd] said, "I will not be one of his governors." Abū 'Uyaynah asked, "Why not?" He replied, "This is not the way that members of his household have spoken in the past, and he does not intend to follow their example." Nevertheless, the soldiers swore the oath of allegiance after Yazīd called on them to do so. He said: 'Umar then wrote to Yazīd, saying, "Appoint someone as your representative in Khurāsān and come to me." He designated his son, Makhlad, as his representative.

According to 'Ali—'Ali b. Mujāhid—'Abd al-A'īlá b. Manṣūr—Maymūn b. Mihrān: 'Umar wrote to 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Nu'aym as follows: "Indeed, Action ('amal) and Knowledge ('ilm) are closely related, so be one who is knowledgeable of God and one who acts on His behalf. There have been people who were knowledgeable but did not act; their knowledge was detrimental to them."

330. Text: kāna fi-lladhi a'tānī min dhālika mā qad balagha bi 'asfāl mā balagha bi-akīd min khalqihī.
331. The Arabic words for "action" and "knowledge," 'amal and 'ilm, have the same three-letter roots.
According to Muṣ'ab b. Ḥayyān—Muqāṭil b. Ḥayyān: 'Umar wrote to 'Abd al-Rahmān as follows: "Now then, act like a man who knows that God will not repair the deeds of those who cause corruption."

According to 'Alī—Kulayb b. Khalaf—Ṭufayl b. Mirdās: 'Umar wrote to Sulaymān b. Abī al-Sari as follows: "Establish inns in your lands so that whenever a Muslim passes by, you will put him up for a day and a night and take care of his animals; if he is sick, provide him with hospitality for two days and two nights; and if he has used up all of his provisions and is unable to continue, supply him with whatever he needs to reach his hometown." When Sulaymān received 'Umar's letter, the people of Samarqand said to him, "Qutaybah deceived us, defrauded us, and seized our land. But now that God has made justice and equity to triumph, grant us permission to send a delegation to the Commander of the Faithful in order to present our grievances. If we are in the right, then the land will be given back to us, and we are certainly in need of that." He gave his permission, whereupon they sent a group of their people to visit 'Umar, who then wrote on their behalf to Sulaymān b. Abī al-Sariyy: "The people of Samarqand have complained to me about the injustice they were made to suffer and the mistreatment they received from Qutaybah, who expelled them from their land. Therefore, when my letter reaches you, have the judge sit and consider their complaint. If he decides in their favor, expel [the Arabs] to their campgrounds, thereby restoring the status quo to what it had been prior to Qutaybah's conquest of Samarqand."333

Sulaymān therefore ordered Jumay' b. Ḥādir al-Qādir al-Nājī to carry out a judicial investigation. He decreed that the Arabs of Samarqand should be sent back to their campgrounds and that the two sides should fight on equal terms, so that there would either be a new peace treaty or victory by force. The army of al-Sughd334

332. Qutaybah b. Muslim had conquered Samarqand in the year 93/711-12, turning the city into an Arab garrison town. See text above, II/1249ff., sub anno 93.

333. See Baladhi, Futuh (Cairo), III, 519.

334. Al-Sughd [also spelled al-Sughd] is the name of a district in Transoxiana comprising the lands east of Bukhārā from Dabūsīyāh to Samarqand, the latter being its capital. See Yāqūt, Mu'jam, III, 222-23; El, s.v. Soghd; Le Strange, Lands, 460-73.
said, "But we are satisfied with the old agreement and we will not initiate hostilities." The two sides came to terms on that basis. The wise people among them said, "These tribesmen have mixed with us, and we dwell with them. They trust us and we trust them. But if a judgment is rendered in our favor, we will return to war, and we do not know who will be victorious; and if the judgment is not in our favor, we will have brought hostility into the struggle." Therefore, they left things as they were. They were satisfied and they did not fight.

'Umar wrote to 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Nu'aym ordering him to recall the Muslims who were in Transoxiana, together with their women and children. But they refused, saying, "Mawr does not suffice us." 'Abd al-Rahmān wrote to 'Umar about this, and 'Umar wrote back to him saying, "By God, I have already fulfilled my obligation. Therefore, do not send the Muslims on any more military campaigns. Let them be satisfied with the victories that God has already granted them." Our source continued: He also wrote to 'Uqbah b. Zur'ah al-Tā'ī, whom he had put in charge of the fiscal administration, after al-Qushayri: "Sovereignty has several pillars, without which it will not endure: The governor is a pillar; the judge is a pillar; the head of the Public Treasury is a pillar; and I am the fourth pillar. There is no Muslim frontier that is of greater concern to me or that I consider to be as important as the Khurasan frontier. Therefore, collect the tribute in its entirety and guard it without committing any injustice: If it proves to be sufficient to cover their stipends, that is the path of God; if not, write to me and I will transfer the money to you, thereby making it possible for you to pay them their stipends in full measure." 'Uqbah arrived and determined that the tribute they collected was greater than the stipends to which they were entitled. He therefore wrote to 'Umar notifying him of this, and 'Umar wrote back to him saying, "Distribute the surplus among the needy."

335. The text specifies ahl al-Rayy, "the people of al-Rayy." This should be amended to ahl al-ra'i. I owe this point to Professor Abbas.

336. Text: qad ittalabna' adāwah fi-l-munā'ah, which could also mean "introduced animosity."

337. See Ya'qūbi, Ta'rikh, III, 47, where it is reported that 'Umar praised the Muslims for their decision to remain in Transoxiana.
According to 'Abdallāh b. Aḥmad b. Shabbawayh—his father—Sulaymān—'Abdallāh—Muḥammad b. Ṭalḥah—Dāwūd b. Sulaymān al-Juḥfī: 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz wrote as follows: "Greetings from the servant of God, 'Umar, the Commander of the Faithful, to 'Abd al-Ḥamīd. Now then, the army of al-Kūfah has been stricken by trial, hardship, and deviation from the judgments of God, as well as by corrupt customs that were imposed on them by evil governors. The foundation of religion is justice and the performance of good deeds, and there is nothing more important to you than your soul. Remember that even the smallest sin is significant. Do not treat uncultivated land like cultivated land, nor cultivated land like uncultivated land. Examine the uncultivated land, take from it whatever it can bear, and improve it so that it will flourish. Nothing should be taken from cultivated land, except the rate of the tribute. Take it gently, leaving the peasants338 unruffled. Do not take as tribute anything but the weight of seven.339 The following levies are not permitted: tolls;340 the wages of mint officials; presents at the Nawrūz and Mihrajān festivals;341 and fees for official papers, for couriers, for housing, and for weddings. No tribute shall be levied on those peasants who convert to Islam.342 Follow my instructions in this matter, for I have commissioned you to carry out what I was commissioned to do by God. Furthermore, do not hasten, on your own initiative, to cut off the arm of the thief or to crucify someone until you have consulted with me on the matter. Finally, consider the request of women and children who desire to go on pilgrimage and immediately pay them one hundred dirhams by means of which they may perform the pilgrimage. Farewell."

339. Text: wazn sab'ah, that is, a dinār weighing seven mithqāls. See Baladhuri, Futūḥ (Cairo), III, 57ff.
340. Text: āyin. On this term, see Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 303.
341. The spring and autumn festivals of Nawrūz and Mihrajān were the pivots of the Sassanian administrative and ceremonial year. Public audiences were held, and gifts were presented to the monarch on both occasions. The requirement for gifts at Nawrūz and Mihrajān was revived by 'Abdallāh b. Darrāj, perhaps in his capacity as royal agent, who added ten million dirhams in gifts to the income from taxes. See Morony, Iraq, 73; Elt, s.vv. Nawrūz and Mihrajān.
According to 'Abdallāh b. ʿAbd al-ʿAziz b. Shabbawayh—his father—Sulaymān—'Abdallāh—Shihāb b. Shariʿah al-Mujashi'i: 'Umar b. 'Abd al-ʿAziz included the wives and children of the soldiers who received stipends (in the Diwān). Lots were cast among them, and those on whom the lot fell were assigned one hundred (dirhams), while those on whom the lot did not fall were assigned forty. He distributed money to the poor people of al-Basrah, giving each man three dirhams and giving the chronically ill fifty dirhams each.

He said: And I think he also awarded stipends to children upon weaning.\(^{343}\)

According to 'Abdallāh—his father—al-Fudayl—'Abdallāh: I was told that 'Umar b. 'Abd al-ʿAziz wrote to the Syrian army as follows: "Peace upon you, and the mercy of God. Now then, whoever contemplates death frequently speaks little, while he who knows that death is certain is satisfied with a little. Farewell."

According to 'Ali b. Muḥammad: Abu Mijlaz said to 'Umar: "You have put us in a wasteland,\(^{344}\) so send us money." He replied, "O Abu Mijlaz, you have reversed the matter." He said, "O Commander of the Faithful, does the money belong to us or to you?" 'Umar said, "Indeed, it belongs to you when the amount you collect does not cover your stipends." He said, "But you have neither carried it to us, nor carried us to it,\(^{345}\) and you have put one part of it upon the other." He said, "I will have it carried to you, God willing." But he fell ill that very night and died.

'Abd al-Rahmān b. Nuʿaym's tenure of office in Khurāsān was sixteen months.

Abū Jaʿfar (al-Tabari) said: In this year, 'Umārah b. Ukaymah al-Laythi, whose patronymic was Abū al-Walid, died at the age of seventy-nine.

---

343. Text: rizq al-fafm. On this practice, see Baladhuri, Futūḥ (Cairo) III, 562.
345. Text: wa-lā nahmiluha ilayka—"and we have not carried it to you"; read wa-lā taḥmilunā ilayhi, as suggested in footnote (g) of the Leiden text. I owe this point to Professor Abbas.

According to 'Abdallāh b. Bakr b. Ḥabīb al-Sahmī: We were told by a man in the mosque of al-Junābidh346 that 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz delivered a sermon to the people in Khunāṣirah in which he said:

O people, you were not created in vain, nor will you be left to yourselves.347 Rather, you will return to a place in which God will descend in order to judge among you and distinguish between you. Destitute and lost are those who forsake the all-encompassing mercy of God, and they will be excluded from Paradise, the borders of which are as wide as the heavens and the earth. Don’t you know348 that protection, tomorrow, will be limited to those who feared God (today), and to those who sold something ephemeral for something permanent, something small for something great, and fear for protection? Don’t you realize that you are the descendants of those who have perished, that those who remain will take their place after you, and that this will continue until you are all returned to God?349 Every day you dispatch to God, at all times of the day, someone who has died,350 his term having come to an end. You bury him in a crack in the earth and then leave him without a pillow or a bed. He has parted from his loved ones, severed his connections with the living, and taken up residence in the earth, whereupon he comes face to face with the accounting. He is mortgaged to his deeds: He needs his accomplishments, but not the material things he left on earth.

346. One of the districts of Nishāpūr. See Yaqūt, Mu'jam, II, 165.
347. See Qurʾān 75:36.
348. Text: a-lā wa-'l-amū. The translation follows Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 199, where the text is a-lām ta'lamū: “Don’t you know?”
Therefore, fear God before death descends and its appointed times expire. I swear by God that I say these words to you knowing that I myself have committed more sins than any of you; I therefore ask God for forgiveness and I repent. Whenever we learn that one of you needs something, I try to satisfy his need to the extent that I am able. Whenever I can provide satisfaction to one of you out of my possessions, I seek to treat him as my equal and my relative, so that my life and his life are of equal value. I swear by God that had I wanted something else, namely, affluence, then it would have been easy for me to utter the word, aware as I am of the means for obtaining this. But God has issued an eloquent Book and a just example [sunnah] by means of which He guides us to obedience and proscribes disobedience.

He lifted up the edge of his robe and began to cry and sob, causing the people around him to break into tears. Then he stepped down. That was the last sermon he gave before he died, may God have mercy on him.

According to Khalaf b. Tamīm—‘Abdallāh b. Muḥammad b. Sa’d: I learned that when one of ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Azīz’s sons died, one of his governors wrote to him in an effort to console him over the loss of his son. ‘Umar said to his scribe, “Answer him in my name,” whereupon the scribe began to sharpen a reed pen. Then ‘Umar said to the scribe, “Make the pen very thin because in that way the papyrus will last longer and the words will be more concise.” Write, ‘In the name of God the Merciful, the Compassionate, now to the matter at hand. We had prepared

---

351. Text: qabla nuzūl al-mawt wa-nqidā’ mawāqī’īhi, or “before death descends and overtakes you”, read mawāqī’īhi, following Tabari, Addenda et Emendanda, vol. 14, DCXCI.
352. For variant versions of this sermon, see Ibn ‘Abd al-Hakam, Sirah, 43-45, 132-33; Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 199.
353. See Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 208, where the son is identified as ‘Abd al-Malik b. ‘Umar.
354. ‘Umar was known for the scrupulous attention he paid to the proper use of public funds. Elsewhere we find him quibbling with the governor of Medina about the latter’s consumption of candle wax and wicks. See Ibn ‘Abd al-Hakam, Sirah, 64ff.
ourselves for this event, so that when it occurred, we did not reject it. Farewell."'

According to Mansur b. Muzahim—Shu‘ayb, that is, Ibn Shafwan—Ibn 'Abd al-Ḥamid: 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz said:

He who gives sincere advice to his brother in matters of religion and looks out for the well-being of the latter's daily affairs has fulfilled his brotherly obligation and carried out the duty that was incumbent upon him. Fear God. Accept these words, for they are offered as sincere advice to you with regard to your religion; and cling fast to them, for they constitute a warning that will save you in the afterlife. The sustenance has been apportioned; therefore, let no believer exceed what has been apportioned to him, and be united in seeking the good. In contentment there is abundance, subsistence, and sufficiency. The term of this life is in your necks, and Gehenna lies before you. What you see will pass away, what has been is as if it never was, and all will soon be dead. You have seen the stages of the dying man, both when he is in the agony of death, and then after his demise when he has tasted death and the people all around him are saying, "He has passed away, may God have mercy on his soul." You have witnessed the hasty manner in which he is removed, and the division of his estate, when his face is lost, his memory forgotten, and his doorway forsaken, as if he had not mixed with those who keep their word, nor inhabited the lands. Therefore, beware the horror of a day on which not so much as the weight of an ant on the scale will be despised.

According to Sahl b. Maḥmūd—Harmalah b. 'Abd al-'Azīz—his father—one of 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz's sons: 'Umar ordered us to 355. Text: lam nadhkurhu: "We did not mention it"; read lam nunkirhu, following the Cairo ed.

---

356. Text: yaghdira, "betray"; the text should be amended to read ya'duwa. I owe this point to Professor Ihsan Abbas.
357. See Qur'an 4:40, 10:61, and 34:3.
The Events of the Year 101

buy the plot for his grave, so we bought it from the monk. He said: One of the poets\(^358\) recited:

Now that 'Umar's death has been announced to me, I say:
May the mainstay of justice and religion be not far away.
The people have left behind, in the tomb that they dug in Dayr Sim'\(\ddot{a}\)n, the balance of the scales.

According to 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Mahdī—Sufyān: 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz said: "He who acts without knowledge\(^359\) causes more corruption than good, and he who does not consider his speech to be part of his actions sins repeatedly. Satisfaction is scarce, and the true believer should rely on patience: God never bestowed a blessing upon one of His servants and then took it away from him, giving him patience in return for that which was taken away, except that the replacement was better than what was taken away from him." Then he recited the following verse:
"Surely the patient will be paid their wages in full without reckoning."\(^360\)

'Abd al-Rahmān b. Nu'aym received the following letter from him: "Do not destroy a church, synagogue, or fire temple with respect to which an agreement has been concluded with you, and do not permit the construction of a new church or fire temple.\(^361\) Do not drag the lamb to its place of slaughter or sharpen the knife over the head of the animal. Do not combine two prayers without an excuse."

According to 'Affān b. Muslim—'Uthmān b. 'Abd al-Hamid—his father—Fātimah, the wife of 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz, said: He became extremely uncomfortable one night, and we stayed up with him. The next morning I instructed one of his servants, by the name of Marthid, saying, "Marthid, stay with the Commander of the Faithful so that if he needs anything you will be close at hand."

---

\(^358\) The authorship of this poem is disputed. Mas'ūdī, Muruğ (Beirut), III, 195, records a variant version of the poem in which al-Farazdaq is specified as the author. Ibn al-Athīr, Kāmil, V, 59, identifies the poet as Kuthayyir 'Azzah (d. 105/723).

\(^359\) Text: 'amil a'lam ghayr ilm—a pun. See text above, II/1364, note 331.

\(^360\) Qur'an 39:10.

\(^361\) On the status of non-Muslim places of worship in Muslim lands, see EP, s.vv. Dhimma, Kanisa.
Then we left, and our heads were throbbing362 because we had stayed up so late. At midday I awoke and went to him, but I found Marthid sleeping outside of his room. I woke him up, saying, "Marthid, who told you to leave?" He said, "(The Caliph) did. He said, 'Marthid, leave me for by God I see something that is neither human nor jinn.' As I left, I heard him reciting this verse: 'That is the Last Abode; we appoint it for those who desire not exorbitance in the earth, nor corruption. The issue ultimate is to the godfearing.'"363 Marthid said: When I reentered the room, I found that he had turned his face toward the qiblah and closed his eyes. He was dead, may God have mercy on him.364

362. Text: fa-darabnā bi-ruʿūsinā. Literally this means "we were striking our heads."
364. This is the end of the supplement. Ibn ʿAbd al-Ḥakam preserves a variant version of ʿUmar's deathbed scene in which Maslamah b. ʿAbd al-Malik is reported to have been present. See Sirah, 116–117.
The Caliphate of Yazīd b. ‘Abd al-Malik b. Marwān
In this year Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik b. Marwân—his patronymic was Abû Khâlid—came to power. He was twenty-nine years old at the time, according to Hishâm b. Muḥammad. Upon assuming the caliphate, he dismissed Abû Bakr b. Muḥammad b. 'Amr b. Ḥazm as governor of Medina, replacing him with 'Abd al-Râhmân b. al-Ḍâḥîk b. Qays al-Fihri. According to al-Wâqidi, the latter arrived on a Wednesday toward the end of the month of Ramaḏân (April 10, 720). ‘Abd al-Râhmân put Salamah b. 'Abdallâh b. 'Abd al-Asad al-Makhzûmî in charge of the judiciary.

According to Muḥammad b. ‘Umar—‘Abd al-Jabbâr b. ‘Umârah—Abû Bakr b. Ḥazm: When ‘Abd al-Râhmân b. al-Ḍâḥîk arrived in Medina to replace me, I went in to see him. I greeted him, but he didn’t welcome me. I said, “This matter (that is, the governorship of Medina) is one over which the Quraysh will not award 365. For other sources on the caliphate of Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik b. Marwân, see Ibn Qutaybah, Ma’ârif, 364; Dinawari, Akhbâr, 334–36; Ya’qûbi, Ta’rîkh, III, 53–58; Azdî, Ta’rîkh, 5–21; Mas’ûdi, Murûj (Beirut), III, 195–204; FHA, 64–81; Ibn Kathîr, Bidâyah, IX, 219–33.

the Helpers (Anṣār) jurisdiction.” Then I returned to my residence. I was afraid of him—he was a reckless young man—and indeed he let me know that he was saying, “Only old age prevents Ibn Ḥazm from coming to me, and I am aware of his deception.” I realized then that my fears had materialized and when I was sure that he had uttered that statement, I said to my informant, “Tell him, ‘It is not my custom to deceive, and I do not like those who do. The governor imagines that he is going to remain in power forever. But how many governors and caliphs have occupied this residence before you and then left it, so that now all that is left of them is stories, for better or for worse? Fear God and do not pay attention to what is said by a transgressor or an envious person.’”

Relations between the two men continued to deteriorate until a man from the Banū Fihr and another from the Banū al-Najjār appealed to Ibn al-Dahhāk to resolve a dispute between them. Abū Bakr had previously rendered a decision in favor of the Najjār and against the Fihrī with regard to some land, of which they each owned one-half. Abū Bakr had awarded the land to the Najjār. The Fihrī sent to the Najjārī and to Abū Bakr b. Ḥazm, calling on them to present themselves before Ibn al-Dahhāk. The Fihrī complained about Abū Bakr b. Ḥazm, saying, “He took my property out of my hands and awarded it to this Najjārī.” Abū Bakr responded, “I beg God’s forgiveness, but you know that I examined the dispute between you and your co-owner for several days, after which I decided to dispossess you of your land. Furthermore, I sent you to the legal scholars (muftīs) who advised me in the matter, Saʿīd b. al-Musayyab and Abū Bakr b. Ḥabīb b. Ḥabīb b. Hishām, and you questioned them.” The Fihrī said, “Indeed, but their word is not binding on me.” At this point, Ibn al-Dahhāk felt beaten and he interjected, saying, “Stand up.”

---

366. The term Anṣār designates Muḥammad’s Medinese supporters in distinction from his Meccan following, known as the “emigrants” (muhājrūn). See EP, s.v. Anṣār.

367. This is a conjectural translation. Text: ḥādha shay’un lā tamlikuhu qurayshun al-anṣārā; read li-l-anṣārī, following the Cairo ed. Abū al-Rahmān was a Qurashi, while Abū Bakr was one of the Helpers.

368. This dispute must have occurred at least six years earlier, since Saʿīd b. al-Musayyab, one of the first specialists in religious law whose activity can be regarded as historical, died in 95/713–14. See EP, s.v. Fikh.
They stood up, and he said to the Fihri, "You acknowledge to him that you questioned the muftis about their judgment, but then you say to me, 'Give me my land back.' You are a fool! Leave, for you are not entitled to anything."

But 'Abū Bakr continued to fear Ibn al-Ḍāḥḥāk. Subsequently, Ibn Ḥayyān asked Yazid to allow him to retaliate against 'Abū Bakr, who had administered the ḥadd punishments to him on two occasions. Yazid said, "I won't allow it, for that man was chosen and trusted by the members of my household. I will, however, appoint you as governor of Medina." He said, "I do not want that, for if I were to punish him by virtue of my authority, that would not constitute retaliation." Yazid then wrote to 'Abd al- Raḥmān b. al-Ḍāḥḥāk as follows: "Now to the matter at hand. Investigate Ibn Ḥazm's punishment of Ibn Ḥayyān: If the punishment was a result of an obvious transgression, don't concern yourself with it; and if the punishment was a result of a matter that was subject to dispute, don't concern yourself with it; but if the punishment was a result of some other cause, allow Ibn Ḥayyān to retaliate against him."

'Uthmān brought the letter to 'Abd al-Raḥmān b. al-Ḍāḥḥāk, who said, "You have not accomplished anything. Do you think that Ibn Ḥazm punished you as a result of something that was not subject to dispute?" Then 'Uthmān said to 'Abd al-Raḥmān, "If you want to do me a favor, now is the time to do so." He said, "Now you have achieved your objective." 'Abd al-Raḥmān sent for Ibn Ḥazm and administered the ḥadd punishment to him twice, on a single occasion, without asking him a single question. Then Abū al-Maghrā' b. Ḥayyān returned, saying, "I am Abū al-Maghrā' b. al-Ḥayyān [sic]. By God, I have not had any relations with women from the day that Ibn Ḥazm did what he did to me until this very day. Today, I shall resume my relations with women."
Abū Ja‘far [al-Ṭabarî] said: In this year, Shawdhab the Khârijite was slain.374

The Slaying of Shawdhab the Khârijite

We have already mentioned the report about the delegation that Shawdhab sent to 'Umar b. 'Abd al-‘Aziz in order to argue about his revolt against the Caliph.375 According to Ma‘mar b. al-Muthannâ, when 'Umar died, 'Abd al-Ḥamīd b. 'Abd al-Rahmān, desirous of winning the favor of Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik, wrote to Muhammad b. Jarîr ordering him to attack Shawdhab and his men. Now at that moment, Shawdhab, whose two messengers had not yet returned, was unaware of 'Umar's death. Thus, when the Khârijîtes saw Muḥammad b. Jarîr preparing for battle, Shawdhab sent to him, asking, "What prompts you to engage in hostilities prior to the expiration of the time period upon which we had agreed? Did we not promise one another not to fight 'until Shawdhab's two messengers return?"" But Muḥammad replied, saying, "We cannot leave you in this state."

Sources other than Abū 'Ubaydah: The Khârijîtes said: These people would not have acted in this manner but that the righteous man376 has died.

According to Ma‘mar b. al-Muthannâ: Shawdhab went forth into battle against them, and the two sides engaged in combat. Several of the Khârijîtes were wounded, but they killed many of the Muslims.377 The latter turned and fled, with the Khârijîtes in hot pursuit, until they reached the wooden houses of al-Kūfah, where they took refuge with 'Abd al-Ḥamīd. Muḥammad b. Jarîr himself was wounded on the buttocks. Afterwards, Shawdhab returned to his camp where he remained, waiting for the return of his two messengers. They arrived and informed him of the demands they had made upon 'Umar and of the fact that he had died.

Yazid confirmed 'Abd al-Ḥamīd as governor of al-Kūfah and sent Tamim b. al-Hubab on his behalf, with two thousand soldiers. Tamim sent a message to the Kharijites in which he informed them that Yazid would not leave them intact on the same terms as 'Umar had. But they cursed him and they cursed Yazid, whereupon Tamim attacked them. But they slew him and put his men to flight: some of them took refuge in al-Kufah, while the others made their way back to Yazid. Then Yazid sent against them Najdah b. al-Hakam al-Azdi, leading a military division, but they slew him and put his men to flight. Next he sent against them al-Shahhaj b. Wadá', leading two thousand soldiers. The two sides exchanged messages, and then the Kharijites slew al-Shahhaj. But several of their men were slain, including Hudbah al-Yashkuri, the paternal cousin of Bistam, who was a pious man; and Abu Shaybân379 Muqâtîl b. Shaybân, whom they considered to be a virtuous man. Abu Tha'labah Ayyûb b. Khawali380 recited the following, elegizing them:

We left Tamim in the dust, torn to pieces, mourned by his wife and his kinsmen.

Qays abandoned Tamim and Malik,
just as al-Shahhaj was abandoned by his kinsmen yesterday.

He came from Harrân carrying a standard, seeking to overcome the command of God, but God overcame him.

O Hudbah, to war, O Hudbah to the muster,
O Hudbah to the tenacious adversary who attacks him!
O Hudbah! How many a cornered man381 have you rescued, when his Fate had delivered him to the spears?

Abu Shaybân was the best fighter382 to be sought after. His strength was feared by those who fought him.

378. Yazid was in Damascus.
379. Text: Shubayl; read Shaybân, as in the sixth verse of the poem that follows, and as in Azdi, Ta'rikh, 7.
382. Text: muqâtîl, a pun on Abu Shaybân's name, Muqâtîl.
He triumphed and met God with many good deeds to his credit.
His slayer smote him with the sword while he was fighting in the path of God.
He provisioned himself with implements of this world: armor, mail, and a sharp sword whose edges did not betray him.
And a short-haired sturdy horse, as if it were,
when it attacks, [a bird of prey,] full-feathered with crooked claws.383

When Maslamah entered al-Kūfah, the residents of the city complained to him about Shawdhab, who had terrified them and slain many of their men. Maslamah summoned Sa‘īd b. ‘Amr al-Harashi, who was a horseman, put him in command of ten thousand men, and sent him against Shawdhab, who was at his camp. Confronted by these insurmountable forces, Shawdhab said to his men, “For those of you who are seeking God, the time to die as a martyr has arrived; as for those of you who only came out because of this world, know that this world has come to an end, while everlasting life is to be found in the next abode.” Upon hearing this, they smashed the sheaths of their swords and attacked, repeatedly putting Sa‘īd and his men to flight, so that he was afraid of being disgraced. Then he rebuked his men, saying, “Woe to you,384 are you fleeing from such a small number of men? O Syrians, beware of a distressing day!”

Our source continued: The Syrians attacked the Khārijites, crushing them to pieces, leaving not one of them alive. They slew Bisṭām—that is, Shawdhab—and his horsemen, including al-Rayyān b. ‘Abdallāh al-Yashkuri, who was among those who were submissive to God.385 His brother, Shimr b. ‘Abdallāh, recited the following elegy:

I was distressed about chiefs and horsemen from the Banū Shaybān who kindled the fire of war.

383. See Azdī, Ta‘rikh, 8.
384. Text: lā ḥabakātum, literally, “may you have no father.” This proverbial expression is used as an imprecation. See Lane, Lexicon, pt. 1, pp. 10–11.
385. Text: min al-mubiththin, “one of the instigators”; read min al-mukhibbitin, following the Cairo ed.
The accidents of time detained and destroyed them, leaving me by myself, brotherless.
Sad, with grief ringing in my heart, like a fire, because of my deep feelings for the loss of al-Rayyān.
And (about) horsemen who sold their souls to God, from the Yashkur, proving themselves knights in battle.

Hassān b. Ja’dah recited the following elegy:

O eye! Shed copious tears on your own, and cry for Bīstām’s men, and for Bīstām.
As long as you live, you will never see the likes of them, none more pious or more perfect, gentle and wise.
They took their equals as an example during their time of difficulty, and had no wish to hold back from enemies.
Until they went to meet the one on whose behalf they had rebelled, leaving us landmarks and signposts as an inheritance.
Verily I know that they have been made to dwell in rooms of Paradise, where they will live in eternity, and obtained there servants.
May God water the lands where they met their deaths with abundant spring rains!

Abū Ja’far (al-Ṭabarī) said: In this year, Yazīd b. al-Muhallab reached al-Ṭaṣrah and took control of the city. He arrested Yazīd b. ‘Abd al-Malik’s governor, ‘Adī b. Arṭāt al-Fazārī, threw him into prison, and renounced his allegiance to Yazīd b. ‘Abd al-Malik.\footnote{See Ibn Khayyāt, Ta’rikh, I, 328; Ya’qūbī, Ta’rikh, III, 54; Kūfī, Futūḥ, VIII, 1–11; Azdī, Ta’rikh, 8–10; Mas’ūdī, Murūj (Beirut), III, 199–200; FHA, 51–60; Ibn Kathir, Bidayah, IX, 219–20; Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 312ff.}
The Caliphate of Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik b. Marwan

'Abd al-'Azīz, 387 I will discuss here his actions following his escape in the year 101/719-20. On the very day that 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azīz died, the oath of allegiance was sworn to Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik. Upon being informed of Yazid b. al-Muhallab's escape, the Caliph wrote to 'Abd al-Ḥamīd b. 'Abd al-Raḥmān, ordering him to search for the fugitive and confront him. The Caliph also wrote to 'Adī b. Arṭāt, informing him of Yazid's escape; he ordered 'Adī to prepare for the confrontation and to arrest those members of Yazid's household who were in al-Ḥaṣrah.

According to Hishām b. Muṭṭamad—Abū Mīkhnaː 'Adī b. Arṭāt arrested several of Yazid's brothers and threw them into prison: al-Muḍīṭṭal, Ḥabīb, and Marwān, the sons of al-Muhallab. Meanwhile, Yazid b. al-Muhallab advanced until he passed by Sa'īd b. 'Abd al-Malik b. Marwān. 388 Yazid said to his men, "Let's block his way, seize him, and take him with us." But his men replied, "No. Rather, advance with us and leave him alone." He marched forward, climbing up above Qutqutanah. 389

'Abd al-Ḥamīd b. 'Abd al-Raḥmān dispatched Hishām b. Muṣṭaḥiq b. 'Abdallāh b. Mukhrimah b. 'Abd al-'Azīz b. Abī Qays b. 'Abd Wudd b. Naṣr b. Mālik b. Ḥisāl b. Ṭāhir b. Luwayy al-Qurashi, leading a segment of the Kufan army that included the security force, the notables, and the powerful people. 'Abd al-Ḥamīd instructed Hishām as follows, "Set off until you come face to face with Yazid, who will today pass by the shore of al-Ūdīyah." 390 Hishām traveled a short distance but then returned to 'Abd al-Ḥamīd and asked him, "Shall I bring him to you dead or alive?" He replied, "That's up to you." This statement greatly astonished those who heard it. Hishām made his way to al-Ūdīyah, where he set up camp at a point not far from where Yazid was located. But Hishām and his men avoided attacking Yazid, who marched off in the direction of al-Ḥaṣrah. The poet recited, referring to Yazid:

Ibn al-Muhallab traveled without stopping,

---

387. See text above, II/1359ff.
389. Located near al-Kūfiyah, facing the desert. See Yāqūt, Mu'jam, IV, 374.
390. A body of fresh water between al-Qādisīyyah and al-Maghiṭah, four miles from the former and thirty-two miles from the latter. See Yāqūt, Mu'jam, IV, 92.
while Dhū al-Qaṭīfah, from the Kinānah, rested during the night.

He took the left side, thus taking the wise course, and he did not approach the fortresses of Quṭṭuṭānah.391

Dhū al-Qaṭīfah refers to Muḥammad b. ʿAmr, (whose father, ʿAmr b. al-Walid b. ʿUqbah b. Abī Muʿayt) is known as Abū Qaṭīfah. He was given the name Dhū al-Qaṭīfah because his beard, face, and chest were very hairy. Muḥammad is also known as Dhū al-Shāmah (“The one with the birthmark”).

When Yazid b. al-Muhallab drew near, Hishām b. Mūsāīq returned to ʿAbd al-Ḥamīd, and Yazid then marched toward al-Baṣrāh. Meanwhile, ʿAdī b. ʿArṭāt had rallied the Baṣrān army, dug a trench around the city, and put al-Mūghirah b. ʿAbdallāh b. ʿAbī ʿAqīl al-Thaqāfī in command of the Baṣrān cavalry.

ʿAbd al-Malik b. al-Muhallab said to ʿAdī b. ʿArṭāt, who was from the Banū Fazārah: “Take my son, Ḥumayd, and put him in prison in my place. I give you my solemn pledge that I will divert Yazid from al-Baṣrāh and make him retreat to Fārs, where he will seek a promise of safe-conduct for himself and be far removed from you.” But ʿAdī refused. When Yazid arrived with his soldiers, al-Baṣrāh was surrounded with men, for Muḥammad b. al-Muhallab, who was not one of those who had been imprisoned, had assembled some men and youths from his household together with some of his clients and gone out to rendezvous with Yazid. He advanced with a detachment of cavalry that struck fear in the hearts of those who saw it.

ʿAdī had summoned the army of al-Baṣrāh and put one man in command of each tribal division (khums): He put al-Mūghirah b. Ziyād b. ʿAmr al-ʿAtakī in command of the Azd; Muḥriz b. ʿHumrān al-Saʿdī, from the Banū Minqar, in command of the Banū Tamim; and ʿImrān b. Ṭāʾīr b. Mīṣmah, from the Banū Qays b. Thaʿlabah, in command of the Bakr b. Wāʿil. But Abū Minqar, a tribesman from the Qays b. Thaʿlabah, said, “We will not be victorious unless the Banū Mālik b. Mīṣmah carry the standard.” ʿAdī then summoned Nūḥ b. Shaybān b. Mālik b. Mīṣmah and put him in command of the Bakr b. Wāʿil; he summoned

391. See Kūfī, Futūḥ, VIII, 2–3.
Malik b. al-Mundhir b. al-Jarûd and put him in command of the 'Abd al-Qays; and he summoned 'Abd al-'A'lla b. 'Abdallah b. 'Amir al-Qurashi and put him in command of the Ahl al-'Aliyah. The 'Aliyah are composed of the following tribes: Quraysh, Kinânah, Azd, Bajilah, Khath'am, all of Qays 'Aylân, and Muzaynah. In al-Kufah the Ahl al-'Aliyah are known as the "Ahl al-Madinah fourth-division" (rub'), and in al-Basrah they are known as the "Ahl al-'Aliyah fifth-division" (khums). In al-Kufah there were, at first, five divisions, but Ziyad b. 'Ubayd reorganized them into four.

According to Hishâm—Abû Mikhnaf: Yazid b. al-Muhallab advanced, but every horseman and tribal unit that he encountered turned away from him, allowing him to continue. Finally, he was confronted by al-Mughirah b. 'Abdallah al-Thaqafi, who was leading the cavalry. Muhammad b. al-Muhallab attacked him with his horsemen, but al-Mughirah and his men moved out of his way. Yazid proceeded to his house, where the people came to visit him in turns. He began to send messages to 'Adi b. Arûtât, saying, "If you deliver my brothers to me, I will conclude a peace agreement with you with regard to al-Bašrah. I will leave you and the city alone so that I might acquire what I want from Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik." But 'Adi rejected his offer. Earlier, Humâyd b. 'Abd al-Malik b. al-Muhallab had gone to see Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik, who sent him back, accompanied by Khalid b. 'Abdallah al-Qasri and by 'Umar b. Yazid al-Ḥakami. They were carrying a promise of safe-conduct for Yazid b. al-Muhallab and his household.

Yazid b. al-Muhallab began to award stipends to the soldiers who joined him, distributing pieces of gold and silver, thereby causing the soldiers to be well-disposed toward him. 'Imrân b. 'Amir b. Misma' joined him because he was angry with 'Adi b. Arûtât for taking the standard—that is, the standard of the Bakr b. Wâ'il—from him and giving it to his paternal cousin. Also joining Yazid were the tribes of Rabi'ah, the remainder of Tamîm, Qays, and many individual soldiers, including 'Abd al-Malik and Malik, the

---

392. Yazid wanted a guarantee of safe-conduct. See Kufî, Futûh, VIII, 3, where the parallel passage has, "so that I might acquire a guarantee of safe-conduct." When Yazid b. al-Muhallab arrived in al-Basrah after escaping from prison, he wrote to the new Caliph asking for a promise of safe-conduct. See FHA, 52.

393. 'Umar reportedly awarded the promise on the condition that Yazid stay put. See FHA, 67.
two sons of Misma'. There were also some soldiers from the Syrian army with him.

'Adi, on the other hand, could offer each man only two dirhams. He would say, "I cannot give you a single dirham from the Public Treasury without the authorization of Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik. Be content with this until such authorization is granted." Al-Farazdaq recited in connection with this:

I suspect that the "two-dirham men" are driven to death by their Fate and by their destined ends.
The most sensible one among them is he who remains inside his house, certain that the end is inevitable.394

The Banū 'Amr b. Tamim split off from 'Adi's men and established themselves in al-Mirbad.395 Yazid b. al-Muhallab sent against them one of his clients, known as Dāris, who attacked them and put them to flight. Al-Farazdaq recited with regard to this:

The 'Reds'396 scattered when Dāris shouted, for they could not endure the sharp swords.
God repaid Qays for 'Adi as a reproach.
Couldn't they hold fast until the fighting broke out?397

After the soldiers had rallied to him, Yazid b. al-Muhallab marched to the cemetery of the Banū Yashkur, located midway between him and the fortress, where he set up camp. The Banū Tamim, the Qays, and the Syrian army approached him, and the two sides fought for a little while. Muḥammad b. al-Muhallab attacked them and struck Miswar b. 'Abbād al-Ḥabāṭi with his sword, smashing the nosepiece of his helmet, and then quickly thrust the sword into his nose. He also attacked Huraym b. Abi Ṭaḥmah398 b. Abi Nahshal b. Dārim, grabbing his belt and throwing him off his horse. When (Huraym) fell between him and the 394. See Diwān al-Farazdaq, 1, 421; Kūfī, Futūḥ, VIII, 4; Ibn al-Athir, Kāmil, V, 72.

395. The Mirbad of al-Baṣrah was the famous caravan quarter at the western end of the city. See Yaqūt, Mu’jam, V, 97–99; Le Strange, Lands, 45.
396. The 'Reds’ are the Persian "mawāli" (clients).
397. See Diwān al-Farazdaq, II, 224; Kūfī, Futūḥ, VIII, 5–6.
398. Read Ṭaḥmah, as in the text; the Cairo ed. has Ṭalḥah. See Caskel, Gamharah, II, 287; Kūfī, Futūḥ, VIII, 5, n. 2.
horse, Ṭuḥammad exclaimed, "What a futile attempt! Your paternal uncle is heavier than that." The soldiers fled, pursued by Yazid b. al-Muhallab, who followed them until he approached the fortress. There, they engaged them in battle, with 'Adi himself going out to fight Yazid. Several of 'Adi's men were slain, including al-Ḥārith b. Muṣarrif al-Awdi, one of the nobles of the Syrian army who had been a horseman under al-Ḥajjāj, Mūsā b. al-Wajih al-Ḥimyari—later al-Ḵalāʾi, and Rāshid the Muʿadhhdhin. 'Adi's forces fled.

Yazid's brothers, who were in 'Adi's prison, heard the shouts getting closer and the arrows falling inside the fortress. 'Abd al-Malik b. al-Muhallab said to them, "I see the arrows falling inside the fortress and hear the shouts coming closer. Although I think that Yazid has triumphed, I fear that the Mudaris, that is, the Syrians who are with 'Adi, will come and slay us before Yazid can reach us here in the room. Therefore, barricade the door and throw some furniture against it." They obeyed his instructions. Shortly thereafter they were approached by 'Abdallāh b. Dinār, a client of Ibn 'Umar who was the commander of 'Adi's guards. He and his men tried to force their way in, but the Muhallabids had thrown some furniture against the door and were leaning on it. The others tried, unsuccessfully, to push in the door, but abandoned them when the soldiers told them they had to hurry.

Yazid b. al-Muhallab advanced and occupied the house of Salīm b. Ziyād b. Abī Sufyān, which was adjacent to the fortress. Ladders were brought forward, and it was not long before 'Uthmān stormed the fortress. 'Adi b. Arṭāt was captured and brought out, smiling. Yazid said to him, "Why are you laughing?"
By God, two things ought to prevent you from laughing. First, the fact that you fled from a noble death and surrendered like a woman, that is the first thing; second, the fact that you have been brought to me like a runaway slave that is dragged back to its masters. You have no covenant or pact with me, so what makes you so confident that I will (not) cut off your head?" 'Adi replied: "You have, indeed, overpowered me. But I know that your survival depends on mine and that there is a price on the head of whoever might slay me. You have seen the armies of God in the West, and you are aware of how God helps those people in every single place where treachery and disloyalty prevail. Make amends, then, for your hasty actions and your mistakes by repenting and asking for forgiveness before the sea casts its waves over you, because if you ask for forgiveness later, it will not be granted. Furthermore, if you sue for peace after I have sent the army against you, you will find them keeping their distance from you, but so long as the army has not been sent against you, they will not deny you anything that you may request, namely, safe passage for yourself, your family and your property."

Yazid replied as follows:

As for your statement, "Your survival depends on mine"—may God not keep me alive longer than the time it takes a frightened bird to sip water if that is the case. And as for your statement, "There is a price on the head of whoever slays you"—by God, suppose I had in my control ten thousand soldiers from the Syrian army who were all of greater status than you, and I cut off their heads in one spot; they would not be as frightened and terrified by those slayings as they would be by my threat to abandon and oppose them. Furthermore, were I to ask them to shed their blood in vain for me, to give me control of their treasures, and to secure for me a great portion of their sovereignty, in exchange for terminating the war between us, they would certainly comply. Therefore, do not delude yourself: the army would forget you if news of us reached them, and whatever they devise or machinate will

---

405. That is, the Umayyad armies in Syria.
406. The text is akhyārūnā, "our best men." This should be amended to read akhbārūnā. I owe this point to Professor Abbas.
be only for themselves; they will not remember you, nor will they pay any attention to you. Finally, as for your statement, "Make amends for your deed, ask for forgiveness, and do this and do that"—by God, I did not ask for your advice, and you are neither my friend nor a trusted adviser. Indeed, what you have said is a redundancy uttered out of weakness. Take him away!

But an hour or so after they had taken 'Adi away, Yazid said, "Bring him back." When they had brought him back, Yazid said, "I would not have imprisoned you had you not imprisoned and tortured the Banû Muhallab, despite our request that you treat them gently. But you did not ease your oppression, torture, and opposition." After hearing this statement, 'Adi manifested a greater sense of security, and he mentioned what Yazid had said to everyone who visited him.

A man named al-Samayda' al-Kindi, from the Banû Mâlik b. Rabî'ah—he was a resident of 'Uman—held the beliefs of the Khârijites. As Yazid's and 'Adi's forces were lining up in rows, he emerged and seceded, taking with him many of the Qur'ân reciters. A group from Yazid's forces and a group from 'Adi's forces said, "We accept the judgment of al-Samayda'." Yazid then sent a message to al-Samayda', inviting him to join forces with him. He accepted the summons, and Yazid appointed him governor of al-Ubullah, where he turned his attention to perfumes and pleasure. When Yazid b. al-Muhallab was victorious, the leaders of the Bara'an army, from the tribes of Qays, Tamim, and Mâlik b. al-Mundhir, fled, joining 'Abd al-Hamid b. 'Abd al-Rahmân in al-Kufah. Some of them made their way to Syria. Al-Farazdaq recited:

My life for a group from the Tamîm who followed one another to Syria rather than accept the judgment of al-Samayda'. Would they accept the judgment of a Harûrî, who has strayed from the true religion,

407. On the Khârijites, see note 266 above.
409. A town located four farsaks (124 km.) from al- Başrâh, between the main course of the Tigris and one of the channels. See Barthold, Geography, 203.
410. That is, a Khârijite. See note 268, above.
more erroneous and more deviant than an ass with its ear cut off?\textsuperscript{411}

To which Khalifah al-Aqta' responded:

His judgment was sought neither because he sent a delegation to ask for it, nor because of an opportunity from which some desirable outcome was expected. Rather, they traveled to get it, by day and by night, on the baldest buttocks that can be seen on a day of wearsome travel.

For fear that the enemy would catch up with them, they would camp only every fourth or fifth night.

Al-Hawārî b. Ziyād b. 'Amr al-'Atākī set out with the intention of reaching Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik, fleeing from Yazid b. al-Muhallab. He encountered Khālid b. 'Abdallāh al-Qasrī and 'Amr b. Yazid al-Ḥakāmī, who were traveling with Ḥumayd b. 'Abd al-Malik b. al-Muhallab. They were returning from Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik with a promise of safe-conduct for Yazid b. al-Muhallab and everything that he wanted\textsuperscript{412} from the Caliph. Al-Ḥawārī greeted the two men, who asked him about the latest events. But when he saw Ḥumayd b. 'Abd al-Malik (b. al-Muhallab) with them, he took them aside, privately. "Where are you going?" he asked. "To Yazid b. al-Muhallab," they replied. "We have brought him everything that he wanted." Al-Ḥawārī said, "You cannot do anything for Yazid, and he cannot do anything for you. He has defeated his enemy, 'Adi b. Arṭāt, slain many men, and imprisoned 'Adi. Turn back, both of you!" At that moment, a tribesman from the Bahilah named Muslim b. 'Abd al-Malik passed by without stopping to greet them. They called after him and asked him to account for himself, but he still would not stop. Al-Qasrī said, "Shouldn't you bring him back and administer one hundred lashes?" But his companion said to him, "Let him go,"\textsuperscript{413} and they waited until he disappeared.

\textsuperscript{411} See Diwān al-Farazdaq, I, 409.
\textsuperscript{412} Text: arādahu; the Cairo ed. has the dual form, arādāhu, "[everything that] the two of them wanted." On this mission, see note 392, above.
\textsuperscript{413} Text: gharribhu 'anka; the Cairo ed. reads 'azzibhu 'anka, "leave him alone."
Al-Ḥawārī b. Ziyād continued on his way to Yazīd b. 'Abd al-Malik, and the two men turned back, taking Ḥumayd b. 'Abd al-Malik (b. al-Muhallab) with them. Ḥumayd said to them, "I adjure you by God not to violate the mission on which you were sent by the Caliph, for Yazīd (b. al-Muhallab) is well disposed toward you, although that one and the members of his household have always been our enemies. I adjure you by God not to listen to what he says." But they rejected Ḥumayd's plea and took him with them. Eventually, they delivered him to 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Sulaymān al-Kalbi, who had been sent to Khurāsān by Yazīd b. 'Abd al-Malik to serve as his governor there. When 'Abd al-Rahmān learned that Yazīd b. al-Muhallab had renounced his allegiance to Yazīd b. 'Abd al-Malik, he wrote to the Caliph as follows: "Holy war against those who have opposed you is dearer to me than my appointment in Khurāsān, for which I have no need. Therefore, count me among those whom you are sending to me in order to fight against Yazīd b. al-Muhallab." 'Abd al-Rahmān sent Ḥumayd b. 'Abd al-Malik (b. al-Muhallab) to Yazīd (b. 'Abd al-Malik).

'Abd al-Ḥamīd b. 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Zayd b. al-Khaṭṭāb arrested Khalīd b. Yazīd b. al-Muhallab, who was in al-Kūfah, and Ḥammāl b. Zāhr al-Juʿfī, neither of whom had uttered a word against the Caliph—although they were aware of the fact that the Banū al-Muhallab had thrown off allegiance to him. He put them in chains and sent them to Yazīd b. 'Abd al-Malik, who imprisoned them, together (in Damascus); they died there, never having left the prison.

Yazīd b. 'Abd al-Malik sent some soldiers from the Syrian army to al-Kūfah in order to reassure (the Kūfans), to commend them for their obedience, and to promise to increase their stipends. Included among those who were sent was al-Qtāmī b. al-Ḥuṣayn, that is, Abū al-Sharqi—al-Sharqi's proper name is al-Walīd. When al-Qtāmī learned that Yazīd b. al-Muhallab had thrown off allegiance to the Caliph, he recited:

Perhaps my eye might see Yazīd, leading a large, powerful army.

414. Probably al-Ḥawārī b. Ziyād, who was from the tribe of 'Atik.
415. Text: Sulaymān; read Sulaym, following the Cairo ed.
416. The alternative vocalization—al-Qtāmī.
[An army] which lets you hear the earth reverberating noisily. [Yazid] is not sordid, weak, or envious,
Nor a coward in battle, trembling in fear.
You see the crowned ones prostrating themselves to him,
Bowing down, submissive, overpowered,
while others welcomed [him] with welcoming delegations.
He violates neither the pact nor the stipulations of people who were of a kingly and good breed.
Every day you see them celebrating a holiday, having slaughtered their enemies deliberately.

Subsequently, al-Quṭāmī traveled to al-‘Aqr, where he witnessed the fighting between Yazid b. al-Muhallab and Maslamah is the discrepancy between al-Quṭāmī’s poetry and his actions!”
Yazid b. ‘Abd al-Malik sent al-‘Abbās b. al-Walid leading four thousand horsemen without any infantry, hurrying toward al-Ḥirah in an effort to get there before Yazid b. al-Muhallab did.
Then, Maslamah b. ‘Abd al-Malik and regiments of the Syrian army advanced and seized al-Jazirah along the bank of the Euphrates. The Baṣrān army rallied to Yazid b. al-Muhallab, who appointed his own governors over al-Ahwāz, Fārs, and Kirmān.
These provinces were governed by al-Jarrāḥ b. ‘Abdallāh al-Hakamī—until he was recalled by ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Azīz; [then] by ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. Nu‘aym al-Azdī, who was in charge of prayer, and by ‘Abd al-Raḥmān al-Qushayrī, who had been put in charge of the fiscal administration by Yazid b. ‘Abd al-Malik.
Mudrik b. al-Muhallab advanced, reaching Ra’s al-Mafāzah.
Then ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. Nu‘aym sent an agent to say to the Banū Tamīm, “Mudrik b. al-Muhallab seeks to stir up war among you.
But you live in a peaceful and obedient country and you care for

418. Text: 'adidān, “equal”; read ṭa‘idūdan, following the Cairo ed.
419. See text below, II/1395ff., sub anno 102.
420. Al-‘Abbās b. al-Walid was an Umayyad general, son of the Caliph, al-Walid
I. See EP, s.v. al-‘Abbās b. al-Walid.
421. An administrative district between al-巴士rah and Fārs. See Yāqūt, Mu‘jam,
1, 284–86; EP, s.v. al-Ahwāz.
422. Al-Mafāzah [the wilderness] is the name of the Great Desert of Khurāsān that stretches across the high plateau of Iran from northwest to southeast. It is approximately eight hundred miles long. See Le Strange, Lands, 322–28; Barthold, Geography, 133–35.
the unity of the community." They set out at night in order to confront Mudrik. But the Azd learned of this, and approximately two thousand of their horsemen set out and intercepted the Banu Tamim before they reached Ra's al-Mafazah. The Azd asked the Banu Tamim, "What has brought you here, and what has caused you to come to his place?" They made some excuses without acknowledging that they had come out in order to slay Mudrik b. al-Muhallab. The Azd said to them, "We know that you have come out to confront our leader. Look, there he is, nearby. What do you want?"

Then the Azd left and joined up with Mudrik b. al-Muhallab at Ra's al-Mafazah. They said to him, "You are dearer to us and more esteemed than any man. Your brother has revolted, declaring war on the Caliph. If God grants him victory, that will be good for us, for we are the quickest to come to you, O family of al-Muhallab, and the most ready to do that. In the other case, by God, there shall be no solace for you in our misfortune." Upon hearing this, Mudrik resolved to leave. The following was recited by Thabit Qutnah, that is, Thabit b. Ka'b, from the tribe of Azd, from al-'Atik:424

Did you not see that the Dawsar protected their brother, when the Tamim had massed to slay him? They saw the blue spearheads surrounding him, and a tribe whose sacred precincts are inviolable. (I mean) Dawsar's two branches: Shunû'ah and 'Umrân b. Hazm.

There the glory and the most noble descent lie.

They did not attack, but were held back by the spears of the Azd and its long-standing invincibility. We turned Mudrik back truly and properly, without any wound on his face from you. With horses, like divining arrows, let free with their riders on a piece of land whose parts are rich with grass.

423. Text: li-yutlîfû. The Cairo ed. reads li-yutlîfû, probably a typographical error for li-yatalaqqaw, "to meet." Azdi, Ta'rikh, 8, has li-liqā'i, "to confront."

424. Thabit Qutnah was a poet and cavalier who was a companion of Yazid b. al-Muhallab. See Ibn Qutaybah, Shi'ir, II, 630–31, no. 117; Aghâni (Beirut), XIV, 247–65.
On their backs are every haughty and mighty Dawsari who does not flee or leave his place in battle. By means of them fools are put right by reproach, until you begin to see fools restrained by wise censure.\textsuperscript{425}

According to Hishām—Abū Mikhna\-f—Mu'ādh b. Sa'd: When the army of al-Baṣrah had assembled, Yazīd stood before them and praised God. After informing them that he was summoning them to the Book of God and the \textit{sunnah} of His Prophet, Muḥammad,\textsuperscript{426} he incited them to holy war, claiming that those who fought in the holy war against the Syrian army would receive a greater reward than those who fought against the Turks and the Daylamis.\textsuperscript{427}

Our source continued: I entered the mosque with al-Ḥasan al-Baṣrī, whose hand was on my shoulder.\textsuperscript{428} He asked me, “Look around. Do you recognize anyone?” I replied, “No, by God, I don’t.” Al-Ḥasan said, “By God, these people are transgressors.”\textsuperscript{429} We then made our way forward until we reached the pulpit. I heard [Yazīd] mention the Book of God and the \textit{sunnah} of His Prophet. Then al-Ḥasan raised his voice and exclaimed, “By God, we have seen you as both governor and governed, and that does not suit you.” At that, we jumped on al-Ḥasan, grabbing his hand and covering his mouth, and made him sit down. By God, we were sure that Yazīd had heard him, even though he did not pay any attention to him and continued his sermon. Our source said: Then we went out to the gate of the mosque where, lo and behold, al-Naḍr b. Anas b. Mālik\textsuperscript{430} was standing at the gate, saying, “O servants of God, what prevents you from responding to the Book of God and the \textit{sunnah} of His Prophet? By God, none of us has seen the likes of that one (that is, Yazīd) since the day you were born—except during the caliphate of 'Umar b. 'Abd \textsuperscript{426} It was customary for rebels of the Umayyad period, whatever their sectarian stance, to make a call to the Book of God and the precedent of the Prophet, the collocation stood for justice. See Crone and Hinds, \textit{God's Caliph}, 61, 66.

\textsuperscript{427} Turks and Daylamis were non-Muslims.

\textsuperscript{428} The context suggests that al-Ḥasan had gone blind, a point that I am unable to corroborate.

\textsuperscript{429} Text: \textit{al-a'tā}. The Cairo ed. reads \textit{al-ghuthā}, “the scum of the earth.”

\textsuperscript{430} For information on this figure, see al-Dhahabi, \textit{Kāshif}, III, 203, no. 5926.
The Caliphate of Yazid b. ‘Abd al-Malik b. Marwān

124 The Caliphate of Yazid b. ‘Abd al-Malik b. Marwān

al-‘Azīz.” Al-Ḥasan exclaimed, “Praise be to God. Al-Naḍr b. Anas, too, has testified (in favor of Yazid).”

According to Hishām—Abū Mikhnaf—al-Muthannā b. ‘Abdal-lāh: Al-Ḥasan al-Baṣrī passed by the soldiers, who had arranged themselves in two rows and raised the standards and spears in anticipation of Yazīd’s emergence. They were saying, “Yazid has summoned us to the example of the two ‘Umars.”431 Al-Ḥasan said, “Only yesterday Yazid was striking off the heads of those whom you see here and sending them to the Marwānids, seeking thereby to win the approval of the Umayyads. But when he became angry, he lifted up a stick, tied some rags to it, and said, ‘I have thrown off allegiance to (the Marwānids), so you do the same.’” Those people said, “Yes.” Then al-Ḥasan said, “I summon you to the example of the two ‘Umars, which requires that chains be put on (Yazid’s) legs and that he be sent back to the prison in which Umar had imprisoned him.” After hearing this, some soldiers who supported al-Ḥasan said to him, “By God, it appears, Abū Saʿīd, as if you approve of the Syrian army.” To which he replied, “I approve of the Syrian army! May God afflict them and render them hideous! Are they not the ones who desecrated the sacred precinct of the Messenger of God, slaughtering its inhabitants for three days and three nights, declaring them lawful for their Nabataeans and Copts, carrying off free, pious women, and not holding back from violating the honor of any sacred thing? Then they went to God’s sacred house and destroyed the Ka’bah, lighting fires amidst its stones and coverings. May the curse of God and the evil of the (Last) Abode be upon them!”432

Our source continued: Then Yazīd left al-Baṣrah, having appointed Marwān b. al-Muhallab as his governor. Taking weapons and the contents of the Public Treasury with him, he set out for Wāsiṭ. Now, as he was turning in the direction of Wāsiṭ he sought the counsel of his officers, saying, “Give me your advice, for the Syrian army is advancing quickly in this direction.” Habib433—and others—advised him as follows: “We think that you should 432. The Syrian troops of the Umayyads ravaged Mecca in 64 (683) and 74 (694). See EP, s.v. Ka’ba.

433. Habib b. al-Muhallab was Yazīd’s brother.
leave (al-Basrah) and go to Fārs, where you can seize the mountain roads and passes and draw near to Khurāsān. In this way, you will outlast the enemy, so that when the army of al-jībāl[434] is deployed around you, you will control the fortresses and strongholds.” He replied, “I do not agree with your recommendation, which is unacceptable to me. You seek to turn me into a bird on a mountaintop.”

Then Ḥabīb said to him:

The plan that should have been adopted at the outset is no longer feasible. When you took control of al-Basrah, I ordered you to send horsemen led by members of your household back to al-Kūfah, where ‘Abd al-Ḥamīd b. ‘Abd al-Raḥmān (is the governor). Earlier, you passed by him with seventy foot soldiers, and he was unable to defeat you. He would have had even less success against a large number of your horsemen. In this way, we would have beaten the Syrian army to al-Kūfah, where the great majority of its eminent people accept you; indeed, most of them would prefer to be governed by you than by the Syrians. But since you did not obey me, I now advise you as follows: send some of your most accomplished horsemen to al-Jazirah, together with the members of your household. Let them make their way there quickly and occupy one of its fortresses. You yourself should follow them. Thus, when the Syrian army approaches, looking for you, they will not escape any of your regiments in al-Jazirah. As they advance toward you, they will be bogged down with your cavalry, who will keep them away from you until you come to them, at which point you will be joined by those of your tribesmen who are in Mosul.[436] The armies of Iraq and of the frontiers will be deployed 434. Al-jībāl is the broad mountain region stretching across from the plains of Iraq in the west to the Great Desert of Khurāsān in the east. See Yāqūt, Mu’jam, II, 99–100; Le Strange, Lands, 185; EP, s.v. Djibāl.

435. This is a conjectural translation. The text is yanfaddana ilayka, literally, “scattered around you.” Compare Kūfī, Futūḥ, VIII, 12 (wa-ahl al-jībāl ma’aka, “and the army of al-jībāl will be with you”); Azdī, Ta’rikh, 9 (yanfaddna ilayka, “they will hasten toward you”); Ibn al-Athīr, Kāmil, V, 76 (ya’tūna ilayka, “they will come to you”).

436. The capital of the Diyar Rabi’ah, located on the west bank of the Tigris, opposite the ancient Niniveh. See EI, s.v. Mosul.
around you, and you will engage them in battle in a land of abundance and cheap prices, having put all of Iraq behind you.

He said, "I do not want to divide my forces." When he arrived in Wāsiṭ, he remained there only a few days.

According to Abū Ja'far (al-Ṭabarī): In this year, 'Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Dāhkhāk b. Qays al-Fihrī led the pilgrimage. This was related to me by Aḥmad b. Thābit—his source—Ishāq b. 'Isā—Abū Ma'shar. A similar report was transmitted by Muḥammad b. 'Umar.

'Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Dāhkhāk was the governor of Medina on behalf of Yazīd b. 'Abd al-Malik, while Mecca was governed by 'Abd al-'Azīz b. 'Abdallāh b. Khālid b. Asīd. In al-Kūfah, 'Abd al-Ḥamīd b. 'Abd al-Rahmān served as governor, and al-Sha'bi was in charge of the judicial administration. Al-Baṣrah had been taken over by Yazīd b. al-Muhallab. 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Nu'aym was in charge of Khurāsān.

438. Text: fi ardin raf'ati-l-sīr, "a land of high prices." The text should be amended to read fi ardin tafīghati-l-sīr. I owe this point to Professor Abbas.
One of the events of this year was the march undertaken by al-‘Abbās b. al-Walid b. ‘Abd al-Malik and Maslamah b. ‘Abd al-Malik in the direction of Yazid b. al-Muhallab, having been sent to fight him by Yazid b. ‘Abd al-Malik.

In this year, Yazid b. al-Muhallab was slain in the month of Safar (August 11–September 8).⁴³⁹

The Slaying of Yazid b. al-Muhallab

According to Hishām—Abū Mikhnaf—Muʿādh b. Saʿīd: Yazid b. al-Muhallab decided to leave Wāsīṭ in order to confront Maslamah b. ‘Abd al-Malik and al-‘Abbās. He designated his son, Muʿāwiyah, as his representative in that city, entrusting him with the Public Treasury, the coffers, and the prisoners of war, and he dispatched an advance party headed by his brother, ‘Abd al-Malik.

Then he set out and, after passing by Fam al-Nil, he set up camp at al-'Aqr. Meanwhile, Maslamah advanced, marching along one of the banks of the Euphrates until he reached al-Anbār, where, after laying a bridge over the river, he crossed over at a point near a village known as Fārīt. Then he advanced until he encountered Yazid b. al-Muhallab.

Yazid's brother, 'Abd al-Malik, who had been sent ahead in the direction of al-Kūfah, was confronted in Sūrā by al-'Abbās b. al-Walid. The two armies engaged in battle after arranging themselves in ranks. The Baṣran army charged, putting (the Syrians) to flight. With al-'Abbās were some soldiers from the Banū Tamīm and Qays, who had fled from Yazid, from al-Baṣrah; indeed, there were a good number of them with al-'Abbās, including Huraym b. Abī Ṭahmah al-Mujāší'ī. When the Syrian army was put to flight in that manner, Huraym b. Abī Ṭahmah called out to them, "O Syrians, fear God, fear God, and do not abandon us!" 'Abd al-Malik's soldiers had forced them to the river. In response, they called out to him, "Don't worry. It is customary for the Syrian army to feign defeat at the outset of battle. But assistance is on its way."

Then the Syrian army gained the offensive, exposing 'Abd al-Malik's forces and putting them to flight. Among those slain was al-Mantūf, a client of Bakr b. Wā'il. Al-Farazdaq recited the following lines in an attempt to incite the Bakr b. Wā'il:

The Bakr b. Wā'il weep for al-Mantūf, but they don't let anyone cry for the two sons of Misma'.
Two youths who grew up amid the fires of war and accomplished noble deeds before their beards began to grow.
Were Mālik and Ibn Mālik alive,

441. 'Aqr of Babel was near Karbalā', in the administrative district of al-Kūfah. See Yāqūt, Mu'jam, IV, 136; Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 316, n. 1.
442. A town on the east bank of the Euphrates, near the 'Isā Canal. See EP, s.v. al-Anbār; Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 316, n. 1.
443. There is no entry in Yāqūt's geographical dictionary for this village.
444. An old Jewish town on the upper Sūrā Canal, near the site of the later Qaṣr Ibn Hubayrah. See Yāqūt, Mu'jam, III, 278; Le Strange, Lands, 70–72.
then they would have lit two fires whose flames would have risen high.\footnote{See \textit{Diwān al-Farazdaq}, II, 203.}

The two sons of Misma' were Mālīk b. Misma' and 'Abd al-Malik b. Misma', who were slain by Mu‘āwiyyah b. Yazīd b. al-Muhallab. In response to al-Farazdaq, al-Ja'd b. Dirham,\footnote{See \textit{EF}, s.v. Ibn Dirham.} a client of (Suwayd b. Ghafalāh)\footnote{The lacuna in the text is filled in by the editor of the Cairo ed.} from the tribe of Hamdān, recited the following lines:

\begin{quote}
We weep for al-Mantūf because he aided his tribe, but we do not weep for the two dead ones who disgraced their father.\footnote{The text, \textit{al-shā'idayn}, should be amended to read \textit{al-shā'inayn}. I owe this point to Professor Abbas.}

The two of them sought the ruin of the Bakr b. Wā'il, and the strength of Tamīm, had their home been attacked. May they not find any comfort from God for even an hour, and may the eyes of the mourner who cries for them continue to shed tears forever.

Should we cry for them deceitfully, if ever we cry, when they met their death having deceived us too?
\end{quote}

'Abd al-Malik b. al-Muhallab rejoined his brother in al-'Aqr, where he ordered 'Abdallāh b. Ḥayyān al-'Abdī to cross over the river to the side where the Ṣarāt al-Aqṣā\footnote{The Ṣarāt Canal branched off from the Ḥisā Canal just above the town of al-Muhawwal. Yaqūt mentions two canals by this name, the Greater and Smaller Ṣarāt. See \textit{Mu'jam}, III, 399–400; Le Strange, \textit{Lands}, 66–67.} is located—there was a bridge between the two places. 'Abdallāh, together with his troops and one of Yazīd's units, set up camp there and dug a trench (around the camp). But Maslamah, accompanied by Sa'id b. 'Amr al-Ḥarashi, crossed over the water—some authorities maintain that it was al-Waddāḥ who crossed over—and the two sides came face to face.

Meanwhile, Yazīd was joined by a large number of soldiers from al-Kūfah and from al-Jībāl, and soldiers from the frontiers were making their way towards him. He put 'Abdallāh b. Sufyān b. Yazīd b. al-Mughaffal al-Azdī in command of the Kūfān contingents that had joined him, as well as of the Medinese contingent; he put al-Nu‘mân b. Ibrâhim b. al-Ashtar al-Nakha‘î in command of the contingent from the Madhâjj and Asad; he put Muḥammad b. Ishaq b. Muḥammad b. al-Ash‘ath in command of the contingent from the Kindah and Rabi‘ah; and he put Ḥanzalah b. ‘Attâb b. Warqâ‘ al-Tamimi in command of the contingent from the Tamîm and Hamdân. He brought all of them together with al-Mufaḍḍal b. al-Muhallâb. 450

According to Hishâm b. Muḥammad—Abû Mikhnaﬁ—al-‘Alâ’ b. Zuhayr: 451 By God, we were sitting with Yazid that day when suddenly he asked, “Do you think that they have one thousand soldiers?”452 To which Ḥanzalah b. ‘Attâb replied, “Yes, by God. They probably have four thousand.” He said, “By God, they have never attacked with even a thousand men. By God, I reckon that there are one hundred and twenty thousand soldiers listed in my military register. But by God, I wish that I had my tribesmen from Khurāsān with me at this hour, instead of them.”

According to Hishâm—Abû Mikhnaﬁ: Then he stood up on that day, inciting us for battle. Later, he said, as he put it to us, “Those soldiers will not be turned away from their misguided actions except by a thrust into their eyes453 and a blow on the head with the sword.” Then he added, “I have been told about this yellow locust”—that is, Maslamah b. ‘Abd al-Malik—“and that she-camel slaughterer from Thamûd,”454 that is, al-‘Abbas b. al-Walid, who had blue eyes and red skin, his mother being a Greek. “By God, Sulaymân wanted to negate his lineage until I intervened on his behalf, whereupon the Caliph allowed him to adhere to his lineage. But now I learn that the two of them have no other objective but to search for me throughout the land. By God, were they to gather all of mankind,455 while I was by myself, I would not quit the field of

450. Perhaps this should read: “under the command of al-Mufaḍḍal.”
451. Text: Ruḥayr, read Zuhayr, following the Cairo ed.
452. Text: ʿalf sayf yudrabu bihi. Literally: “a thousand swords capable of being struck.”
454. The tribe of Thamûd, which disappeared from Arabia some time before the appearance of Islam, was punished because one of its members had hamstrung a sacred camel. See El, s.v. Thamûd.
battle until victory had been achieved by one side or the other.” They said, “We fear that you will impose hardships upon us, just as 'Abd al-Rahmân b. Muḥammad456 did.” Yazîd said, “'Abd al-Rahmân b. Muḥammad brought shame upon his family and upon his noble reputation. Was he able to exceed his appointed time?” Then he stepped down.

Our source continued: We were joined by 'Āmir b. al-'Amaythâl, a soldier from the Azd, who had combined several military units. He came to Yazîd and swore the oath of allegiance to him. The wording of the oath of allegiance sworn to Yazîd was as follows: “You swear allegiance to the Book of God and to the sunnah of His Prophet that no army will pillage our country or our headquarters and that we will never again be subject to the behavior of that sinner al-Ḥajjâj. We accept the allegiance of anyone who will swear on these terms and we will engage in holy war against anyone who refuses, putting God between him and us.” Then he would ask, “Do you swear allegiance to us?” If they responded affirmatively, he would accept allegiance from them.

Meanwhile, 'Abd al-Ḥamîd b. 'Abd al-Rahmân had ordered his troops to set up camp in al-Nukhaylah.457 He sent some men to the water, and they broke through the bank of the river, flooding the area between al-Kūfah and Yazîd b. al-Muhallab, so as to prevent him from reaching the city. 'Abd al-Ḥamîd also established observation points and lookouts in the vicinity of al-Kūfah in order to prevent the Kufan army from joining Yazîd.

'Abd al-Ḥamîd sent Maslamah a military unit from al-Kūfah commanded by Sayf b. Ḥanî' al-Hamdâni. After flattering the soldiers and praising them for their fidelity, Maslamah exclaimed, “By God, how few are the number of those who have come to us from al-Kūfah!” 'Abd al-Ḥamîd learned of this and he sent a second, larger unit commanded by Sabrah b. 'Abd al-Rahmân b. Mikhnaf al-Azdi. When Sabrah arrived, Maslamah praised him, saying, “This man's household has obedience and heroic deeds. Attach to him all of the soldiers from the Kufan army that are here.” Then Maslamah sent a message to 'Abd al-Ḥamîd b. 'Abd al-456. That is, 'Abd al-Rahmân b. Muḥammad b. al-Ash’ath, who led a revolt against al-Ḥajjâj in 80–82 or 83/699–700 or 702. See text above, II/1042ff., sub anno 80; El2, s.v. ibn al-Ash’ath; Crone, Slaves, 110–11.

Rahmân, dismissing him. In his place, he appointed Muḥammad b. 'Amr b. al-Walîd b. 'Uqbah, who is known as Dhū al-Shâmah.458

Yazid b. al-Muhallab summoned the chiefs of his army and addressed them as follows: “I have decided to assemble twelve thousand soldiers and to send them with Muḥammad b. al-Muhallab. They will attack Maslamah by night, taking with them packsaddles and containers for use in filling in their trench. They will engage the enemy in battle at the trench throughout the night, during which time I will be sending reinforcements to Muḥammad. The next morning I will rush out to them, leading the soldiers, and we will engage them in battle. I hope that God will grant us victory over them.”

But al-Samayda' objected, “We have summoned (the Syrians) to the Book of God and to the sunnah of His Prophet, Muḥammad, and they claim to have accepted this from us. Thus, we should not engage in deceit or treachery, nor should we wish any evil upon them until they reject what they claim to have accepted from us.”

Abū Ru’bah, the leader of a group of Murji’ites,459 who was accompanied by his supporters, said, “Al-Samayda’ is correct. That is the proper course.” But Yazid exclaimed, “Alas! Do you really believe that the Umayyads will act in accordance with the Book and the sunnah when they have neglected both for as long as they have been around? They say460 to you, ‘We accept you,’ and they claim not to want to exercise their authority except in accordance with your orders and your instructions. But, in fact, they seek to drive you away from them so that they might engage in treachery. Therefore, do not let them deceive you first. Beat them to it. I have had experience with the Marwānīds and, by God, none of them is more devious or more deeply immersed in falsehood461 than that yellow locust”—that is, Maslamah. But 458. Dhū al-Shâmah means: “the one with the birthmark.” See text above, II/1380, sub anno tot.

459. The Murji’ites were an early Islamic sect that advocated postponement (iṣṭâ‘) of any decision about a grave sinner. See EI, s.v. al-Murjī‘a. On Abū Ru’bah, see Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 317.

460. Text: lam yaqulu, “they did not say”; read yaqulu, following the Cairo ed.

461. Text: ab’ada ghadaran. Ibn al-Athîr, Kâmîl, V, 80, has ab’ada ghadaton, “more treacherous.”
they said, "We do not agree to act in that manner until they reject what they claim to have accepted from us." Meanwhile, Marwān b. al-Muhallab was in al- Başrah, inciting the soldiers to go to war against the Syrian army and sending soldiers to Yazid. Al-Ḥasan al- Başrī, on the other hand, was imploring the soldiers not to rise with Yazid b. al-Muhallab.

According to Abū Mikhna—‘Abd al-Ḥamid al- Başrī: Al-Ḥasan al- Başrī was saying at that time:

O people, stay in your homes and restrain yourselves. Fear God, your Lord, and do not kill one another on account of this transient world or on account of greed for trifling things that will not survive for the people who seek them, for God is not pleased with them because of their personal acquisitions. There never was a civil war except that most of the rebels were preachers, poets, fools, drifters, and conceited men. No one is safe from that [that is, civil war], except the unknown person who is hidden and the God-fearing person who is well-known. Therefore, let the hidden person among you adhere to the truth and let him hold himself back from the things of this world over which the people are contending with one another. By God, let him be satisfied with God's good opinion of him, as a sign of honor, and let that be sufficient for him in place of the things of this world. As for the person among you who is well-known and distinguished, he avoids the things of this world over which his peers vie with one another, seeking thereby to please God. Oh, how happy and righteous he is, and how greatly will God magnify his reward and lead him along His path! Tomorrow, that is to say, on the Day of Resurrection, that person will have the greatest satisfaction and will be the one most welcomed by God.

When Marwān b. al-Muhallab was informed of Al-Ḥasan's statement, he stood up, as was his custom, to deliver the sermon. After ordering the soldiers to be diligent and to assemble together, he said to them, 'I have learned that that errant, hypocritical shaykh”—he did not mention his name—“is discouraging the soldiers. By God, if his neighbor had stolen a piece of wood from the roof of his house, the neighbor’s nose would still be bleeding. Does he deny to us and to the people of our town the right to seek our welfare and to refute injustices that we have suffered? By God, if he does not stop mentioning us and likening us to the vile ones of al- Ubullah and the Nabataeans of the Başrān Euphrates—people who have no connection to us and who have not received a favor from a single one of us, I shall finish him off harshly.”

When al-Hasan was informed of Marwan’s remarks, he said, “By God, it does not displease me that God should honor me by chastising him.” Then some soldiers who were his supporters said, “If he were to have evil designs on you, and you wanted us to, we would defend you.” To which he replied, “In that case I would cause you to do the thing that I have forbidden you to do. I have ordered you not to kill one another for the sake of someone else. (And now it is as if) I am calling on you to kill one another for my sake.” Marwan b. al-Muhallab was informed of this, and he became more violent with them, frightened them, and made demands on them, forcing them to disperse. Al-Hasan continued to make speeches, but Marwan b. al-Muhallab avoided him.

On Friday, the fourteenth of Safar (August 25), eight days after Yazid b. al-Muhallab and Maslamah had first encountered one another, Maslamah ordered al-Wackjah to take the Waclcjahiyyah regiment in boats and to set fire to the bridge; he complied with the order. Maslamah then emerged from his camp and, after preparing the Syrian army, he marched forward with them in the direction of Yazid b. al-Muhallab. He stationed Jabalah b. Makhramah al-Kindi on his right flank and al-Hudhayl b. Zufar b. al-

466. Text: la-unḥiyanna ’alayhi mibradan khasahanan, literally, “I will finish him off with a rough file.” See Kūfi, Futūḥ, VIII, 13: illā nālāhu minnā mā yaktrahu, “We will see that he comes to an unpleasant end”; Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 221, reads la-af’alanna wa-la-af’alanna, “I will do this and that to him.”

468. Text: dūni. Kūfi, Futūḥ, VIII, 14, has li-ajli, “because of me.”
Hāríth al-‘Āmīrī on his left. Al-‘Abbās stationed Sayf b. Ḥānī’ al-Hamdānī on his right flank and Suwayd b. al-Qa'qā' al-Tamīmī on his left. Maslamah was in command of the soldiers. Yazīd b. al-Muhallab emerged from his camp, having put Ḥabīb b. al-Muhallab on his right flank and al-Mufaḍḍal b. al-Muhallab on his left flank. The Kūfī army was with al-Mufaḍḍal, who was in command of it; with him also were a substantial number of horsemen from the tribe of Rabī‘ah. He was adjacent to al-‘Abbās b. al-Walīd.

According to Abū Mikhnaf—al-Ghanawi—Hishām—I suspect that al-Ghanawi is al-‘Alā’ b. al-Minhāl: One of the Syrians went out, challenging his opponents to a single combat, but no one accepted his challenge. Then Muḥammad b. al-Muhallab stepped forward and attacked him. The Syrian protected himself with his hand—he was wearing a glove made of iron—but Muḥammad stabbed him, tearing the iron glove, and quickly thrust the sword into his hand.469 As the man held on to his horse's neck, Muḥammad advanced and stabbed him, saying, “A reaping hook would have served you better.”470 According to one source, that man was Ḥayyān al-Nabāṭī.471

Al-Waḍḍāḥ approached the bridge and set fire to it, sending smoke billowing in the air. Meanwhile, the war had begun and the two sides were engaged in light fighting. But when the soldiers saw the smoke and were told that the bridge had been set on fire, they fled. After learning that the soldiers had fled, Yazīd exclaimed, “What have they fled from? Is this the type of battle from which one flees?” Someone said to him, “When they were told that the bridge had been set on fire, not a single one of them held firm in battle.” He said, “May God render them hideous! [They are like] an insect that flies off when some smoke is di-

---

469. That the unnamed Syrian was the standard-bearer of the Syrian army is suggested by the fact that he was the first to attack Yazīd’s army, also he was wearing an iron glove. It was customary for one army to try to cut down the flag of the other by either severing or severely wounding the hand of the standard-bearer. For further details on this aspect of Islamic warfare, see Juynboll, “The Qur‘ān Reciter on the Battlefield and Concomitant Issues,” 25–26.

470. That is, you are better suited for farming than for fighting duels. See Kūfī, Futūḥ, VIII, 17.

471. Nabataeans were viewed as peasants. On Ḥayyān, see text above, II/1290ff., sub anno 96.
rected towards it." He emerged together with his supporters, his clients, and his fellow tribesmen, saying, "Strike off the heads of the deserters." They complied with his order until there were many heads, which he accepted from them in huge piles. Then he said, "Leave them alone for by God I hope that God will never again cause me to occupy the same spot as they do. Leave them alone, may God expose them to hardships.472 (They are like) sheep attacked by a wolf." Yazid would never consider fleeing from battle.

Earlier, while in Wäsiṭ before arriving in al-'Aqr, Yazid had been approached by Yazid b. al-Ḥakam b. Abi al-'Aṣ473—his mother was the daughter of al-Zibriqān al-Sa‘di—who recited:

Verily, the kingship of the Marwānids has come to an end.

If you have not noticed that, then notice it now.

Yazid said, "I hadn't noticed." Then Yazid b. al-Ḥakam b. Abi al-'Aṣ al-Thaqafi recited:

Live as a king or die with dignity, for if you die with your sword unsheathed in your hand, you will be forgiven.

He said, "That may be."

When Yazid went out to his forces and was confronted by the rout, he asked al-Samayda', "Who was right—you or I? Didn't I tell you what the army had in mind?" He replied, "Yes, by God, you were right. I am here with you and I will not leave you. I am at your command." He said, "If you will not leave me, then attack," so he attacked, leading his forces. Then someone came to Yazid b. al-Muhallab and announced that Ḥabib had been slain.

According to Hishām—Abū Mikhnaf—Thabit, a client of Zuhayr b. Salamah al-Azdi: I testify that when Yazid was informed of Ḥabib's death, I heard him say, "Life is not worth living without Ḥabib! By God, I have always hated life after a defeat and, by God, this only increases my hatred. Advance!" By God, we 472. Text: yurahhimuhumu-llāhi, "may God have mercy on them." This should be amended to read barramahumum-llāhi. I owe this point to Professor Abbas.

473. Yazid b. al-Ḥakam was an Umayyad poet who died in 105/723. See Sezgin, GAS, II, 332.
knew that Yazid was desperate, and those who did not want to fight began to withdraw and slip away in secret. Nevertheless, a substantial number of soldiers remained with Yazid as he approached his destiny. Whenever he passed the cavalry, he put them to flight; the units of the Syrian army turned away from him and from the path of his soldiers. Abū Ru'bah al-Murji’i approached Yazid and said, “The soldiers have fled.” I was listening to him as he was indicating this to him. Abū Ru'bah asked, “Do you want to go to Wāsit, a fortified city where you might remain until reinforcements arrive from the army of al-Baṣrah and until the armies of ‘Umān and al-Baḥrayn arrive by sea? You can dig a trench [around the city].” Yazid replied, “What a bad suggestion! Are you suggesting that to me? Death would be far easier for me.” Abū Ru’bah said, “I am afraid for you, for reasons that are known to you. Do you not see the iron mountains around you?” He was gesturing at him. Yazid said to him, “I don’t care whether they are mountains of iron or mountains of fire! Leave us if you do not want to fight.” Our source added: Yazid quoted the verses of Hārithah b. Badr al-Ghudānī.475 Abū Ja’far (al-Ṭabari) said: That is a mistake. The verses are by al-A’shā:476

Is it with death that some people477 threaten me, when I see that those who cower in death suffer anyway? A death I die not powerless is not a shame when the soul is taken away by its death.478

Yazid b. al-Muhallab advanced toward Maslamah, riding his gray horse, oblivious to everyone else. When he drew near, Maslamah went to his horse in order to mount it.479 But the Syrian

474. ‘Umān and al-Baḥrayn are on the mainland of eastern Arabia, embracing the oases of Qaṣīf and Ḥajār. See EI2, s.v. al-Baḥrayn.

476. Maymūn b. Qays al-A’shā was a prominent poet of the tribe of Qays b. Tha’labah; he died ca. A.D. 625. See EI2, s.v. al-A’shā; Aghani (Beirut), IX, 104–25.

477. Text: ‘ibād; the Cairo ed. has ‘ubād, referring to the Banū ‘Ubad.

478. See Kūfi, Futūḥ, VIII, 19.

479. It is reported that Yazid challenged Maslamah to a single combat, but that he declined on the recommendation of his supporters. See Kūfi, Futūḥ, VIII, 17–18.
cavalry attacked Yazid and his forces, slaying Yazid b. al-Muhallab. Al-Samayda' and Muhammad b. al-Muhallab were also slain.

There was a man from the tribe of Kalb, from the Banu Jabir b. Zuhayr b. Janab al-Kalbi, by the name of al-Qahl b. Ayyash, who, when he saw Yazid, said, "O Syrians, by God, there is Yazid, and by God, either I will slay him or he will slay me. He has soldiers with him, so who will attack with me and engage his forces so that I might reach him?" Some of his comrades said to him, "We will attack with you." They did. All of them attacked, and they fought one another for a while. When the dust rose, the two sides cleared themselves away from Yazid, who lay dead, and from al-Qahl b. Ayyash, who was on the point of death. Al-Qahl signaled to his comrades with his head, showing them the spot where Yazid lay, and said to them, "I slew him." Then he pointed at himself so as to indicate that he had been mortally wounded by Yazid. Maslamah passed by al-Qahl b. Ayyash, who was lying on the ground next to Yazid, and al-Qahl said, "I think that (Yazid) is the one who mortally wounded me." A client of the Banu Murrah brought forward Yazid's head, and someone asked him, "Did you slay him?" He replied, "No." The head was brought to Maslamah, who could not identify it for sure. Al-Ḥawāri b. Ziyād b. Amr al-ʿAtaki said to him, "Order that his head be washed and wrapped in a turban." When this was done, Maslamah recognized it. He sent his head to Yazid b. ʿAbd al-Malik, with Khalid b. al-Walid b. ʿUqbah b. ʿAbī al-Muʿayt.

According to Abū Mikhnaf—Thābit, a client of Zuhayr: After Yazid was slain and the army defeated, al-Muʿaddal b. al-Muhallab continued to fight the Syrian army, unaware of the fact that Yazid was dead and the soldiers routed. He was riding a powerful, low-built horse, and in front him was a horse covered with a coat of mail. Every time he attacked it, it turned back and withdrew; then he withdrew. He would attack with soldiers from his forces so that he was in the middle of the army and then he would return to a spot behind his forces.Whenever he saw one of us turn his head, he would point to him with his hand, thereby indicating that he should not turn his head, so that the soldiers would direct their faces exclusively against their enemy.

480. It is also reported that Yazid b. al-Muhallab was slain by al-Hudhayl b. Zufar b. al-Hārith al-Kilābi. See Ibn al-Athir, Kāmil, V, 83.

Our source continued: We fought for a while. It was as if I were looking at 'Āmir b. al-'Amaythal al-Azdi as he brandished his sword, reciting:

The mother of the newborn child knew that I am not afraid to use the blade of the sword.

By God, we fought for an hour or so, and the horsemen from Rabi'ah were put to flight. By God, I don’t think that any of the Kūfan forces persevered greatly or fought vehemently. Then al-Mufaḍḍal stood before the Rabi'ah, brandishing a sword, and called out to them, “O tribe of Rabi'ah, attack, attack! By God, you never fled before, nor were you ignoble. That is not your custom. So do not let the Iraqi army be attacked from your side today. O Rabi'ah, my soul for you, persevere for a while.” Then they rallied around him and came back to him and, lo, your little rally\textsuperscript{481} took place.

We assembled, wanting to attack them, until al-Mufaḍḍal came. But someone asked him, “What are you doing here? Yazid, Ḥabib, and Muḥammad have all been slain, and the soldiers fled long ago.” The news spread among the soldiers, who then scattered, whereupon al-Mufaḍḍal set out on the road to Wāsit. I never saw an Arab of his stature who was more willing to engage in the actual fighting and to smite with his sword, or better at arraying his comrades for battle.

According to Abū Mikhnaf—Thābit, a client of Zuhayr: I passed by the defensive trench and, behold, above it was a wall on which men armed with arrows were standing. I was wearing a coat of mail, and they called out, “O you, wearing the coat of mail, where are you going?” The coat of mail that I was wearing was extremely heavy, and as soon as I had passed beyond them, I dismounted and threw off the coat of mail so as to lighten my horse’s burden.

\textsuperscript{481} This is a conjectural translation. The text is kuwayfatuka. Yāqūt mentions a place by the name of Kuwayfah ("little al-Kūfah") near Baziqiyyah. See Mu'jam, IV, 496.
The Syrian army reached Yazid b. al-Muhallab’s camp, where Abū Ru‘bah, the leader of the Murji‘ites, engaged them in combat for an hour or so, until most of (the Murji‘ites) had gone. The Syrians captured approximately three hundred men, and Maslamah sent them to Muḥammad b. ‘Amr b. al-Walid, who imprisoned them. When Muḥammad b. ‘Amr received a letter from Yazid b. ‘Abd al-Malik ordering him to slay the prisoners, he said to al-‘Uryān b. al-Haytham, the commander of his guard, “Take them out in groups of twenty and thirty.”

Our source continued: Approximately thirty men from the Banū Tamim stood up and said, “We led the soldiers in flight. Fear God and give us precedence. Send us out before the others (are slain).”482 Al-‘Uryān said to them, “Go out, in the name of God.”483 He brought them out to the square and sent a message to Muḥammad b. ‘Amr, informing him that he had brought them out (and informing him) of what they had said. But Muḥammad replied that al-‘Uryān should slay them.

According to Abū Mikhnaf—Najīb, Abū ‘Abdallāh, a client of Zuhayr: “By God, I was looking at them as they were exclaiming, ‘O God, we led the soldiers in flight, and this is our reward!'” No sooner had he finished with them than a messenger arrived with a letter from Maslamah in which he pardoned the prisoners and forbade their being slain. Ḥājib b. Dhubyān, from the Banū Māzin b. Mālik b. ‘Amr b. Tamim, recited:

By my life, [the tribe of] Mu‘ayyāt has waded in our blood with their swords until they were covered with muck.
The tribes have never been burdened with anything graver than [shedding] forbidden blood, or retaliation, when retaliation was sought.
All of you forbade shedding the blood of those who brandished their swords against you, but murder was committed against the cavaliers of your group.

482. The Banū Tamim may have expected to be spared because their flight facilitated the victory of the Syrian army.
483. Text: ’alā-smi-llāhī, which is equivalent to bismi-llāhī. The functions of ’alā and bi overlap to a certain extent in classical Arabic. See Hopkins, Studies, 125 [no. 119]; Lane, Lexicon, pt. 5, p. 2145.
Al-'Uryan protected the cavaliers of his tribe with their bodies.

How strange! Where is integrity and justice?484

Al-'Uryan used to say, 'By God, it was neither my intention nor wish (to slay) them, until they said, 'Give us precedence. Send us out.' I brought them out and dutifully informed the person who was charged with slaying them (that is, Muḥammad b. 'Amr), but he rejected their plea and issued the order to slay them. By God, despite what happened, I would not want a fellow tribesman to be killed in place of them. If they blame me, I am not one who heeds their reproach. So do not blame me excessively.'485

Maslamah advanced towards al-Ḥirah, where he set up camp. With him were approximately fifty prisoners whom he had kept with himself rather than send to al-Ḵūfah. When the soldiers saw that he intended to slay them, al-Ḥuṣayn b. Ḥammād al-Kalbi approached him and asked to be given three prisoners as a gift: Ziyād b. ʿAbd al-Rahmān al-Qushayrī, 'Utbah b. Muslim, and Ismāʿīl, a client of the family of the Banū 'Aqīl b. Masʻūd. Maslamah gave the three prisoners to al-Ḥuṣayn and complied with his followers' requests for the other prisoners.

When the news of Yazid's defeat reached Wāṣīt, Muʿāwiyah b. Yazid b. al-Muhallab took out thirty-two prisoners who were in his possession and slew them. Among those slain were 'Adi b. Arṭāt; Muḥammad b. ʿAdi b. Arṭāt; Mālik and ʿAbd al-Malik, the sons of Misma; 'Abdallāh b. ʿAzrah al-Baṣrī; ʿAbdallāh b. Wāʿil; and Ibn Abī Ḥādir al-Tamimi, from the Banū Usayyid b. ʿAmr b. Tamīm.486 These men had said to him, "Woe to thee! We think that you are killing us only because your father was slain. But killing us will be of no use to you in this world and it will be to your disadvantage in the next." But he slew all of the prisoners with the exception of Rabiʿ b. Ziyād b. al-Rabiʿ b. Anas b. al-Rayyān.487 When he passed over him, some men asked, "Did you forget him?" He replied, "I did not forget him, but I will not slay him for he is a noble shaykh from my tribe with a good reputation.

484. See Kūfī, Futūḥ, VIII, 20–21.
485. Text: wa-lā tukabbir 'alayya, "But do not praise me." This should be amended to read fa-lā yukaththar 'alayya." I owe this point to Professor Abbas.
486. See Ibn Khayyāt, Taʾrikh, I, 332–33; Yaʿqūbī, Taʾrikh, III, 54; Azdī, Taʾrikh, 12; FHA, 74; Ibn Kathīr, Bidāyah, IX, 221.
487. Text: al-Raffān; read al-Rayyān, following the Cairo ed.
and a mighty family. I cannot doubt his affection and I have no fear that he will turn against us."

Thābit Qutnāh recited, on the subject of the slaying of ‘Adi b. Arṭāt:
The slaying of al-Fazārī and his son, ‘Adi, did not make me happy, and I did not want Ibn Misma’ to be slain.
But, O Mu‘āwiyah, it was a mistake,
by which you misplaced my order.

Mu‘āwiyah (b. Yazīd) marched to al-BAṣrah carrying with him the Public Treasury488 and the coffers. When al-Mufaḍḍal b. al-Muhallab arrived, the entire Muhallab family was gathered in al-BAṣrah. Fearing that they would suffer the same fate as Yazīd, they prepared seagoing vessels, taking on all necessary provisions.

Earlier, Yazīd b. al-Muhallab had sent Wāda‘ b. Ḥumayd al-Azdi to serve as the governor of Qandābīl,489 saying to him, "I am going out to face the enemy and when I encounter them, I will not quit the field of battle until one side or the other prevails. If I am victorious, I will bestow honors upon you; if not, you will be in Qandābīl, so that the members of my household can go to you and fortify themselves there until such time as they are able to secure a guarantee of safe-conduct for themselves. As for me, I have chosen you for my household from all of my tribesmen and I trust that you will live up to my faith in you." Yazīd made him swear weighty oaths that he would serve as a faithful counselor to his household if they took refuge with him in their hour of need.

When the Muhallabids gathered in al-BAṣrah after the defeat, they loaded their families and their possessions on the seagoing vessels and put out to sea. Upon reaching al-Baḥrayn, they were told by Ḥarīm b. al-Qarār al-‘Abdi, who had been appointed governor of that province by Yazīd: "I advise you not to leave your boats, upon which you are dependent for your survival, for I fear that if you disembark from these boats, the soldiers will capture 488. Text: al-māl. See text below, II/1411, where a parallel passage reads bayt al-māl.

489. The capital of a district known as Nudhah in the province of Sind, Qandābīl is on the road from Bālis to Qusdār. See EP, s.v. al-Kandābīl; Barthold, Geography, 75; Yaqūt, Mu’jam, IV, 402.
you and bring you to the Marwānids." So they sailed on until they were opposite Kirmān, where they disembarked from the boats and loaded their families and possessions on horses and mules.

Earlier, Muʿāwiyyah b. Yazīd b. al-Muhallab had arrived in al-Baṣrah, carrying the coffers and the Public Treasury, acting as if he wanted to become the head of the family. But the Muhallabids assembled and said to al-Mufaḍḍal, "We accept you as our leader and our chief, even though you are only a young man of tender years, like one of your family's young slaves." Al-Mufaḍḍal continued to serve as their chief until they reached Kirmān, where he was joined by large numbers of runaway soldiers.

Maslamah b. ʿAbd al-Malik sent Mudrik b. Ḍabb al-Kalbi in pursuit of the Muhallabids and the runaway soldiers. Mudrik caught up with al-Mufaḍḍal b. al-Muhallab in Fārs after the latter had been joined by the runaway soldiers. He pursued them, finally overtaking them in ʿAqabah,490 where they attacked him, engaging him in a heated battle. Slain along with al-Mufaḍḍal b. al-Muhallab were al-Nuʿmān b. Ibrāhīm b. al-Ashtar al-Nakhaʿī and Muḥammad b. Iṣḥāq b. Muḥammad b. al-Asḥath. Taken prisoner were Ibn ʿṢūl, the King of Quhistān,491 and al-ʿĀliyah, al-Mufaḍḍal’s concubine. ʿUthmān b. Iṣḥāq b. Muḥammad b. al-Asḥath was severely wounded, but he fled to Hulwān,492 where he was slain when someone identified him; his head was sent to Maslamah in al-Ḥirah.

Some soldiers who had supported Yazīd b. al-Muhallab came back and asked for a guarantee of safe-conduct, which they received. Among these were Malik b. Ibrāhīm b. al-Ashtar and al-Ward b. ʿAbdallāh b. Ḥabib al-Saʿdī, from the tribe of Tamīm, who had been present with ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Muḥammad at all of the battles and wars in which he had participated. Muḥammad b. ʿAbdallāh b. ʿAbd al-Malik b. Marwān requested the guarantee of safe-conduct for al-Ward from Maslamah b. ʿAbd al-Malik, who was both his paternal uncle and his father-in-law, and Maslamah

490. This town is possibly ʿAqabah of al-Ṭīn, in Fārs. See Yāqūt, Muʾjam, IV, 134. Alternatively, the text could mean, "finally overtaking them at a mountain pass (ʿaqabah)."

491. The mountainous region in the southern part of Khūrāsān. See Barthold, Geography, 209; EI², s.v. al-Ḵūhīstān.

492. See note 19, above.
agreed to his request. But when al-Ward came to him, Maslamah stopped him and rebuked him, while standing. He said, "You are disobedient, rebellious, hypocritical, and cowardly whenever there is a civil strife; one day you side with the weaver of the Kindah, the next with the sailor of the Azd. You do not deserve to receive a guarantee of safe-conduct." Then he left.

The guarantee of safe-conduct for Malik b. Ibrahim b. al-Ashtar was requested by al-Hasan b. 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Sharāhil—Sharāhil's nickname was Rustam al-Haḍrami. When Maslamah came and looked at Malik, al-Hasan b. 'Abd al-Rahmān al-Haḍrami said to him, "This is Malik b. Ibrahim b. al-Ashtar." Maslamah told Malik to leave, whereupon al-Hasan said to Maslamah, "May God cause you to prosper! Why don't you rebuke him as you did his comrade?" Maslamah said, "I hold your family in too high esteem for that, and you are dearer and more loyal to me than the family of Muḥammad b. 'Abdallāh." Al-Hasan said, "But we want you to swear at him for, by God, compared to al-Ward b. Abdallāh, his ancestors are of greater rank, and he has had a worse influence on the Syrian army." Several months later al-Hasan said, "Maslamah left Malik alone out of envy lest our companion become distinguished. He wanted to show us that he held him in great contempt."

The Muhallabids, together with the runaway soldiers who had taken refuge with them, continued their journey until reaching Qandabil. Meanwhile, Maslamah recalled Mudrik b. Dabb al-Kalbi and sent Hilal b. Ahwaz al-Tamimi, from the Banu Māzin b. 'Amr b. Tamim, to search for them. Hilal caught up with them (as they were about to enter) Qandabil. The Muhallabids wanted to enter Qandabil, but were prevented from doing so by Wadā' b. Ḥumayd. Hilal b. Ahwaz had written to Wadā', who did not, (at first), abandon the Muhallabids. (After receiving the letter, however, Wadā') left them. The Muhallabids became aware of the 493. The phrase "the weaver of the Kindah" refers to Ibn al-Ash'ath, who led a revolt against al-Hajjāj; see note 456, above. The phrase "the sailor of the Azd" refers to Yazid b. al-Muhallab; see text above, II/1287, sub anno 96.

494. See Ibn Khayyāt, Ta'rikh, I, 334; Balādhurī, Futūḥ (Cairo), III, 540; Ya'qūbi, Ta'rikh, III, 54–55; Azdī, Ta'rikh, 15; Masūdī, Murūj (Beirut), III, 200–1; FHA, 74.
495. This is a conjectural translation. The text is: wa-lam yubayin al-Muhallab fa-yufariquhum. See Ibn al-Athīr, Kāmil, V, 86, where the subject of the verb yubayin is Hilāl b. Ahwāz.
fact that Wadāʿ had abandoned them when they assembled and lined up in military ranks. Wadāʿ b. Ḫumayd was on the right flank and Ṭabd al-Malik b. Hilāl on the left—both of them were Azdīs. Hilāl b. Ḩwāz waved the peace flag at them, whereupon Wadāʿ b. Ḫumayd and Ṭabd al-Malik b. Hilāl joined them. The soldiers dispersed, leaving the Muhallabīds by themselves.

When Marwān b. al-Muhallab witnessed this, he started to make his way to the women, but al-Mufaddal asked him, "Where are you going?" He replied, "I am going to our women, whom I intend to slay so that they will never fall into the hands of those sinners." Al-Mufaddal exclaimed, "Woe to you! Would you slay your sisters and the women of your household? By God, they are not in any danger from them." He convinced him not to slay them. Then they charged with their swords and fought until they were all slain, except for Abū ʿUyaynah b. al-Muhallab and Uthmān b. al-Mufaddal, both of whom escaped and joined up with the Khāqān, Rutbil. Their women and children were sent, together with the heads of the slain men, to Maslamah, who was in al-Ḥiraḥ. Maslamah conveyed the heads to Yazīd b. Ṭabd al-Malik, who sent them to al-ʿAbbās b. al-Walīd b. Ṭabd al-Malik, the governor of Aleppo. When the heads had been set out on display, al-ʿAbbās went out to look at them and said to his men, "This is the head of Ṭabd al-Malik and this is the head of al-Mufaddal. By God, it is as if he were sitting here talking to me."

Maslamah swore, "Verily, I will sell their women and children while they are in Dār al-Rizq (the Abode of Sustenance)." Then al-Jarrāḥ b. ʿAbdallāḥ said, "I will buy them from you in order to relieve you from your oath." He bought them from him for one hundred thousand (dirhams). Maslamah said, "Give me the mon-

496. Ibn al-Athīr, Kāmil, V, 86, adds: "They are: al-Mufaddal, Ṭabd al-Malik, Ziyād, and Marwān, the sons of Muhallab; Muʿāwiyyah b. Yazīd b. al-Muhallab and al-Minḥāl b. Abī ʿUyaynah b. al-Muhallab; and Amr and al-Mughirah, the two sons of Qabiṣah b. al-Muhallab. Their heads were carried away; in the ear of each one was a chit bearing his name."

497. Text: Khāqān wa-Rutbil. "The Khāqān and Rutbil." The term Khāqān is a title meaning "supreme ruler"; it applies to the heads of the various Turkish confederations. Rutbil (or Zanbil) was the name of the Turkish ruler of Zābulistān. See EP, s.v. Khākān; Tabari, Index, s.v. Rutbil; Gibb, Arab Conquests, 41.

498. See EP, s.v. Ḥalab.

499. The sale of Muslims as slaves is contrary to Islamic law. Dār al-Rizq seems to have been a depot for provisions in both al-Ḳūfah and al-ṣBaḥrah, in the latter, it was adjacent to Zābūqah. See Tabari, Index; Yāqūt, Muʾjam, III, 41.
ey." Al-Jarrah replied, "Take it whenever you want." But Maslamah did not take any (money) from al-Jarrah, who released the women and children, except for nine boys whom he sent to Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik. They were brought to Yazid, and he beheaded them.\textsuperscript{500}

Thabit Qutnah recited the following elegy when he learned that Yazid b. al-Muhallab had been slain:

O Hind,\textsuperscript{501} how long a night have I spent!
Even the shortest night has become too long.
As if, when the Pleiades were high overhead,
I was given an adder's spittle\textsuperscript{502} or poison to drink.
One day embittered the sweetness of life,
turning my hair white though I was still a youth.
(That is the day when) your father's sons were killed while I was far away and could not see them. They departed nobly.
No, by God, I shall never forget Yazid, or the dead who were slain unlawfully.
I hope to slay Yazid\textsuperscript{503} one day in retaliation for your brother, or else slay Hishām in retaliation for him.
I hope to lead the horses until they are disheveled, lean and lank, pounding the hillsides.
I will very shortly surprise the Himyar with them in the morning, and the 'Akk, and frighten with those two the Judham.
And we will give the Madḫij and the tribe of Kalb long draughts of deadly poison to drink.
(I mean) our kinsmen who mistreat us and regularly put us to the test year after year.\textsuperscript{504}
Were it not for them and the crime they committed against us, he would have become, in the midst of us, a king and hero.

\textsuperscript{500} Kūfī, \textit{Futuḥ}, VIII, 22, mentions eighty men who were slain by order of the Caliph. Azdī, \textit{Ta’rikh}, 15, mentions fourteen prisoners who were slain in retaliation for 'Adī b. Arštāt and his comrades.

\textsuperscript{501} That is, Hind b. al-Muhallab, Yazid's sister.

\textsuperscript{502} Text: \textit{lu'āb aswād}. Literally, "black drivel."

\textsuperscript{503} That is, Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik.

\textsuperscript{504} Text: \textit{‘āman bi-‘āmā}. This should be amended to read \textit{‘āman fa-‘āmā}. I owe this point to Professor Abbas.
He also recited the following elegy for Yazīd b. al-Muhallab:

The length of this night has refused to come to an end, and concern stirred your captivated heart. I stayed awake, while Umm Khālid⁵⁰⁵ slept alongside me. I couldn’t sleep for a full year. Because of the deceased whose loss crushed the tribe. When the Fates summoned him, he responded and submitted. Because of a king, O friend, in al-‘Aqr, to whose cavalry detachments cowardice was attributed, who met his death with his well-known emblem (of courage). He was slain, but I was not present. Had I been present, I would have put on the garments of mourning⁵⁰⁶ if the tribe did not observe a day of mourning. In the vicissitudes of time, O Hind, know that someone who seeks to retaliate has to bide his time because he has to go about it carefully. Perhaps, if the wind blows me in the direction of Ibn Abī Dhibbān,⁵⁰⁷ he will repent. O Maslamah, if our spears reach you, with them we will make you taste the venom of black serpents—O Maslamah.⁵⁰⁸ And if al-‘Abbās⁵⁰⁹ should ever stumble, we will repay him for what he did that day. In retaliation. Yet we will not exceed what he did to us, and even then Ibn Marwān⁵¹⁰ would be the wrongdoer. You will know, if your foot slips, and some people reveal the shame they want to suppress, ⁵⁰⁵. Umm Khālid is either Thābit Qutnah’s wife or concubine.

⁵⁰⁶. Text: tassalaytu, “I would have been consoled”; read la-sallabtu, following Ibn al-Athir, Kāmil, V, 88.
⁵⁰⁷. Ibn Abī Dhibbān is either Yazīd b. ʿAbd al-Malik b. Marwān (see Ṭabari, Glossary, s.v. Ibn Abī Dhibbān), or his brother, Maslamah (see Azdi, Ta’rikh, 14, n. 1).
⁵⁰⁸. Text: muslamā, “having been given up to destruction.” This should be amended to read maslamā. I owe this point to Professor Abbas.
⁵⁰⁹. Al-ʿAbbās b. al-Walid.
Who the transgressor is who draggs mischief to his household, whether the causes of a matter are clear or obscure. Verily, we are inclined to clemency out of generosity—after we see ignorance from the extravagance of a base person. Verily, we have established ourselves in frontier fortresses in which no one resides except for a large military regiment. We see that the neighbors have needs and deference,\textsuperscript{511} when such a neighbor's deference is not considered by other people. Verily, we feed the guest from the highest part of the camel's hump, when the offers of those who can offer are made reluctantly. When the cold wind brings forth incessant ice, on the backs of tired grey mares that stand still without eating fodder. Our father is the father of the 'Helpers,' 'Amr b. 'Amir,\textsuperscript{512} and they gave birth to 'Afw, Ka'b, and Aslam.\textsuperscript{513} There was considerable glory in Ghassan, a glory that was old and considered magnificent.

In the year in which Maslamah b. 'Abd al-Malik concluded the conflict with Yazid b. al-Muhallab, Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik gave him joint control over the governorships of al-Kufah, al-Basrah, and Khurasan.\textsuperscript{514} Having been charged with these assignments by Yazid, Maslamah appointed Dhu al-Shamah Muhammad b. 'Amr b. al-Walid b. 'Uqbah b. Abi Mu'ayt as governor of al-Kufah. Now, after the Muhallabids had left al-Basrah, control of that city was taken—according to some authorities—by Shabib b. al-Harith al-Tamimi, who managed its affairs. But when al-Basrah was put under Maslamah's jurisdiction, he appointed 'Abd al-Rahman b. Sulaym al-Kalbi as his governor there, and he put \textsuperscript{511} The text is hājan wa-hurmatan. See Azdi, Ta'rikh, 14: haqqan wa-hurmatan, "rights and deference"; Ibn al-Athir, Kāmil, V, 88: haqqan wa-dhimmatan, "rights and protection."

\textsuperscript{512} See text above, I/1132; Caskel, Ğamharah, II, 169, s.v. 'Amr b. 'Amir.

\textsuperscript{513} See Caskel, Ğamharah, I, 176.

\textsuperscript{514} See Ibn Khayyat, Ta'rikh, I, 332; Dinawari, Akhbār, 334; FHA, 75.
'Umar b. Yazid al-Tamimi in charge of the police and the militia. 'Abd al-Raḥmān b. Sulaym wanted to review the Başran army, but when he revealed his plan to 'Umar b. Yazid, the latter said to him, "Do you want to review the Başran army when you have neither proceeded towards a fortress in Kuwayfah, nor staffed it with your supporters? By God, if the soldiers of the Başran army were to throw stones at you and your forces, I fear that they would kill us. Wait ten days so that we can prepare ourselves for that." 'Umar then sent a messenger to Maslamah, informing him of 'Abd al-Raḥmān's plan, whereupon Maslamah sent 'Abd al-Malik b. Bishr b. Marwān to serve as governor of al- Başrah, and he confirmed 'Umar b. Yazid's position as head of the police and the militia.

Abū Ja'far (al-Ṭabari) recounted: In this year, Maslamah b. 'Abd al-Malik dispatched Sa'id b. 'Abd al-'Azīz b. al-Ḥārith b. al-Ḥakam b. Abī al-ʿĀṣ, who is known as Sa'id Khudhaynah, (to serve as governor of Khurāsān). He was given this nickname, according to some authorities, because he was a soft, easy, man who lived in comfort and luxury. He arrived in Khurāsān, riding a Bukhtiyāyah camel, with a knife hanging from his belt. When the King of Abghar went in to see him, Sa'id was wearing dyed garments and was surrounded by dyed cushions. The King emerged and was asked, "How did you find the governor?" He replied, "He is a khudhaynah whose hair style resembles that of Sukaynah." This is why he was given the nickname "Khudhaynah." The word khudhaynah means "the wife of the dihqān," (hence,) "the mistress of the house." Maslamah appointed Sa'id Khudhaynah as governor of Khurāsān because the latter was his son-in-law, for Sa'id was married to Maslamah's daughter.
Maslamah Appoints Sa‘īd Khudhaynah as Governor of Khurāsān

When Maslamah appointed Sa‘īd Khudhaynah as governor of Khurāsān, the latter dispatched to that province, prior to his own departure, Sawrah b. al-Ḥurr, who was from the Banū Dārim. According to some authorities, Sawrah arrived there one month before Sa‘īd did. Sa‘īd also appointed Shu‘bah b. Zuhayr al-Nahshali as governor of Samarqand. Shu‘bah set out for that province, accompanied by twenty-five members of his household, taking the road to Āmul and reaching Bukhārā, where he was joined by two hundred men. Then he reached al-Sughd, the inhabitants of which had renounced Islam during the administration of ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Nu‘aym al-Ghamidi, who had served as governor for eighteen months. Subsequently, they returned to the terms of the peace treaty. Shu‘bah delivered a speech to the army of al-Sughd in which he denounced the Arab inhabitants of the province and accused them of cowardice, saying, “I do not see a wounded man among you, nor do I hear anyone groaning.” They made excuses to him, attributing cowardice to their governor, ‘Ilbā’ b. Ḥabib al-‘Abdī, who was in charge of military affairs. Then, when Sa‘īd arrived, he arrested and imprisoned the governors of ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. ‘Abdallāh al-Qushayri, who had been appointed during the caliphate of ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Aziz. ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. ‘Abdallāh al-Qushayri appealed to him on behalf of them, but Sa‘īd responded, “They are accused of stealing money from the tribute.” ‘Abd al-Rahmān offered to assume liability for the stolen money—the security for them was seven hundred thousand (dirhams)—but Sa‘īd did not collect the sum from him.

Next, as is reported by ‘Ali b. Muḥammad, Sa‘īd was informed that eight men—including Jahm b. Zahr al-Ju‘fī, ‘Abd al-‘Azīz b. Aṃr b. al-Ḥajjāj al-Zabidi, al-Muntaji b. ‘Abd al-Rahmān al-Azdī, and al-Qa‘qā’ al-Azdī—who had been appointed as governors by 522. A town in Khurāsān situated three miles from the left bank of the Oxus. See EP, s.v. Amul.

---

524. See note 334 above.
Yazid b. al-Muhallab, had in their possession monies that they had stolen from the levies belonging to the Muslims. He sent for them and imprisoned them in the Marw citadel. Someone said to him, “These men will not pay up unless you raise your hand against them,” so he sent for Jahm b. Zahr, who was brought from the Marw citadel on a donkey and put on display in front of al-Fayd b. Imran. Al-Fayd stood before him and struck him on the nose, whereupon Jahm said to him, “O sinner, why didn’t you do that when they brought you to me, drunk on wine, and I administered the hadd punishment to you?” Angered by Jahm, Sa’id administered two hundred lashes to him. The merchants praised God when Jahm b. Zahr received his beating. Sa’id then ordered that Jahm and the other seven men who were in the prison were to be handed over to Warqa’ b. Nasr al-Bahili, but when Warqa’ asked to be excused from that job, Sa’id complied with his request.

‘Abd al-Hamid b. Dithar—or ‘Abd al-Malik b. Dithar—and al-Zubayr b. Nushayt, a client of the tribe of Bihilah and husband of Sa’id Khudhaynah’s mother, said, “Give us control over their imprisonment.” Warqa’ agreed, and they slew Jahm, ‘Abd al-‘Aziz b. ‘Amr, and al-Muntaji’, after torturing them; they tortured al-Qa’qa’ and several others to the point of death. They were still in prison when the Turks and the Soghdian army attacked, at which point Sa’id ordered the release of those who remained. Sa’id used to exclaim, “May God render al-Zubayr hideous, for he slew Jahm.”

In this year, the Muslims carried out raids against the Soghdians and the Turks; this was the year in which the battle took place at the fortress of al-Bahili.

In this year, Sa’id Khudhaynah dismissed Shu’bah b. Zuhayr as governor of Samarkand.
Sa'id's Dismissal of Shu'bah and the Battle at the Fortress of al-Bāhilī

According to 'Ali b. Muhammad—his aforementioned authorities: When Sa'id Khudhaynah arrived in Khurasan, he summoned a group of dihqāns and asked them to recommend the names of men that he might send out to the districts. They recommended a group of Arabs, whom he then appointed. Subsequently, however, he began to receive complaints about them. One day, when the people had come to see him, he said, “I arrived in this province not knowing anything about its inhabitants, so I asked for advice, and a certain group was recommended to me. I inquired about them and, after receiving positive reports, I appointed them. I adjure you to inform me about my governors!”

Then the people praised them. But 'Abd al-Rahmān b. 'Abdallāh al-Qushayrī said, “Had you not adjured us, I would have desisted, but now that you have adjured us I can say that you sought counsel from polytheists who recommended to you people who would be amenable to themselves and their likes. This is all that we know about them.” At that, Sa'id steadied himself on his elbow530 and then sat up straight. Then he recited, “‘Take the abundance, and bid to what is honorable, and turn away from the ignorant.’531 Leave!”

Our source continued: Sa'id dismissed Shu'bah b. Zuhayr from al-Sughd, putting 'Uthmān b. 'Abdallāh b. Muṭarrif b. al-Shikhkhir in command of the military administration and Sulaymān b. Abī al-Sari, a client of the Banū 'Uwāfah, in charge of the fiscal administration. He appointed Ma'qil b. 'Urwah al-Qushayrī as his governor in Herat,532 whereupon Ma'qil set out for that city. The soldiers, who considered Sa'id to be a weak man, gave him the nickname “Khudhaynah,” and the Turks therefore became eager to defeat Sa'id. The Khāqān of the Turks rallied his men and sent them to al-Sughd. The commander of the Turks was a certain 530. Text: ittakā. The Cairo ed. has ittaka'a, which means the same thing.

---

531. Qur'ān 7:199.
532. One of the principal cities of Khurasan and a great trading center, strategically located on the trade routes linking the Mediterranean Sea with India and China. See EI², s. v. Harāt; Yaqūt, Muʿjam, V, 396–97.
Kūrşūl. They advanced to the Bāhilah fortress, where they set up camp.

Some sources say: One of the great dihqāns wanted to marry a Bāhili woman who was in that fortress; he sent her a proposal of marriage. When she refused, he raised up an army in the hope of capturing the inhabitants of the fortress and seizing the woman.

Kūrşūl advanced and surrounded the inhabitants of the fortress, in which there were one hundred families. Fearing that 'Uthmān b. 'Abdallāh, the governor of Samarqand at the time, would be slow to send them reinforcements, they sued the Turks for peace in exchange for forty thousand (dirhams); they also gave the Turks seventeen men as hostages. Meanwhile, 'Uthmān b. 'Abdallāh called for volunteers. Al-Musayyab b. Bishr al-Riyāḥi responded to the summons, in addition, four thousand men from all of the tribes volunteered. But Shu'bah b. Žuhayr scoffed, "Had the horsemen of Khurāsān been here, they could not have attained their goal." Among those who volunteered from the Banū Tamīm were Shu'bah b. Žuhayr al-Nahshāli; Balʿā' b. Mujāhid al-'Anzī; 'Amīrah b. Rabī'ah, one of the Banū al-'Ujāf, who is known as 'Amirat al-Tharīd; Ghālib b. al-Muḥājir al-Ṭāʾī—the paternal uncle of Abū al-'Abbās al-Ṭūsī; Abū Saʿīd Muʿāwiyyah b. al-Ḥajjāj al-Ṭāʾī; Thābit Qutnah; Abū al-Muḥājir b. Darah, from the tribe of Ghatafan; Hulays al-Shaybānī; al-Ḥajjāj b. Abū al-Ṭāʾī; Hāṣān b. Maḍān al-Ṭāʾī; and al-Ash'āth Abū Ḥāṭāmah and Amr b. Hāṣān, both from the Tayyī'.

When the forces had assembled, al-Musayyab b. Bishr said, "You are about to arrive at the arena of the Turks, the arena of the Khāqān, and others. The reward, if you are steadfast, is Paradise, and the punishment, if you flee, is Hellfire. Let those of you who intend to attack and be steadfast come forward." At this point, thirteen hundred men left him, and he marched forwards with the rest. After advancing one farsakh (6 km.), he addressed the soldiers in terms similar to those in the first speech, and one thousand of them withdrew. He advanced another farsakh and repeated his speech, and another thousand withdrew.537 He marched forwards—al-Ashhab b. 'Ubayd al-Ḥanẓālī served as their guide—until he was two farsakhs (12 km.) from the enemy, whereupon he set up camp. Then the Turkish Khāqān, the King of Qiyy,538 approached the Muslims and said, "All of the dihqāns have sworn allegiance to the other Turk,539 but I command three hundred fighters who are at your disposal. According to my information, the inhabitants of the fortress sued the Turks for peace in return for forty thousand (dirhams); they also gave them seventeen men to serve as hostages until the tribute is paid. But when the Turks learned that you were marching towards them, they slew the hostages." Among the hostages were Nahshal b. Yazid al-Bāhili, who managed to escape without being slain, and al-Ashhab b. 'Ubaydallāh al-Ḥanẓālī. The (Muslims) had sworn to attack (the Turks) on the morrow or let them conquer the fortress.

[1422]

That night, al-Musayyab sent out two horsemen, one an Arab and the other a non-Arab, instructing them as follows, "When you approach the fortress, tether your animals to a tree and determine the status of the people." The two men set out on a dark night, but the Turks had flooded the area around the fortress in order to prevent anyone from reaching it. When they drew near to the fortress, the sentry called out to them. They responded, "Be quiet and summon 'Abd al-Malik b. Dīthār for us." The sentry complied. The two men said to 'Abd al-Malik, "We have been sent by al-Musayyab, and deliverance is here." He asked, "Where is he?" He replied, "Two farsakhs (12 km.) from here. Can you hold out for the remainder of tonight and tomorrow?" 'Abd al-Malik said, "We have sworn to protect our women and to send them to their death ahead of us540 so that we might all die together tomorrow." The two men reported back to al-Musayyab, who then said to his supporters, "I will march against the enemy (immediately). If anyone wants to leave, let him go." Not a single person left him, and they swore to fight to the death.

537. Thus, of four thousand initial volunteers, seven hundred remained.
539. Text: al-turk ghayri, referring to the "Khāqān of the Turks" mentioned in text above, II/1421.
540. Text: qad ajma'ānā 'alā taslimī nisā'īnā wa-taqdimihim (sic) li-l-mawti amāmanā. The translation is conjectural.

By the time al-Musayyab set out, additional water had been released around the city in order to render it inaccessible. When he was half a farsakh (3 km.) from the Turks, he dismounted and resolved to carry out a surprise attack by night. That evening, he gave the men their orders. They saddled up their horses, and he mounted his. He urged them to be steadfast; he not only incited their interest in the rewards to be received in the next life by those who had accumulated pious deeds and were steadfast but also enticed them with the honor and booty that they would receive in this world, if they were victorious. He instructed them as follows:

Muzzle your horses and lead them forward. When you approach the enemy, mount and attack with earnestness. Exclaim the expression "God is great" and let your battle cry be "O Muḥammad." Do not pursue someone who has turned his back and fled. You are responsible for the horses, so make their backs sore,\(^541\) for animals with sore backs will charge them more furiously than you will. A small number of steadfast men is preferable to a large number of cowards. Nor are your numbers insignificant. One cannot strike the enemy with seven hundred swords without weakening him, regardless of his number.

Our source continued: He arranged them in their places, putting Kuthayyir b. al-Dabusi on the right flank and a man from the tribe of Rabi‘ah known as Thābit Qūtnah on the left. They marched forward until they were two bowshots away from them, whereupon they exclaimed, "God is great." This occurred at dawn. The \(^541\) The translation is conjectural. The text is fa-‘qirūhā, which literally means "cut their hamstrings." A hobbled camel, however, is presumably immobile. The hobbling of camels was indeed practiced by the Arabs as a military tactic, but as a defensive, not an offensive maneuver. See J. Jandora, "The Battle of the Yarmūk," p. 16. According to Professor Abbas, the text may be amended to read fa-a’dhirūhā, "tightly their reins."

Turks leaped to their feet. The Muslims penetrated to the middle of the camp, having made the backs of their horses sore, but the Turks persevered against them. The Muslims were routed and they withdrew to al-Musayyab, pursued by the Turks, who wounded the back of al-Musayyab’s horse. Many Muslims dismounted in order to fight, including al-Bakhtari Abū ‘Abdallāh al-Murā‘ī, Muḥammad b. Qays al-Ghanawī—also known as Muḥammad b. Qays al-‘Anbarī; Ziyād al-Iṣbahānī; Mu‘āwiyyah b. al-Ḥajjāj; and Thābit Qutnah. Al-Bakhtari fought, and when his right arm was slashed he transferred the sword to his left; it, too, was slashed, and he began to defend himself with his hands until, finally, he was slain as a martyr. Also slain as martyrs were Muhammad b. Qays al-‘Anbarī—or al-Ghanawi—and Shabīb b. al-Ḥajjāj al-Tā‘ī.

Then the polytheists were put to flight. Thābit Qutnah struck one of their best soldiers, slaying him. Al-Musayyab’s herald called out, “Do not pursue them, for they do not understand (the meaning of) fear, whether you pursue them or not! Head for the fortress, but do not carry off any goods, except money, and do not carry off anyone who can walk.” Al-Musayyab said, “Whoever carries off a woman, a young boy, or a weak person for the sake of God receives his wages from God, and whoever abstains will receive forty dirhams. If there is anyone in the fortress with whom you have a pact, take him with you.”

Our source continued: They all headed for the fortress and carried off whoever was in it. A man from the Banū Fuqaym reached a woman who implored him, saying “Help me, may God help you.” He halted and said, “Jump onto the back of the horse.” She leaped and, behold, there she was on the back of the horse; she was more skillful on a horse than a man. Al-Fuqaymi grabbed her son’s hand—he was a young child—and put him between his arms. The Muslims made their way to the Turkish Khāqān, who took them into his fortress and brought them food. He said, “Go to Samarqand and do not retrace your steps.” As they were setting out for Samarqand, the Turkish Khāqān asked them, “Is there anyone left in the fortress?” They replied, “Hilāl al-Ḥarīrī.”

542. Text: fa-‘aqirū-l-dawābba. See the preceding note.
said, "I will not abandon him." He found him, with over thirty wounds on his body, and carried him away. He recovered, but was slain subsequently together with al-Junayd at the Battle of the Pass.543 When the Turks returned the next day, they found nothing in the fortress except the corpses of their comrades. They said, "Those who came were not human."

Thābit Quṭnah recited:

My life for the horsemen of Tamim,
on the morning of the battle in the tight spot.
My life for horsemen who had protected me544from the enemy amidst the dark dust.
In the fortress of al-Bāhili. They had seen me defending where the defender was reluctant.
With my sword, after the spear had broken, boldly.
I drove them away with a sharp, well-made sword.
Circling around them with my horse,
like drinkers passing a jug of wine around.
I charge with it at the time of the adversities until the adversities vanish and I no longer feel their tight grip.
Were it not for God—He has no partner—and my striking the head of the heroic king.
Then the women of the Banū Dithār would have been driven before the Turks with their anklets uncovered.
Who among the Tamim is conspicuous like al-Musayyab, Abū Bishr, like feathers at the wing tips of a pigeon?

Jarīr recited, mentioning al-Musayyab:

Had (the Banū) Yarbū' not protected your women, people other than you would have made use of their days of purity.
Al-Musayyab defended (them) when the two armies were in trouble, since Māzin's neighbor there has no protector.
Since there is no 'Iqāl545 to defend your sacred things, 543. See text below, II/1546–53, sub anno 112, EP, s.v. al-Djunayd.

544. Text: iktafawni; read aknafuni, following the Cairo ed.
545. 'Iqāl b. Shabbah b. 'Iqāl al-Mujāshi'.
and no Zurārah\textsuperscript{546} to defend them, nor anyone attached to Zurārah.\textsuperscript{547}

Our source continued: That night, Abū Saʿīd Muʿāwiyyah b. al-Ḥajjāj al-Ṭāʾī, who had served as a provincial governor on behalf of Saʿīd, was blinded in one eye and his hand was crippled. But when he failed to pay part of what was claimed from him, he was taken to account. Saʿīd turned him over to Shaddād b. Khulayd al-Bāhili so that the latter might settle the account with him and retrieve (the money). Shaddād treated Abū Saʿīd harshly, causing the latter to exclaim, “O tribe of Qays, when I went to the fortress of al-Bāhili, I was a man of great might and powerful eyesight. But I was blinded in one eye and my arm was crippled while fighting with the other warriors in the effort to rescue (the Muslims in the fortress) who were on the verge of being either slain, captured, or imprisoned. Now look at the manner in which your comrade is treating me! Keep him away from me.” They released him.

According to ʿAbdallāh b. Muḥammad—a man who was present that night at the fortress of al-Bāhili: “We were inside the fortress, and when the two armies engaged in battle, we thought that the Day of Resurrection had arrived on account of what we heard, namely, the groans emitted by the soldiers, the clashing of iron, and the neighing of the horses.”

In this year, Saʿīd Khudhaynah crossed over the Balkh River and attacked the Soghdians, who had violated their treaty and aided the Turks against the Muslims.\textsuperscript{548}

\textit{Saʿīd Khudhaynah’s Military Expedition against the Soghdians}

It is reported that Saʿīd carried out this military expedition because, after the Turks returned to al-Sughd, the troops spoke to him, saying, “The fact that you are no longer carrying out military expeditions has allowed the Turks to take the offensive and caused the Soghdians to renounce Islam.” He therefore crossed over the river and headed for al-Sughd. He was met by the Turks, \textsuperscript{546} Zurārah b. ʿUdus.

\textsuperscript{547} Text: zurrār; the Cairo ed. has wuzzār. See Diwān Jarīt, I, 326.
\textsuperscript{548} See Yaʿqūbī, Taʾrīkh, III, 55.
together with a detachment of the Soghdian army, but the Muslims put them to flight. Sa'id said, "Do not pursue them, for al-Sughd is the garden of the Commander of the Faithful, and you have already defeated them. Do you want to annihilate them? O army of Iraq, you have fought against the caliphs several times, but did they destroy you?"

The Muslims advanced until they reached a gorge that stood between them and the meadow.\textsuperscript{549} 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Ṣubh declared, "Let no man who is clad in armor nor any foot soldier cross over this gorge; everyone else may cross over." They crossed over. But the Turks saw them and prepared an ambush. The Muslim cavalry appeared before them, and the two armies engaged in battle. The Turks retreated, and the Muslims pursued them until they passed by the ambuscade, where they were attacked (by the Turks) and put to flight, retreating all the way back to the gorge. 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Ṣubh said to them, "Try to defeat them without crossing over, for if you do cross over, they will destroy you." They held off the Turks, who eventually withdrew without being pursued by the Muslims.

Some authorities say: Shu'bah b. Ẓuhayr and his forces were killed on that very day. Other authorities say: The Turks withdrew from them on that day, accompanied by a detachment of the Soghdian army, having been defeated. The next day, a Muslim vanguard—the members of the vanguard at that time were from the Banū Tamim—went out and were surprised by the Turks, who attacked them from behind a thicket. Shu'bah b. Ẓuhayr, who was in command of the cavalry of the Banū Tamim, fought against them but was slain when they drove him off his mount. One of the Arab soldiers was slain and his slave girl was brought out carrying some henna. She exclaimed, "How long shall I prepare henna such as this for you when you are dyed with blood?" She spoke for a long time, bringing the inhabitants of the military camp to tears. Approximately fifty soldiers were slain, and the members of the vanguard were put to flight.

When the cry for help reached the troops, 'Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Muhallab al-'Adawi said, "I was the first one to reach them after we received the news. I was riding a swift horse and, behold, there was 'Abdallāh b. Zuhayr next to a tree. There were so many arrows in his body that he looked like a porcupine. He had been slain.'

\textsuperscript{549} Apparently, a meadow in al-Sughd.

Al-Khalil b. Aws al-'Abshami, a young man from the Banū Zālim, mounted his horse and cried out, "O Banū Tamim, I am al-Khalil. Follow me." A detachment of soldiers joined al-Khalil, who attacked the enemy with them. They held off the enemy, keeping them far away from the soldiers until the military commander arrived with reinforcements and the enemy was put to flight. Al-Khalil became the leader of the Banū Tamim cavalry on that day, a position he held until Naṣr b. Sayyār was appointed governor (of Khurasān), at which point al-Khalil's brother, al-Ḥakam b. Aws, became the leader of the Banū Tamim.

According to 'Ali b. Muḥammad—his shaykh: Sawrah b. al-Hurr said to Ḥayyān, "Leave, O Ḥayyān." He exclaimed, "Shall I abandon God's martyrs and depart?" He said, "O you Nabataean." He said, "May God cause you to become a Nabataean." He said: Ḥayyān al-Nabaṭi's nom de guerre was Abū al-Hayyāj. About him the poet recited:

Verily, Abū al-Hayyāj is generous in assistance. The wind makes a sound in his garments.

Our source continued: Saʿīd crossed over the river twice but did not pass beyond Samarqand. On the first occasion, after establishing his camp across from the enemy, he was advised by Ḥayyān, the client of Maṣqalāh b. Hubayrah al-Shaybānī, "O commander, attack the Soghdian army." But he replied, "No, these lands belong to the Commander of the Faithful." Later, however, he inquired about some smoke rising into the sky and was told, "The Soghdians have renounced Islam, and some of the Turks are with them." Only then did Saʿīd initiate a skirmish, whereupon the Soghdians were put to flight with the Muslims close on their heels. But Saʿīd's herald called out, "Do not pursue them, for al-Sughd is the garden of the Commander of the Faithful, and you

551. Text: wa-warradūhu; read wa-waza'ūhum, following the Cairo ed.
552. See text below, ll/169ff., sub anno 120.
553. Text: anbata-llāhu waḥakā. This was considered an insult. See note 471, above.
554. Abū al-Hayyāj literally means "Father of fury."
have already put them to flight. Do you want to annihilate them? O army of Iraq, you fought against the Commander of the Faithful several times; but he forgave you and did not seek to destroy you, and he withdrew."

The next year, Sa'id sent some men from the Banu Tamim on a mission to Waraghsar. They said, "Would that we might encounter the enemy so that we could attack them." But whenever a raiding party sent by Sa'id scored a victory, acquiring booty and taking prisoners, he would send back the captives' women and children and punish the raiding party. Al-Hajari, who was a poet, recited:

You advanced toward the enemy by night playing with a concubine, with your penis drawn and your sword sheathed.
And you are for your enemies a very courteous wife.
Against us you are like a sharp sword.
How excellent were the Soghdians when they assembled!
And how strange your wavering stratagem!

Sawrah b. al-Huff, who had protected Hayyan al-Nabati despite the fact that the latter had insulted him by saying, "May God cause you to become a Nabataean!," said to Sa'id, "That slave is the person most hostile to the Arabs and to the provincial governors. He ruined Khurasan for Qutaybah b. Muslim and he will fall upon you, ruining Khurasan for you. Then he will fortify himself inside one of those strongholds." Sa'id replied, "O Sawrah, don't mention this to anyone." Several days later, Sa'id asked for sour milk to be brought to his chamber. Some gold that he had ordered previously was ground into powder and put in Hayyan's cup. Hayyan drank the sour milk that had been laced with gold powder. Sa'id and his soldiers then mounted their horses and rode four farsakhs (24 km.) to Barkath, pretending that they were pursuing an enemy. Then they returned. Hayyan lived for four days after drinking the milk and died on the fourth day.

---

555. Literally, "the head of the dam", one of the twelve districts of Samarqand. See Yaqut, Mu'jam, V, 372; Barthold, Turkestan, 83, 92.
556. Text: 'irsu khaifyayatin, "a hidden wife." This should be amended to read 'irsun haifyyatun. I owe this point to Professor Abbas.
557. The chief town in Buzmajan, which was one of the districts of Samarqand, on the main road to the Syr Darya. See Yaqut, Mu'jam, I, 320; Barthold, Turkestan, 94; Le Strange, Lands, 466.
Sa‘īd placed heavy burdens on the soldiers, who considered him to be weak. There was a man from the Banū Asad by the name of Ismā‘īl who was devoted to Marwān b. Muḥammad.558 Someone mentioned Ismā‘īl’s devotion to Marwān, in the presence of Khudhaynah, causing Sa‘īd to exclaim, “Who is this bastard?” In response, Ismā‘īl satirized him, saying:

Khudhaynah alleges that I am a bastard, but Khudhaynah has the mirror and the comb. (Incense) burners and kohl containers have been laid out, and musical instruments. On her cheek are spots. Is this better, or a full coat of mail composed of double rings, and a sharp sword fashioned to cut, In the possession of a trustworthy, powerful male, not nourished by effeminacy and effeminate embellishments?559

Are you angry because your mother’s son spent the night with them and because your father has no reputation? Verily, I saw their arrows covered with fitting feathers, while your arrows are featherless.560

And I saw them reclining on their cushions at the assembly place, while you were roaming astray in the desert.561

In this year, Maslamah b. ‘Abd al-Malik departed for Syria after having been relieved of his duties in Iraq and Khurāsān.562

The Dismissal of Maslamah from Iraq and Khurāsān

According to ‘Alī b. Muḥammad, Maslamah was dismissed because, after being put in charge of the provinces of Iraq and

558. Marwān b. Muḥammad b. Marwān al-Ja‘dī was an Umayyad general and later Caliph. See EI, s.v. Marwān II b. Muḥammad.

559. Text: wa-l-laqtu, “and the [base] status of being a foundling.” This should be amended to read wa-l-luṭu. A luṭah is a black or yellow line that a woman draws on her cheek. I owe this point to Professor Abbas.

560. Text: inni ra‘aytu nibāḥahum kusiyyat risba-l-lu‘ām wa-nablukum murta. That is to say, their men were positioned in the right places, while yours were not. See Lane, Lexicon, pt. 3, p. 1300, Wörterbuch, s.v., lu‘ām.

561. Text: wa-antum khīltu, “while you were half-breeds.” This should be amended to read wa-antum huṭa. I owe this point to Professor Abbas.

562. See Ibn Khayyāt, Ta‘rīkh, I, 335; Dinawari, Akhbar, 337; Ya‘qūbī, Ta‘rīkh, III, 55; Azdī, Ta‘rīkh, 16, FHA, 75.
Khurāsān, he did not send the surplus tribute (to Damascus). Yazid b. 'Ātitkah wanted to dismiss him, but was ashamed to do so. He wrote to him, saying, "Appoint a deputy governor and come here."

It is reported that Maslamah consulted with 'Abd al-'Azīz b. Hātim b. al-Nu'mān regarding his departure to visit Ibn 'Ātitkah. 'Abd al-'Azīz said to him, "Are you going because you long for him? Why are you so emotional when you have recently been with him?" Maslamah said, "I must go." 'Abd al-'Azīz said, "In that case, no sooner will you leave this province than you will meet the new governor." Then Maslamah departed. At Dūrayn he was met by 'Umar b. Hubayrah, who was traveling with five post-horses. Ibn Hubayrah came in to greet him, and Maslamah asked, "Where are you going, Ibn Hubayrah?" He replied, "The Commander of the Faithful sent me to collect the wealth of the Muhallabids." When he left, Maslamah sent for 'Abd al-'Azīz, who came to him. Maslamah said, "Behold, Ibn Hubayrah met us, as you know." 'Abd al-'Azīz said, "I told you so." He said, "But Yazid sent him merely for the purpose of collecting the wealth of the Muhallabids." He said, "(Do you believe that) Ibn Hubayrah has been dismissed from al-Jazirah and sent to collect the wealth of the Muhallabids? The latter is more astonishing than the former!"

Shortly thereafter Maslamah learned that Ibn Hubayrah had dismissed the governors he had appointed and treated them roughly. Al-Farazdaq recited:

The horses carried Maslamah away, bidding farewell.

So graze, Fazarah, but may the grazing not fatten you!
 Ibn Bishr was dismissed, and Ibn 'Amr before him, and the governor of Herat expects a similar fate.

I know that if the Fazarah are invested with authority,

---

563. Text: lam yarfa' min al-kharāj shay'an. See FHA, 75, where the text is lam yursil ila Yazid shay'an, "He did not send anything to Yazid."
564. That is, his brother, the Caliph, Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik. See note 153, above.
565. There is no entry for Dūrayn in Yāqūt's geographical dictionary. Dūr and Dūrān were common place names in Iraq.
566. 'Abd al-'Azīz means that Maslamah's naiveté with regard to the real purpose of Ibn Hubayrah's mission is more astonishing than his naiveté with regard to his recall by the Caliph.
567. Text: muwadda'an; read muwaddi'an, following the Cairo ed.
568. 'Umar b. Hubayrah was from the tribe of Fazarah.
The Caliphate of Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik b. Marwân

the Ashja' will soon covet the emirate. What is their situation vis-à-vis your Lord's creatures? The likes of them do covet something similar to what the Fazārah attained.569

In this year, 'Umar b. Hubayrah attacked the Byzantines in Armenia, putting them to flight and capturing large numbers of prisoners. According to some sources, he took seven hundred prisoners.

It is reported that in this year, Maysarah sent his messengers from Iraq to Khurāsān, where the ('Abbāsid) propaganda began to circulate.570 A man from the Banū Tamīm by the name of 'Amr b. Baḥīr b. Warqā' al-Sa'dī came to Sa'īd Khudhaynah and said, "There are people here who are saying ugly things." Sa'īd sent for them, and when they were brought to him, he asked, "Who are you?" They replied, "We are merchants." He asked, "What is the meaning of the things that are being said about you?" They replied, "We don't know." He asked, "Have you come to disseminate propaganda?" They replied, "We are too busy with our personal affairs and with our business to be able to do that." He asked, "Who knows these people?" Some soldiers from the army of Khurāsān, the majority of whom were from the tribes of Rabi'ah and Yaman, came and said, "We know them and will assume responsibility for them should they do anything that you find displeasing." Then he released them.571

[1435] In this year, that is, the year 102/720–21, Yazid b. Abi Muslim was slain in Ifrīqiyyah,572 where he had been serving as governor.573

---

569. See Diwân al-Farazdaq, I, 408.
570. See text above, II/1358, sub anno 100, note 310.
571. Many of the clients who served as leaders of the 'Abbāsid propaganda movement posed as members of the merchant and artisan class in order to provide camouflage for their clandestine activities. See Dinawari, Akhbār, 335; Sharon, Black Banners, 144.
572. The eastern part of the Maghrib. See EP, s.v. Ifrīkiya.
The Slaying of Yazid b. Abi Muslim

It is reported that the circumstances of Yazid’s death were as follows: He had determined to apply to (the inhabitants of Ifriqiyyah) the policy that al-Hajjaj b. Yusuf had applied to those Muslims living in the garrison towns who were originally protected peoples (ahl al-dhimmah) from the rural districts; although they converted to Islam in Iraq, al-Hajjaj sent them back to their villages and lands, where they were made to pay the poll tax, just as they had been prior to their conversion. When Yazid determined to carry out such a policy, they plotted against him, reportedly resolving to murder him. They slew him and appointed as their leader the person who had served as their governor prior to Yazid b. Abi Muslim, that is, Muḥammad b. Yazid, a client of the Helpers, who was a soldier in Yazid b. Abī Muslim’s army. They wrote to Yazid b. ‘Abd al-Malik as follows: “We have not renounced our allegiance to you. However, Yazid b. Abi Muslim imposed on us things that were displeasing to God and to the Muslims, so we slew him and reappointed your governor.”

Yazid b. ‘Abd al-Malik wrote back to them, saying, “Indeed, I was not pleased with the policies of Yazid b. Abi Muslim and I hereby confirm Muḥammad b. Yazid as governor of Ifriqiyyah.”

In this year, the pilgrimage was led by ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Dāhhāk, as reported by Abū Ma‘shar and al-Wāqidi.

‘Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Dāhhāk was governor of Medina; ‘Abd al-‘Azīz b. ‘Abdallāh b. Khalid b. ‘Aṣīr was governor of Mecca; Muḥammad b. ‘Amr Dhū al-Shāmāh was governor of al-Kūfah; al-Qāsim b. ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. ‘Abdallāh b. Mas‘ūd was in charge of the judiciary in al-Kūfah; ‘Abd al-Malik b. Bishr b. Marwān was governor of al-Baṣrah; Sa‘īd Khudhaynah was governor of Khurāsān; and Usāmah b. Zayd was governor of Egypt.

574. Literally, “The jizyah was sealed on their necks.”
575. But see Ya‘qūbī, Ta‘rīkh, III, 57, where it is reported that Yazid appointed Bishr b. Šafwān al-Kalbī as the new governor.
The Events of the Year

103
(JULY 1, 721—JUNE 20, 722)

The Dismissal of Sa‘id Khudhaynah as Governor of Khurāsān

Among the events of this year was ‘Umar b. Hubayrah’s dismissal of Sa‘id Khudhaynah as governor of Khurāsān. The circumstances of his dismissal, as reported by ‘Ali b. Muḥammad on the authority of his shaykhs, were as follows: Al-Mujashshir b. Mużāḥim al-Sulami and ‘Abdallah b. ‘Umayr al-Laythi approached ‘Umar b. Hubayrah and complained to him about Sa‘id. As a result, ‘Umar dismissed Sa‘id and appointed as governor of Khurāsān Sa‘id b. ‘Amr b. al-Aswad b. Mālik b. Ka‘b b. Waqdān b. al-Ḥarish b. Ka‘b b. Rabi‘ah b. ‘Āmir b. Ša‘a‘ah. Khudhaynah, at the time, was on a military expedition near the Gate of Samarqand. The soldiers learned of his dismissal, and Khudhaynah turned back, leaving a thousand horsemen in Samarqand. Nahār b. Tawsī‘ah recited:

Who will inform the youths of my tribe that the arrows are completely covered with feathers?

576. See Balādhuri, Futūh [Cairo], III, 525; Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 223.
577. Text: rishat kulla raysh. See note 560, above.
And that God replaced one Sa‘id with another—not the effeminate one from the Quraysh?

Our source continued: Sa‘id al-Ḥarashi did not interfere with any of Khudhaynah’s governors. When the man who read out his document of appointment made a grammatical mistake, Sa‘id exclaimed, “Be quiet. Whatever you people heard is the responsibility of the scribe, and the governor (that is, ‘Umar b. Ḥubayrāh) is free from any guilt.” In connection with this statement, the poet recited the following verse in which he attributed weakness to al-Ḥarashi:

We were given one Sa‘id for another—bad fortune and the ordained fate.

Al-Ṭabari reported: In this year, al-‘Abbās b. al-Walid attacked the Byzantines and conquered a city known as Raslah.578

In this year, the Turks invaded Alān.579

In this year, Mecca was added to the jurisdiction of ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Ḍaḥḥāk al-Fihrī and combined with his jurisdiction over Medina.

In this year, ‘Abd al-Wāḥid b. ‘Abdallāh al-Nadrī was appointed Asīd was dismissed from Mecca.

In this year, ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Ḍaḥḥāk was ordered to effect a reconciliation between Abū Bakr b. Muḥammad b. ‘Amr b.
Ḥazm and ‘Uṭmān b. Ḥayyān al-Murri. The relations between ‘Abd al-Rahmān and the other two men in previous years has already been mentioned.580

In this year, the pilgrimage was led by ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Ḍaḥḥāk b. Qays al-Fihrī—as reported by Abū Ma‘ṣhar and al-Wāqīḍī.

In this year, ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Ḍaḥḥāk was governor of Mceca and Medina on behalf of Yazīd b. ‘Atikah; ‘Abd al-Wāḥid b.
‘Abdallāh al-Nadrī was governor of al-Ṭa‘īf; ‘Umar b. Ḥubayrah was governor of Iraq and Khurāsān; Sa‘id b. ‘Amr al-Ḥarashi was

578. Raslah may be the Byzantine city of Larissa. See Cheira, Arabes et Byzantines, 222, n. 1, and the sources cited there. Azdī, Ta‘rikh, 17, gives the name of the city as Awāsā.

579. A region in the northern Caucasus near Bāb al-Abwāb inhabited by the Alans, an Iranian people. See EP, s.v. Alān; Yaqūt, Mu‘jam, V, 8.

580. See text above, II/1281–82, sub anno 96; and II/1372–75, sub anno 101.
The Caliphate of Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik b. Marwān governor of Khurasan on behalf of 'Umar b. Hubayrah; al-Qāsim b. 'Abd al-Rahmān b. 'Abdallāh b. Mas‘ūd was in charge of the judiciary in al-Kūfah; and 'Abd al-Malik b. Ya‘lā was in charge of the judiciary in al-Baṣrah.

In this year, 'Umar b. Hubayrah appointed Sa‘īd b. 'Amr al-Ḥarashi as governor of Khurāsān.581

'Umar b. Hubayrah’s Appointment of Sa‘īd al-Ḥarashi as Governor of Khurāsān

According to 'Ali b. Muhammad—his authorities: When Ibn Hubayrah was appointed governor of Iraq, he sent Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik the names of those men who had demonstrated their bravery at the battle of al-'Aqr.582 Al-Ḥarashi’s name did not appear on the list, causing Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik to exclaim, “Why didn’t he mention al-Ḥarashi?” Yazid then wrote to Ibn Hubayrah, ordering him to appoint al-Ḥarashi as governor of Khurāsān, which he did. Al-Ḥarashi dispatched al-Mujashshir b. Muzāḥim al-Sulami to take command of his vanguard in the year 103/721–22. Then al-Ḥarashi traveled to Khurāsān, where he found the army face to face with the enemy, having already suffered a disastrous defeat. In a speech to the soldiers, he urged them to engage in holy war, saying, “The struggle against the enemy of Islam is not undertaken on the basis of numbers, but on the basis of the support of God and the might of Islam. Say, ‘There is no power and no strength except in God.’” Then he recited the following lines:

I don’t belong to the ‘Āmir if you do not see me in front of the horsemen stabbing with the spearheads.

For I will strike the head of their greatest warrior with the edge of a well-polished, sharp sword.

I am not one who submits in battles,
nor do I fear the combat of the soldiers.
My father protected me from every censure,

581. See Balādhuri, Futūḥ [Cairo], III, 525; Kūfī, Futūḥ, VIII, 26; Ibn Kathir, Bidayah, IX, 223; Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 452.
582. See text above, II/1395ff., sub anno 102.
The Events of the Year 103

and my maternal uncle is the best maternal uncle during times of misfortune.
When the tribe of Ka'b paraded haughtily before me, and the Banū Hilāl strutted like mountains.

In this year, at the time of Sa‘īd b. ‘Amr al-Harashi’s arrival, the Soghdian army left their lands and traveled to Farghānah, where they asked the king for assistance against the Muslims.583

The Soghdians Leave Their Country for Farghānah

According to ‘Ali b. Muhammad—his authorities: The Soghdians had aided the Turks during the administration of Khudhaynah. Therefore, when al-Harashi was appointed as their governor, they feared for their lives, and their leaders resolved to leave their lands. Their king, however, advised them as follows: “Don’t do this. Stay where you are; pay him whatever tribute you owe and guarantee him all future tribute; promise him that you will maintain your lands in a good state of cultivation and that you will accompany him on raids should he desire that; apologize for your past behavior, and give him hostages to hold.” They said, “We fear that he will not be satisfied and that he will not accept these terms from us. Therefore, we are going to Khujandah,584 where we will ask the king for protection. Then we will send a message to the governor (that is, al-Harashi), asking him to forgive us for our past behavior and assuring him that henceforth we will not commit any repugnant acts.” Their king said, “I am one of you, and my advice to you is in your best interests.” But they rejected his advice and set out for Khujandah.

Karzanj, Kishshin, Bayārkath, and Thābit took the army of Ishtikhan,585 and they sent a message to al-Tār, the King of Farghānah, asking him to protect them and to allow them to settle in 583. See Ibn Khayyāt, Ta’rīkh, I, 335–36; Balādhuri, Futūḥ (Cairo), III, 525; Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 452–54.

584. A town and district in Transoxiana; the town was strung out along the left bank of the middle Sir Darya at the entrance to the Farghānah valley. See EI3, s.v. Khudjand[a]; Yāqūt, Mu’jam, I, 347–48.
585. A city five farsaks (30 km.) from Samarqand that was administered independently of the latter. See Yāqūt, Mu’jam, I, 196.
his city. He was on the verge of agreeing when his mother said to him, "Don't let those satans enter your city. Rather, clear out some rural district for them to reside in." He sent to them, saying, "Name a rural district so that I might clear it out for you. Give me a delay of forty days"—according to some sources—twenty days. "If you wish, I will clear out for you the pass occupied by 'Iṣām b. 'Abdallāh al-Bāhili, who had been left behind by Qutaybah to serve as their governor. They agreed to accept 'Iṣām's Pass and sent to al-Ṭār, saying, "Clear it out for us." He said, "I will, but you have no agreement and no covenant of protection with me until you enter it. If the Arabs should overtake you before you enter it, I will not protect you." They accepted his terms, and he cleared out the pass for them.

Some authorities say: Ibn Hubayrah appealed to them before they left their lands, asking them to remain and offering to appoint a governor of their choice. But they rejected his offer and set out for Khujandah.

'Iṣām's Pass is in the rural district controlled by Asfarah, who at that time was the heir apparent to the King of Farghānah, Bilādhā.586 Bilādhā,587 Abū Anūjūr, was the King.

It is said that Karzanj said to them, "I will give you three options from which to choose. Failure to choose at least one will result in your destruction. Sa'id, who is known as "the horseman of the Arabs," has sent 'Abd al-Raḥmān b. 'Abdallāh al-Qushayri with his vanguard, leading a detachment of his men. Carry out a surprise attack against him at night and kill him. Thus, when al-Ḥarashi learns of this, he will not attack you." But they rejected this suggestion. He said, "Cross over the Shāsh River588 and ask them, 'What do you want from us'? If they respond then you are saved; if not, then go to Sūyāb."589 This, too, they rejected. He said, "Then pay them (the tribute)."

586. But see text above, II/1440, where the King of Farghānah is identified as al-Ṭār.
587. The discrepancy in the spelling of the King's name is in the text. De Goeje suggests that Bilādhā and Bilādhā should both be read Naylān as at text below, II/1442 sub anno 104 and II/1554, sub anno 112.
588. The Shāsh River is in Transoxiana. See El, s.v. Tashkent; Yāqūt, Mu'jam, III, 308–09.
589. The Turgesh capital, destroyed by the Chinese in A.D. 748. See Barthold, Turkestan, 195, 201.
The Events of the Year 103

Our source continued: Kārzanj and Jālnaj set out with the army of Qiyy, while Ābār b. Mākhnūn and Thābit set out with the army of Ishtikhan. The army of Bayārkath\(^{590}\) and the army of Sabaskath\(^{591}\) set out with a thousand men wearing gold belts, accompanied by the dihqāns of Buzmājān.\(^{592}\) Al-Diwāshinī set out with the army of Bunjikath\(^{593}\) for the fortress of Abghar. Kārzanj and the Soghdian army reached Khujandah.

\(^{590}\) There is no entry for Bayārkath in Yāqūt's geographical dictionary. Bayārkath may be identical with the place name Bârkath mentioned at text above, II/1431, sub anno 102, or with the personal name mentioned at text above, II/1440. Kath is the usual ending of town names.

\(^{591}\) Yāqūt mentions a town by the name of Isbaskath, two farsakhs (12 km.) from Samarqand. See Mu'jam, I, 172.

\(^{592}\) One of the twelve districts of Samarqand; its chief town was Bârkath. See Barthold, Turkestan, 92, 94; Le Strange, Lands, 466.

\(^{593}\) A town near Samarqand; it is not to be confused with the town of the same name in Ushrusanah (see n. 598, below). See Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 452, n. 2; Yāqūt, Mu'jam, I, 499.
In this year, the battle took place between al-Ḥarashi and the Soghdian army in which he slew many dihqāns.\textsuperscript{594}

The Battle between al-Ḥarashi and the Soghdian Army

According to 'Ali—his authorities: Al-Ḥarashi undertook a military expedition in the year 104/722–23. He crossed over the river and reviewed the soldiers. Then he traveled to Qaṣr al-Riḥ ("The Castle of the Winds"),\textsuperscript{595} two farsakhs (12 km.) from al-Dabūsiyah,\textsuperscript{596} where he set up camp. But his army did not join him. Therefore, al-Ḥarashi ordered the soldiers to pack up and leave. But Hilāl b. 'Ulaym al-Ḥanẓali rebuked him, saying, "I say! You are a better political leader than you are a military commander. The land has no one to defend it. Yet, when your army failed to join you, you gave the order to pack up and leave." Al-Ḫarashi asked, "What should I do?" Hilāl replied, "Order them to establish camp." Al-Ḫarashi accepted his advice.

\textsuperscript{594} See Balādhūrī, Futūḥ (Cairo), III, 525; Kūfī, Futūḥ, VIII, 26–27.

\textsuperscript{595} A village in the area of Nishāpūr. See Yāqūt, Mu'jam, IV, 357; Le Strange, Lands, 388, 430.

\textsuperscript{596} A town in Transoxiana located in the administrative district of al-Sughd. See Yāqūt, Mu'jam, II, 437–38; Le Strange, Lands, 468, 471.

Al-Naylān, the paternal cousin of the King of Farghānah, came to al-Ḫarashi, who had set up camp near Mughūn,597 and said, "The Soghdian army is in Khujandah." Al-Naylān apprised al-Ḫarashi of their actions and said, "Try to overtake them before they reach 'Išām's Pass, for their protection agreement with us does not take effect until the expiration of the (forty day) time period." Al-Ḫarashi put 'Abd al-Raḥmān al-Qushayrī and Ziyād b. 'Abd al-Raḥmān al-Qushayrī in command of a division of soldiers and sent them off, accompanied by al-Naylān. Subsequently, however, he regretted what he had done, saying, "I have endangered the lives of a division of Muslims on the strength of what I was told by an infidel. But I don't know if he was telling the truth or lying." Al-Ḫarashi set off in pursuit of them, reaching Ushrūsanah,598 where he made peace with (the inhabitants of that district) in return for a trifling sum. Then, while he was eating his dinner, one of his men interrupted him, saying, "'Atā' al-Dabūsi is here." He was one of the men whom al-Ḫarashi had sent with al-Qushayrī. Startled, al-Ḫarashi dropped the morsel of food that was in his hand and summoned 'Atā'. When he entered, al-Ḫarashi asked, "Woe is you! Have you engaged anyone in battle?" He replied, "No." He said, "Praise be to God." Al-Ḫarashi resumed his meal and informed 'Atā' of his regrets regarding the mission.599

Al-Ḫarashi set out at an extremely quick pace and managed to catch up with al-Qushayrī after three days. He advanced and, upon reaching Khujandah, he asked al-Faḍl b. Bassām, "What do you think we should do?" He replied, "I think we should attack

597. One of the villages of Busht, in the administrative district of Nishāpūr. See Yāqūt, Mu'jam, V, 163.
598. The mountainous district between Samarqand and Khujandah, including the upper course of the Zarafshan River. See Yāqūt, Mu'jam, I, 197; Ep, s.v. Afshin; Le Strange, Lands, 474–76.
599. Text: mā qadama lahu 'alayhi. The translation is conjectural.
them immediately." He said, "I disagree. Where can a soldier go if he is wounded, and where can we take the body of someone who is slain? I think that we should establish camp here, proceed deliberately, and make preparations for battle." He established camp, erecting some buildings and busying himself with preparations. But when the enemy did not come forward, the soldiers accused al-Ḥarashi of cowardice, saying, "That one is renowned for his valor and good judgment in Iraq, but when he comes to Khurāsān, he acts like a fool."

One of the Arab soldiers attacked, striking the Khujandah gate with a pole, whereupon the gate was opened. Earlier, the Soghdians had dug a defensive trench on the outskirts of the city, beyond the outer gate. They covered the trench with reeds and placed dirt on top of it, as a trick. They reasoned that if they were forced to retreat after the two armies met in battle, they would know the way, while the Muslims, who would not, would fall into the trench. When the Soghdians emerged, they fought the Muslims and were put to flight, but they took the wrong path and fell into the trench. The Muslims removed forty soldiers from the trench, each one wearing a double coat of mail. Al-Ḥarashi surrounded the city, setting up mangonels. The Soghdians sent a message to the King of Farghānā, claiming that he had deceived them and asking for assistance. In his reply, he said to them, "I did not deceive you, nor will I help you. Take care of yourselves, for the Arabs reached you before the deadline expired. Thus, you are not under my protection." When the Soghdians had despaired of receiving his assistance, they sued for peace and asked for safe-conduct so that they might return to al-Sughd. Al-Ḥarashi imposed the following stipulations on them: they were to return the Arab women and children who were in their possession, pay all arrears in tribute, not murder anyone, and not leave anyone behind in Khujandah. Furthermore, if they caused any mischief, their blood would become lawful.

The man who negotiated the agreement between the two sides was Mūsā b. Mishkān, a client of the Bassām family. Kārzanj approached al-Ḥarashi and said, "I have a favor to ask of you." He asked, "What is it?" He said, "If one of my men commits a crime after the peace treaty has taken effect, I want you to absolve me of responsibility for his action." Al-Ḥarashi said, "I have a favor to ask of you.” He asked, “What is it?” He said, “Don’t attach anything repugnant to my stipulations!”

He removed the nobles and merchants from the eastern side of the town, but left the people of Khujandah, who were the inhabitants of the town, as they were. Kārzānj asked al-Ḥarashi, “What are you doing?” He replied, “I fear that the army will attack you without permission.”

The Soghdian leaders who were with al-Ḥarashi in the military camp stayed as guests with the soldiers who were known to them. Kārzānj stayed with Ayyūb b. Abī Ḥassān. When al-Ḥarashi was told that the Soghdians had slain one of the women who had been in their possession, he said to them, “I have learned that Thābit al-Ishtikhāni slew a woman and buried her under a walled garden.” But they denied the allegation. Al-Ḥarashi sent for the judge of Khujandah and upon investigation it was determined that the woman had, indeed, been slain.

Our source continued: Al-Ḥarashi summoned Thābit. Meanwhile, Kārzānj sent his servant to the Surādīq Gate to gather information. Al-Ḥarashi asked Thābit and others about the woman, but Thābit denied the charge. Convinced that Thābit had slain her, al-Ḥarashi put him to death. The servant then returned to Kārzānj and informed him that Thābit had been slain, whereupon Kārzānj grabbed his beard and began to bite it off with his teeth. Fearing that al-Ḥarashi would slay the Soghdians indiscriminately, Kārzānj said to Ayyūb b. Abī Ḥassān, “I am your guest and your friend. How will it look if your friend is slain wearing old, worn-out trousers?” Ayyūb said, “Take my trousers.” Kārzānj replied, “How will it look if I am slain wearing your trousers? Send one of your servants to my nephew, Jalnaj, so that he might bring me new trousers.” Earlier, Kārzānj had explained to his nephew, “If I send to you asking for trousers, you will know that they intend to slay me.” When his nephew received the request for trousers, he took out some green cloth, cut it into strips, and tied the strips around the heads of his armed retinue. Then he went out, accompanied by his armed retinue, and advanced.
against the soldiers, killing many men. He passed by Yahyā b. Hudayn and wounded him slightly on his leg, leaving him with a permanent limp. The inhabitants of the military camp submitted, and the soldiers suffered greatly from Jalnaj, until he encountered Thābit b. 'Uthmān b. Mas'ūd on a narrow road. Thābit slew him using 'Uthmān b. Mas'ūd’s sword.

The Soghdians slew one hundred and fifty Muslim prisoners who were in their possession. Some say: they slew forty of them. A young boy escaped and informed al-Harashi of the slaughter. Some say: A man came to him and reported what was happening. He asked the Soghdians about the Muslim prisoners but, when they denied the allegation, he sent someone to them in order to determine what was happening. Upon discovering that the report was true, al-Harashi ordered that the Soghdians be put to death. First, however, he separated the merchants from the rest of them—there were four hundred merchants who possessed large quantities of merchandise; they had brought the wares from China.

Our source continued: Although they did not have any weapons the Soghdian soldiers tried to defend themselves. They fought with wooden clubs and were slain to the last man. The next day, al-Harashi summoned the farmers, who were unaware of what their comrades had done. He put a seal on every man’s neck and sent him from one field to the next, whereupon the man would be slain. There were three thousand of them. Some say: There were seven thousand. Al-Harashi sent Jarir b. Himyān, al-Ḥasan b. Abi al-'Amarraṭah, and Yazid b. Abi Zaynab to assess the value of the property belonging to the merchants who had been separated from the others. The merchants said, “We shall not participate in the fighting.” He made a selection from the property of the Soghdians and from their women and children, taking whatever he wanted. Then he summoned Muslim b. Budayl al-'Adawi, from the tribe of 'Adi of al-Ribāb and said, “I am putting you in charge of dividing up the spoils.” Muslim said, “After what your agents did during the night, you can give the job to someone else!” Al-Harashi then assigned this task to 'Ubaydallāh b. Zuhayr b. Ḥayyān al-'Adawi, who put aside the fifth and then divided up the wealth. Al-Harashi wrote a letter to Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik, but he did not write to 'Umar b. Hubayrah. This is one reason why 'Umar
b. Hubayrah was angry with him. Thābit Qurṭnah recited, recalling the leaders that they had slain:

There is consolation in the slaughter of Kārzanj and Kishshin and the fate of Bayār, And Diwashini, and the fate of Jalnaj, in the fortress of Khujandah, when they perished and were annihilated.

According to another transmission, the first line cited reads: “There is consolation in the slaughter of Kārzanj and Kishkish.” It is said that Diwashini was a Samarqandian dihqān whose name, Diwā-shanji, was arabicized as Diwashini.

It is reported that 'Ilbā' b. Āḥmar al-Yashkuri, who was in charge of the spoils in Khujandah, sold a small basket to a man for two dirhams. When the man found gold ingots in the basket, he returned clutching his beard; his eyes bulged out of his head. He returned the basket and took back his two dirhams. They looked for him, but did not find him.

Our source said: Al-Harashi sent Sulaymān b. Abī al-Sari, a client of the Banū 'Uwafah, to a fortress that was surrounded by the ḍādi of al-Sughd on all sides except one. He was accompanied by Shawkar b. Ḥamik, by the Khwārazm Shāh, and by 'Awram, the ruler of Akhrūn and Shūmān. Sulaymān b. Abī al-Sariyy put al-Mussayyab b. Bishr al-Riyāḥi in command of his vanguard and dispatched him. The Sogdians met him one far-sakh (6 km.) from the fortress in a village known as Kum, where al-Musayyab defeated them, forcing them back into the fortress. Sulaymān then besieged them. The dihqān of the fortress was known as “Diwashini.”

Al-Harashi wrote to Sulaymān offering to send reinforcements.

---

602. Text: ka-annahu ramada. Literally: “as if he were suffering from ophthalmia.”

604. On the use of this title, see EIP, s.v. Khwārazm-Shāhs.

605. A province in Transoxiana west of Shūmān. See Barthold, Turkestan, 74, 185.

607. There is no entry for Kum in Yāqūt’s geographical dictionary.
But the latter wrote back, saying, "The spot where we would rendezvous is very narrow, so march towards Kiss. We are under the protection of God, if God wills." Al-Diwāshini asked Sulaymān to place him under the authority of al-Ḥarashi and to send him to the latter, accompanied by al-Musayyab b. Bishr. Sulaymān kept his promise and sent him to Saʿīd al-Ḥarashi, who treated him with kindness and generosity, but only as a ploy. The inhabitants of the fortress sued for peace after al-Diwāshini's departure on the condition that Sulaymān agree not to harm one hundred families who were living there. In return, they agreed to deliver the fortress to him. Sulaymān wrote to al-Ḥarashi requesting that he send trustworthy agents to collect the contents of the fortress.

Al-Ḥarashi dispatched Muḥammad b. 'Azīz al-Kindī and 'Ilbā' b. Abmar al-Yashkūri, who auctioned off the contents of the fortress to the highest bidders. He took the fifth and divided the rest among them. Al-Ḥarashi set out for Kiss, the inhabitants of which sued him for peace, agreeing to pay ten thousand sheep. It was stated that al-Ḥarashi made peace with the dihqān of Kiss, whose name is Wayk, in return for six thousand sheep to be delivered in forty days, on the condition that he would not attack him. When he was done in Kiss, al-Ḥarashi set out for Rabinjan, where he slew al-Diwāshini, crucifying him on a Christian burial place. He imposed upon the people of Rabinjan the obligation to pay one hundred dinārs if the body were removed from its place. He put Naṣr b. Sayyār in charge of collecting the settlement agreed upon in Kiss. Then he dismissed Sawrah b. al-Ḥurr, replacing him with Naṣr b. Sayyār, and put Sulaymān b. Abi al-Sari in charge of military and fiscal affairs in Kiss and Nasaf. He sent al-Diwāshini's head to Iraq and his left hand to Sulaymān b. Abi al-Sari in Ṭukhāristān.

608. A fortified town on the Kushkāh Dārā River, known in Persian as Shahr-i-Sabz ["The Green City"). See Le Strange, Lands, 469.
609. Text: ra's; literally, "heads."
610. A town between Bukhāra and Samargand, on the south side of the Sughd River. See Le Strange, Lands, 468, 471.
The Events of the Year 104

Our source continued: When Khuzár proved to be impregnable, al-Mujashshir b. Muzahim asked Sa'id b. 'Amr al-Ḥarashi, "May I recommend to you someone who will conquer it on your behalf without a fight?" Sa'id replied, "Of course." Mujashshir said, "Al-Musarbal b. al-Khirrit b. Rāshid al-Nāji." Al-Ḥarashi sent him to that province. Now, al-Musarbal was a friend of Subuqri, the King of Khuzár, whose people held al-Musarbal in high esteem. He frightened the King by telling him what al-Ḥarashi had done to the people of Khujandah, whereupon the king asked him, "What do you think I should do?" He replied, "I think that you should accept his protection." The King replied, "But what shall I do with all of my retainers?" He said, "Include them with you in the protection agreement." He sued them for peace, and they granted protection to him and his lands.

Al-Ḥarashi returned to Marw, taking Subuqri with him. He encamped at Usnân and, after dispatching Muhājir b. Yazid al-Ḥarashi with an order to deliver Bardhūn b. Kushānīshāh, he slew Subuqri and crucified him, although he had a guarantee of protection. It is said: That was a dihqān from Buzmajān who approached Ibn Hubayrah and received a guarantee of safe-conduct for the Soghdian army. But al-Ḥarashi imprisoned him in the Marw citadel. When al-Ḥarashi reached Marw, he summoned him. Then he slew him, crucifying him in the public square. The poet recited, in the rajaz meter:

Behold, Sa'id marched off with the tribal divisions,
in dust that takes the breath away.

The bitterest cup turned against the Turks,
who fled on the backs of their camels.

They turned in flight, with no strings on their bows.

In this year, Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik dismissed 'Abd al-Raḥmān b. al-Ḍaḥḥāk b. Qays al-Fihri from Medina and Mecca. This occurred in the middle of the month of Rabi' I [early September, 704], after he had served as governor of Medina for three years.

613. Vocalization follows Gibb, Arab Conquests, 64.

614. One of the villages of Herat. See Yaqūt Mu'jam, I, 189.

615. The text is dihqān Ibn Mājir. See Tabari, Addenda et Emendanda, DCCII, where the reading dihqān Buzmājan is given.

In this year, Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik appointed 'Abd al-Wahid b. 'Abdallah b. Bishr al-Nadr as governor of Medina.

Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik's Dismissal of 'Abd al-Rahman b. al-Dahhak from Medina

The circumstances of his dismissal,\(^616\) as reported by Muhammad b. 'Umar—'Abdallah b. Muhammad b. Abi Yahya: 'Abd al-Rahman b. al-Dahhak b. Qays al-Fihri proposed to Fatimah b. al-Husayn,\(^617\) but she replied, "By God, I do not want to marry, for I already have these children to raise." She tried to hold him off without antagonizing him, for she was afraid of him. But he pressed her, saying, "By God, if you don't marry me, I will flog your oldest son"—that is, 'Abdallah b. al-Hasan—"for drinking wine." Now, at that time, the military register in Medina was headed by Ibn Hurmuz, a soldier in the Syrian army. Yazid wrote to Ibn Hurmuz, asking him to prepare his reckoning and deliver the register. The latter went to see Fatimah b. al-Husayn in order to say good-bye to her. He asked, "Is there anything I can do for you?" She replied, "Inform the Commander of the Faithful of the manner in which Ibn al-Dahhak is treating me and how he imposes himself on me."

Fatimah sent a messenger to Yazid, carrying a letter in which she informed him of what had transpired; she reminded Yazid of the blood ties that connected her to him, and mentioned Ibn al-Dahhak's threat and his behavior toward her. Ibn Hurmuz and Fatimah's messenger arrived together. Ibn Hurmuz went in to see Yazid, who inquired about the situation in Medina. When asked if there was any news to relate, Ibn Hurmuz said nothing about Bint al-Husayn. Then the chamberlain announced, "May God cause the Commander to prosper! A messenger sent by Fatimah b. al-Husayn is at the gate." Then Ibn Hurmuz said, "May God cause the Commander to prosper! On the day I set out, Fatimah b. al-Husayn gave me a message for you." Only then did he tell him the story.

Our source continued: Yazid came down from on top of his cushions and said, "You bastard! Why didn't you tell me about the message you were carrying when I asked you if there was any news to report?" Ibn Hurmuz claimed that he forgot. Then the messenger was granted permission to enter. Yazid took the letter, read it, and began to strike the ground with a rod that was in his hand, exclaiming, "How dare Ibn al-Dahhak! What man will give me the pleasure of hearing him scream in pain while I am reclining on my cushions?" Someone said to him, "Abd al-Wahid b. Abdallah b. Bishr al-Na'ri." Then he called for some papyrus and wrote the following letter in his own hand to 'Abd al-Wahid, who was in al-Ta'if: "Greetings. Now to the matter at hand. I have appointed you to serve as governor of Medina. When you receive my letter, go there and remove Ibn al-Dahhak from office. Fine him forty thousand dinars and torture him so that I can hear him screaming while I am reclining on my cushions."

Our source continued: The postal messenger took the letter and brought it to Medina, where Ibn al-Dahhak became apprehensive when the courier did not come to see him; he summoned the courier and showed him a thousand dinars that were hidden under a blanket, saying, "These thousand dinars are for you. You have my solemn promise that if you tell me why you were sent here, I will give you the money." The messenger told him. Ibn al-Dahhak asked the courier to wait three days before leaving for al-Ta'if, and he complied with this request. Then Ibn al-Dahhak set out at a quick pace and, when he had reached Maslamah b. Abd al-Malik, he said, "I am under your protection." The next day, Maslamah went to visit Yazid, to whom he addressed some carefully chosen words regarding a certain need on account of which he had come. Yazid said, "I am willing to grant you any request so long as it does not involve Ibn al-Dahhak." He said, "By God, it is about Ibn al-Dahhāk!” He said, “By God, I will never forgive him after what he has done.” So Maslamah sent Ibn al-Dahhāk back to Medina, to al-Nādīr.

620. Maslamah was reportedly in Damascus at the time. See Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 229.

‘Abdallāh b. Muḥammad said: I saw Ibn al-Dahhāk in Medina, wearing a wool garment, begging from the people, after having been tortured and ill-treated. Al-Nādīr arrived in Medina on a Saturday in the middle of Shawwal in the year 104 (March 27, 723).

According to Muḥammad b. ‘Umar—Ibrāhīm b. ‘Abdallāh b. Abī Farwah—al-Zuhrī: I advised ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. al-Dahhāk as follows: “You are putting (yourself) ahead of your kinsmen, but they reject everything that is contrary to their customs. Therefore, adhere to whatever they have resolved upon and consult with al-Qāsim b. Muḥammad and Sālim b. ‘Abdallāh, for they will spare no effort in guiding you.” Al-Zuhrī said, “But he rejected my advice, acted in a hostile manner towards all of the Helpers, and unjustly and wrongfully flogged Abū Bakr b. Ḥazm on the basis of a false accusation. The poets all mock him in verse, and righteous men reproach him and say ugly things about him. When Hishām became Caliph, I saw Ibn al-Dahhāk in a state of abasement.”

‘Abd al-Wāhid b. ‘Abdallāh b. Bishr became governor of Medina and established his residence in that city. The Medinese were never fonder of a man who came to them as governor, for he pursued excellent policies and always consulted with al-Qāsim and Sālim before deciding on a matter.

In this year, al-Jarrāḥ b. Abū Bakr al-Ḥakamī, the governor of Armenia and Ādharbayjān, carried out an expedition in the land of the Turks. He commanded the conquest of Balanjar and... defeated the Turks, slaying them, together with most of their women and children, by drowning them in water.

The Muslims took as many prisoners as they desired. Al-Jarrāh also conquered the strongholds adjacent to Balanjär, forcing most of their inhabitants into exile.

It is reported that in this year, Abū al-'Abbas 'Abdallāh b. Muḥammad b. 'Ali was born in the month of Rabi’ II (September 18—October 16, 722).

In this year, Abū Muḥammad al-Ṣādiq went to visit Muḥammad b. 'Ali, accompanied by a number of his Khurāsāńi supporters. The visit took place fifteen days after the birth of Abū al-'Abbas. Muḥammad b. 'Ali brought out the infant, wrapped in diapers, and said to them, “By God, this cause will be fulfilled so that you might take revenge upon your enemy.”

'Umar b. Hubayrah’s Dismissal of Sa’īd b. 'Amr al-Ḥarashi as Governor of Khurāsān

It is reported that 'Umar dismissed al-Ḥarashi because the latter had angered him in connection with al-Diwāshini. This is because al-Ḥarashi had slain al-Diwāshini, despite the fact that 'Umar had written to him ordering him to release the Turk. Al-Ḥarashi regularly treated Ibn Hubayrah’s orders with contempt: Whenever a courier or messenger arrived from Iraq, al-Ḥarashi would ask him, “How is Abū al-Muthannā?” Then he would say to his scribe, “Write to Abū al-Muthannā”—without saying ‘the governor.’ He would often say, “Abū al-Muthannā said” and “Abū al-Muthannā did.” When Ibn Hubayrah learned about this, he summoned Jumayl b. 'Imrān and said to him, “I have heard certain things about al-Ḥarashi. Go to Khurāsān and pretend that you are there for the purpose of inspecting the military registers, but let me know what you find out about him." Jumayl arrived, and al-Ḥarashi asked him, "How is Abū al-Muthannā?" Then he began to inspect the military registers. Someone said to al-Ḥarashi, "Jumayl has come here to spy on you, not to inspect the military registers." Ibn Hubayrah therefore laced a watermelon with poison and sent it to Jumayl, who ate it and became sick, losing all of his hair. Jumayl returned to Ibn Hubayrah, "Things are even worse than you thought. Sa‘īd thinks that you are merely one of his agents." Enraged, Ibn Hubayrah dismissed Sa‘īd and tortured him until his stomach was covered with small pustules. At the time of his dismissal, Sa‘īd made the following statement, "Were 'Umar to ask me for a dirham so that he might buy some kohl with it, I would not give it to him." But when he was tortured, he paid. Someone mocked him, saying, "Didn't you claim that you wouldn't give him a single dirham?" To which Sa‘īd replied, "Don't chide me, for I broke down when the iron struck me." Udhaynah b. Kulayb, or Kulayb b. Udhaynah, recited:

Be steadfast, Abū Yaḥyā, for according to our knowledge you used to be patient, rising up under the weight of debts.

According to ‘Ali b. Muḥammad: Ibn Hubayrah's anger with Sa‘īd is related to the following incident: Ibn Hubayrah sent Ma‘qil b. ‘Urwah to Herat to serve either as his governor there or in some other capacity. Ma‘qil went down to Herat without stopping to see al-Ḥarashi. Ma‘qil arrived in Herat, but al-Ḥarashi wouldn't allow him to assume his new position. Ma‘qil wrote to al-Ḥarashi, who wrote to his governor as follows, "Send Ma‘qil to me." When he was brought to him, al-Ḥarashi asked, "Why didn't you come to me before you went to Herat?" He replied, "I am one of Ibn Hubayrah's governors, having been appointed by him in the same manner as you were." Sa‘īd administered two hundred lashes to Ma‘qil and shaved off his hair. This was why Ibn Hubayrah dismissed Sa'id and appointed Muslim b. Sa'id b. Aslam b. Zur'ah as governor of Khurasan.

632. Text: yaḍa‘ahū fi ‘aynīhi, literally, "so that he might put it in his eye."

Ibn Hubayrah wrote a letter to al-Ḥarashi in which he called him the son of a foul-smelling woman. After reading the letter, Sa'id exclaimed, "He is the son of a foul-smelling woman." Then Ibn Hubayrah wrote to Muslim saying, "Send al-Ḥarashi to me, together with Ma'qil b. 'Urwah." He sent al-Ḥarashi to Ibn Hubayrah, who treated him with great severity. Then, one day he gave an order to torture al-Ḥarashi, saying, "Torture him until he dies." That evening, while Ibn Hubayrah was engaged in conversation with his companions, he asked, "Who is the most eminent man among the Qays?" They replied, "You are." He said, "What! The most eminent man among the Qays is al-Kawthar b. Zu'far. He has only to sound the bugle at night and twenty thousand men show up; furthermore, they do not ask, 'Why have you summoned us?' nor do they question his orders. But that ass lying in prison whom I have ordered to be slain is their bravest man. Am I not the man who seeks the best interests of the Qays? Indeed, whenever some matter comes to my attention and I think that I will be able to derive some benefit or advantage from it (for the Qays), I pursue it." To which a bedouin from the tribe of Banū Fazārah replied, "You are not what you claim to be, for if you really had the best interests of the Qays in mind, you would not have ordered that their bravest man be slain." He then sent a message to Ma'qil, saying, "Ignore my previous order."

According to 'Ali—Muslim b. al-Mughirah: When Ibn Hubayrah fled, Khalid sent Sa'id b. 'Amr al-Ḥarashi to apprehend him. He overtook him at a point on the Euphrates as he was crossing over to the other side of the river in a boat. Inside the boat was a servant of Ibn Hubayrah by the name of Qubayd. Al-Ḥarashi recognized him and asked, "Are you Qubayd?" The servant replied, “Yes.” He asked, “Is Abū al-Muthannā in the boat?” Again, the servant said, “Yes.” Then Ibn Hubayrah emerged, and al-Ḥarashi asked him, “Abū al-Muthannā, what do you imagine that I am going to do with you?” He said, “I think that you are a man who would not hand over a fellow tribesman to a Qurashi.” He said, “You are right.” Ibn Hubayrah said, “Then I am saved.”

According to ‘Āli—Abū Isḥāq b. Rabī‘ah: When Ibn Hubayrah imprisoned al-Ḥarashi, Ma‘qil b. ‘Urwah al-Qushayri approached the former, saying “May God cause the governor to prosper! You have put the bravest man of the Qays in chains and disgraced him. Now, although I don’t like him, I wouldn’t want you to torture him to the extent that I was tortured.” He said, “Serve as an arbiter between us. When I came to Iraq, I appointed him governor of al- Ба$rah; subsequently, I appointed him governor of Khurāsān. But I dismissed him because he sent me a diseased horse, treated my orders with contempt, and betrayed me. I referred to him as Ibn Nas‘ah, and he referred to me as Ibn Busrah.” Ma‘qil said, “Did he act like that, the son of the prostitute?”

Ma‘qil went to visit al-Ḥarashi in the prison. “O Ibn Nas‘ah,” he said, “your mother entered and was sold for eighty mangy sheep. She was with the shepherds, who came to her one after the other as if she were the riding animal of someone who is constantly coming and going.” Do you consider her the equal of Bint al-Ḥārith b. ‘Amr b. Ḥarajah?” And he uttered other calumnies against him.

When Ibn Hubayrah was removed from office and Khālid arrived in Iraq, al-Ḥarashi asked for permission to take vengeance on Ma‘qil b. ‘Urwah. Al-Ḥarashi brought proof that Ma‘qil had 635. ‘Umar and Sa‘īd were both Qaysis. See Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 319–21.

636. Nas‘ah and Busrah were the mothers of al-Ḥarashi and ‘Umar b. Hubayrah, respectively. It was considered an insult to refer to someone by his matronymic rather than his patronymic.

638. Al-Ḥārith was a military commander who fought against the Turks in Adharbayjān. See text below, II/1526, sub anno 111, and II/1532, sub anno 116; Caskel, Gambarah, I, 130.

639. Khālid al-Qasri. See note 634, above.
made false accusations against him, whereupon Khalid said to al-Harashi, "Flog him." As al-Harashi was administering the hadd punishment to him, he said, "Were it not for the fact that Ibn Hubayrah sapped my strength, I would have pierced you through the heart." A tribesman from the Banū Kilāb said to Maʿqil, "You mistreated your paternal cousin and slandered him; therefore God has allowed him to prevail over you, and you are no longer a credible witness among the Muslims." As the hadd punishment was being administered to Maʿqil, he slandered al-Harashi again, causing Khalid to order that the punishment be administered a second time. But the qādi said, "He is not to be flogged again."

He said: 'Umar b. Hubayrah's mother is Busrah bt. Ḥassān, of the tribe of 'Adī, from 'Adī of al-Ribāb.

The Appointment of Muslim b. Saʿīd as Governor of Khurāsān

According to 'Ali b. Muhammad—Abū al-Dhayyāl, 'Ali b. Mujāhid, and others: When Saʿīd b. Aslam was killed, al-Ḥajjāj took his son, Muslim b. Saʿīd, and raised him together with his own children, providing him with an excellent education. When 'Adī b. Arṭāt arrived,641 he wanted to confer an appointment upon Muslim, so he consulted with his scribe, who said, "[First] give him a minor appointment and then promote him." 'Adī put him in charge of a certain province, where he established himself, doing a fine job of managing its affairs. At the time of Yazīd b. al-Muhallab’s revolt,642 (Muslim) took the revenues (of that province) to Syria. Subsequently, when 'Umar b. Hubayrah arrived,643 he summoned Muslim, having resolved to appoint him to a gover-

---

641. That is, arrived in al-Ṭabāʾiḥ, to serve as governor. See text above, II/1346,
sub anno 99.
642. See text above, II/1370ff., sub anno 101.
643. That is, arrived in Khurāsān, to serve as governor. See text above, II/1433, sub anno 102.
norship. 'Umar looked at Muslim, who until then had no grey hair, and saw white hair in his beard. "God is great," he exclaimed.

'Umar stayed up late one night talking, and Muslim, who was one of his companions, stayed behind after the other men had left. Ibn Hubayrah threw a quince that he was holding in his hand at Muslim, saying, "Would it please you if I were to appoint you as governor of Khurāsān?" He said, "Yes." He said, "Tomorrow, if God wills." The next morning 'Umar held an audience and when the people came to see him, he appointed Muslim as governor of Khurāsān. He wrote out the document of appointment and ordered him to depart. He also wrote to his fiscal agents, ordering them to correspond with Muslim b. Sa‘īd. Then he summoned Jabalah b. 'Abd al-Rahmān, a client of the Bāhilah, and appointed him governor of Kirmān. Jabalah said, "What has my clientage done to me? It was Muslim's hope that I would become governor of a great province and then put him in charge of a district. Now he has been appointed governor of Khurāsān, while I have been appointed governor of Kirmān!"

Muslim set out, reaching Khurāsān at the end of the year 104/722–23 or 103/721–22. He arrived in the middle of the day, but found the gate of the royal residence locked. He went to the royal stable, but it, too, was locked. Finally, he entered the mosque, where the gate to the ruler's enclosure (al-maqṣūrah) was locked. As Muslim was performing his prayers, a servant emerged from the enclosure, and someone said to him, "The governor is here." The servant led him to the governor's audience room in the royal residence. Al-Ḥarashi was told that Muslim b. Sa‘īd b. Aslam had arrived, and he sent him the following message: "Have you come as a governor, as a minister, or as a visitor?" Muslim replied, "A man of my stature would not come to Khurāsān as either a visitor or as a minister." Al-Ḥarashi approached Muslim, who swore at him and ordered that he be thrown into prison. Someone said to him, "If you send him out in broad daylight, someone may slay him." Muslim therefore ordered that al-Ḥarashi be kept near him until evening. Then, during the night, he sent him to the prison, where he was tied up in shackles. Some time later he ordered the jailor to put on additional shackles. The latter approached al-Ḥarashi with a sad look on his face. "What is the matter with you?" al-Ḥarashi asked. "I have been ordered to put on more shackles," he replied. Al-Ḥarashi then said to his scribe, "Write to Muslim as follows: "Your jailor tells me that you ordered him to put additional shackles on me. If this order issued from a higher authority, we hear and obey; but if this was your idea, you will pay for this." He recited:

644. Text: yanbughi yatma'; read yanbaghi, following the Cairo ed.

If they manage to find me, they will slay me;
but whomever I overtake will not last.

But some relate it thus:

If you find me, then slay me;
but whomever I overtake will not last.
They are the enemies, whether present or absent,
full of hatred, with black livers.
Do pursue me in your own manner, for verily I,
with [my horse] Ḥadhfah, am like the bone sticking fast in the throat beneath the carotid artery.

And some relate it thus:

Do seek me in your own manner.

Our source continued: Muslim dispatched a man to his districts to serve as his agent in charge of military affairs there.

Previously, Ibn Hubayrah, in his zeal, had arrested and imprisoned a man who had worked as a steward for Yazīd b. al-Muhallab and who was knowledgable about Khurāsān and its leading men. The steward accused all the leading men of the province of misappropriating revenues. Ibn Hubayrah dispatched Abū 'Ubaydah al-'Anbari, together with a man known as Khālid, and he wrote to al-Ḥarashi ordering him to hand over those men who had been named by the steward so that he might demand the money from them. But al-Ḥarashi refused and he sent back Ibn Hubayrah's messenger. Now, when Ibn Hubayrah appointed Muslim b. Saʿīd

---

645. Text: fa-sayruka al-huqaqaḥ, literally, "You will be driven to exhaustion."
646. The text is Ḥidḥqah. See Lane, Lection, pt. 3, p. 1189, s.v. ṭ-w-gh.
as governor, he ordered him to collect those revenues. Muslim arrived and wanted to hold the people accountable for the revenues that had been distributed among them, but he was advised as follows:

If you do that to those men, you will not have any peace and quiet in Khurāsān. If, on the other hand, you are dismissed because of your failure to accomplish this, Khurāsān will be ruined, both for you and for them. The men whom you want to hold accountable for those revenues—the chiefs of the country—have been falsely accused: Mihzam b. Jābir owed only three hundred thousand (dirhams), but they added a hundred thousand, raising the debt to four hundred thousand. But most of those whose names have been given to you are among those whose debts have been greatly exaggerated.

Muslim wrote to Ibn Hubayrah informing him of the situation, and sent him a delegation that included Mihzam b. Jābir among its members. Mihzam said to Ibn Hubayrah, “O Commander, the accusation that has been brought before you is false and unjust. If the truth were told, we are accountable for only a small portion of that sum, which we would pay—if we were asked to do so.” Then Ibn Hubayrah recited, “God commands you to deliver trusts back to their owners.” But Mihzam said, “Recite the remainder of the verse: ‘And when you judge between the people, that you judge with justice.’” Ibn Hubayrah said: “We must have that money.” Mihzam declared:

By God, if you take it, you will be taking it from men who are capable of inflicting great havoc upon your enemies. Furthermore, that would harm the army of Khurāsān with respect to its military equipment, horses, and weapons. We live on a frontier where we fight against an enemy that is constantly at war. We wear iron so often that the rust sticks to our skin; indeed, the smell of iron causes a female servant to turn her face away from her

647. Text: qurīfāt ‘alaihim, read furriqat ‘alaihim, following the Cairo ed.
master and from other men that she serves. You, on the other hand, stay at home, adorning yourselves in fine clothes dyed with saffron. Now, the men who have been accused of appropriating those revenues—the leaders of the army of Khurasan and the army of the provinces—undertake enormous expenses in order to carry out military expeditions. There are men here who have come to us riding on donkeys from the deepest ravines. Having been appointed as governors of the provinces, they collected the revenues which are heaped up in abundance.\textsuperscript{650}

Ibn Hubayrah wrote to Muslim b. Sa'īd informing him of the delegation’s statement and ordering him to seize the revenues from the men who, according to the delegation, possessed them.
When Muslim received Ibn Hubayrah’s letter, he arrested the tributaries in connection with those revenues and ordered Ḥājib
b. 'Amr al-Ḥārithi to torture them. After they had been tortured, he seized the revenues that had been distributed among them.\textsuperscript{651}

In this year, the pilgrimage was led by 'Abd al-Wāḥid b. 'Abdallāh al-Nādri, as was related to me by Ahmad b. Thābit—his authority—Ishāq b. ʿĪsā—Abū Ma'shar. Al-Wāqidi reported the same.

The governor of Mecca, Medina, and al-Ṭā’īf in this year was 'Abd al-Wāḥid b. 'Abdallāh al-Nādri. 'Umar b. Hubayrah was governor of Iraq and the East.\textsuperscript{652} Ḥusayn b. al-Ḥasan al-Kindī was in charge of the judiciary in al-Kūfah. 'Abd al-Malik b. Ya'lá was in charge of the judiciary in al-Baṣrah.

\textsuperscript{650} Text: muwaffarah; the Cairo ed. reads mawqarah, “a tree overladen with fruit.”

\textsuperscript{651} Text: qurifa 'alayhim, read furriqa 'alayhim, following the Cairo ed.

\textsuperscript{652} ‘The East’ refers to Khurasān.
The events of this year included a military expedition against Alān that was carried out by al-Jarrāh b. ʿAbdallāh al-Ḥakāmī, who passed through that country to the towns and strongholds beyond Balanjar. He conquered some of that region, expelling many of its inhabitants and collecting considerable quantities of booty.

In this year, Saʿīd b. ʿAbd al-Malik raided Byzantium. He dispatched a military detachment that included approximately one thousand fighters, all of whom reportedly perished.

In this year, Muslim b. Saʿīd carried out a military expedition against the Turks, but when he did not conquer any lands, he returned to Khurāsān. Later in the year, he carried out a raid against Afšīnāh, one of the towns in al-Sughd, where he concluded a peace agreement with its king and inhabitants.

653. See Ibn Khayyāṭ, Taʾrikh, 1, 339; Azdí, Taʾrikh, 20. 654. Afšīnāh was located in the district of Samarqand. See Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 454, n. 1. 655. See Baladhuri, Futūḥ (Cairo), III, 525.
The Events of the Year 105

Muslim b. Sa‘īd’s Expedition against the Turks

According to ‘Ali b. Muḥammad—his authorities: Muslim b. Sa‘īd appointed Bahrām Sis as a provincial governor. Late in the summer of the year 105/723–24, Muslim undertook a military expedition, but when he did not make any conquests, he turned back. The Turks pursued him, overtaking him as the soldiers were crossing over the Balkh River. The cavalry of Tamīm, led by ‘Ubaydallāh b. Zuhayr b. Ḥayyān, was in command of his rear-guard and they protected the other soldiers until they had crossed over the river. (This was when Yazīd b. ‘Abd al-Malik died, and Hishām became Caliph. Then Muslim raided Afshīn and concluded a peace agreement with its King whereby he was to receive six thousand head of sheep. He left at the end of the year 105/723–24, after the King had delivered the fortress to him.

The Death of Yazīd b. ‘Abd al-Malik

In this year, the Caliph, Yazīd b. ‘Abd al-Malik b. Marwān, died on the twenty-sixth of Sha‘bān (January 28, 724). This was related to me by Aḥmad b. Thābit—his authority—Išāq b. ‘Īsā—Abū Maʿshār. Al-Wāqidi transmitted the same report.

According to al-Wāqidi: He died in Balqā’, which is in the district of Damascus, at the age of thirty-eight. Some authorities say that he died at the age of forty, while others maintain that he was thirty-six.

According to Abū Maʿshār, Hishām b. Muḥammad, and ‘Ali b. Muḥammad, he served as Caliph for four years and one month. According to al-Wāqidi, he was Caliph for four years. Yazīd b. ‘Abd al-Malik’s patronymic was Abū Khālid. This was related by Abū Maʿshār, Hishām b. Muḥammad, al-Wāqidi, and others.

656. Text: al-marzubān. On this term, see note 97 above.

657. Note the discrepancy between the spelling of the name here and in the previous paragraph. On the distinction between Afsīn, a personal name, and Afshīnah, the name of a town, see Wellhausen, Arab Kingdom, 432, 454; Bālādhuri, Futūḥ [Cairo], III, 525.

658. See Ibn Khayyāt, Taʾrikh, I, 339–40; Dinawari, Akhbār, 336; Yaʿqūbī, Taʾrikh, III, 58; Kūfī, Futūḥ, VIII, 35; Azdī, Taʾrikh, 18; Masʿūdī, Murūǧ [Beirut], III, 195; FHA, 80–81; Ibn Kathīr, Bidāyah, IX, 231.

According to 'Ali b. Muhammad: Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik died at the age of thirty-five or thirty-four, on Friday the twenty-sixth of Sha'bān in the year 105 [January 28, 724]. He died in Arbad,660 in the district of Balqā'. His son, al-Walid, who was fifteen years old, prayed over him.661 On that day, Hishām b. 'Abd al-Malik was in Himṣ. This was related to me by 'Umar b. Shabbah, on the authority of 'Ali.

According to Hishām b. Muḥammad: Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik died at the age of thirty-three.

According to 'AG: Abu Miwiyah or some other Jew said to Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik, "You will reign for forty years." One of the Jews said, "He lied, may God curse him. He predicted that he would reign for forty qaṣabahs." A qaṣabah is equivalent to one month. But he turned a month into a year.

Aspects of His Character

According to 'Umar b. Shabbah—'Ali: Yazid b. 'Atikah was one of their [that is, the Marwānids'] youths.663 One day, when he was in a good mood, he said, in the presence of Ḥabābah664 and Sallāmah,665 "Let me fly." Habābah said, "To whom will you entrust the Muslim community?"666 When he died, Sallāmah of al-Qass667 recited:

---

661. It is also reported that Yazid's brother, Hishām, prayed over his body. See Ibn Khayyāt, Ta'rīkh, I, 340; Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 233.
662. See Azdī, Ta'rīkh, 18–21; Maqdisī, Bad', VI, 48–49; Ibn Kathir, Bidāyah, IX, 232–33.
663. Text: min fītyānīhiṃ. According to Azdī, Ta'rīkh, 5, Yazid's nickname was al-fatā, "the youth."
664. Ḥabābah was a singing slave girl of Medina who exerted complete control over the Caliph Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik due to his infatuation with her. See EP, s.v. Ḥabāba.
665. Sallāmah was a Medinese slave girl, purchased by the Caliph Yazid, who performed as a singer. See EP, s.v. Ḥabāba, Aghānī [Beirut], VIII, 336–53.
666. Yazid reportedly answered, "To you." See Ma'sūdī, Murūj [Beirut], III, 199; Ibn al-Athīr, Kāmil, V, 121.
667. An allusion to her love affair with the Meccan jurist and Qur'ān reciter, 'Abd al-Raḥmān b. 'Abdallāh b. Abi 'Ammar al-Jushami, who was known as al-Qass ["the priest"], because of his great piety. See Aghānī [Beirut], VIII, 336ff.; Ibn al-Athīr, Kāmil, V, 122–23.
Do not criticize us if we submit or are on the point of submitting.
By my life, I stayed up all night,
as if afflicted by a painful disease.
Anxiety slept closer to me than did my bedfellow.668
Because of what happened to us today, namely, the difficult affair.669
Every time that I saw a home that was empty, my eyes began to tear.
It is empty of a lord who never neglected us.670

Then she cried out, “O Commander of the Faithful!”671 The poetry was composed by one of the Helpers.672

According to 'Ali: Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik performed the pil-gramage during the caliphate of Sulaymân b. 'Abd al-Malik, and it was on this occasion that he purchased Ḥabābah, whose (original) name was al-'Āliyah, for four thousand dinārs from 'Uthmān b.
Sahl b. Hunayf. Sulaymân said, “I want to prohibit Yazid from squandering his money.” As a result, Yazid returned Ḥabābah, who was then purchased by an inhabitant of Egypt. Subsequently, Su'dah asked Yazid, “O Commander of the Faithful, is there anything in the world that you still desire?” He said, “Yes there is:
Ḥabābah.” Su’dah therefore sent a man who purchased Ḥabābah for four thousand dinārs. Su’dah made her up and adorned her so that she would not look travel weary, and then she brought her to Yazid and placed her behind a curtain. She asked, “O Commander of the Faithful, is there anything in the world that you still desire?” He replied, “Yes. Didn’t I tell you when you asked me this question previously?” Then she lifted up the curtain and said, “Behold! Ḥabābah.” Su’dah stood up, leaving Ḥabābah alone with the Caliph. This act endeared Su’dah to Yazid, who was generous with her and gave her many presents. Su’dah, who was from the family of ’Uthmān b. ‘Affān, was Yazid’s wife.

According to ’Ali—Yūnis b. Ḥabib: One day, Ḥababah, a slave girl belonging to Yazid b. ‘Abd al-Malik, sang the following song:

Between the collarbones and the uvula is a burning heat that does not subside and is not easy to swallow, and thus cool down.673

Yazid extended his arms to fly, but she said, “O Commander of the Faithful, we need you.” When she became very ill,674 he asked, “How are you, Ḥababah?” But she did not answer. He cried and recited:

If the soul forgets you, or desire abandons you,
the heart forgets out of despair, not out of hardness.

Yazid heard one of her servants recite the following line:

It is sufficient mourning for the love-sick, bewildered one to see the abodes of the one he desired left untended and deserted.

Yazid also recited this.

According to ’Umar—’Alī: Yazid b. ’Abd al-Malik refused to see anyone for seven days after Ḥababah died, on the recommendation of Maslamah, who feared that Yazid would appear foolish in the eyes of the people.675

673. See FHA, 77.
674. Yazid, who wanted to be alone with Ḥababah, ordered his servants not to disturb him under any circumstances. While the two of them were sitting together in a garden, Ḥababah began to choke on a pomegranate seed (according to some versions: a grape seed that the Caliph threw at her). Ḥababah died after Yazid’s pleas for assistance were dutifully ignored by his servants. See FHA, 77–78; Maqdisi, Bad’, VI, 48–49; Ibn al-Athir, Kāmil, V, 121.
675. That is, because of his grief over Ḥababah. See FHA, 77.

Dictionary of the Middle Ages. New York: Charles Scribner’s Sons, 1982–.

Bibliography of Cited Works

al-Maqdisī, Muṭahhar b. Tāḥir. Kitāb al-Bad‘ wa-l-Ta‘rikh. Edited by

This index contains all names of places, persons, and tribal and other groups that occur in the introduction, the text, and the footnotes, except that only names belonging to the medieval or earlier periods have been included from the footnotes. An asterisk after a name indicates that it occurs only in the chains of transmitters.

The definite article al and the abbreviations b. (for ibn, "son") and bt. (bint, "daughter") have been disregarded for purposes of alphabetization.

A

Abān Canal 81
Abār b. Mākhnūn 171
'Abbād b. Ayyūb * 31
'Abbād b. Laqīt 36
al-'Abbās b. al-Walid b. 'Abd al-Malik 121, 127-28, 130, 135, 145, 147, 167
'Abd al-A'lä b. 'Abdallāh b. 'Āmir al-Qurashi 114
'Abd al-A'lä b. Maṃṣūr * 93
'Abd al-'Aziz b. 'Amr b. al-Ḥajjāj al-Zabidi 150-51

'Abd al-'Aziz b. al-Ḥārith 17, 19
'Abd al-'Aziz b. Ḥātim b. al-Nu'mān 163
'Abd al-'Aziz b. Mūsā b. Nusayr 30
'Abd al-'Aziz b. al-Walid b. 'Abd al-Malik 5-6, 74
'Abd al-Ḥamīd * 101
'Abd al-Ḥamīd al-Ḥāṣī * 133
'Abd al-Ḥamīd b. Dīthār * 151
'Abd al-Jabbār b. 'Umārah * 105
'Abd al-Karīm b. Muslim 20
'Abd al-Malik b. Bishr b. Marwān 149, 163-65
'Abd al-Malik b. Dīthār 151, 154
Index

'Abd al-Malik b. Hilal 145
'Abd al-Malik b. Marwân 6, 9 n. 28, 30 n. 127, 41–42, 49 n. 181
'Abd al-Malik b. Misma 144-15, 128–29, 141
'Abd al-Malik b. Sallam al-Salûlî 38
'Abd al-Malik b. 'Umar b. 'Abd al-'Azîz 99 n. 353
'Abd al-Malik b. Ya'la 168, 191
'Abd al-Rahmin b. 'Abdallih b. Abi Zakariyya al-Khuzi'i 40
'Abd al-Rahmin b. Muslim al-Faqir 9, 15, 18, 20
'Abd al-Rahmin b. Nu'ammar al-Yashkuri 52–53
'Abd allah b. Ammâr al-Jushami, known as al-Qass ('the priest') 194 n. 667
'Abd allah b. Jumânah al-Bâhili, poet 27
'Abd al-Rahmân b. Mahdi * 101
'Abd al-Rahmân b. al-Muhallab al-`Adawi 159
'Abd al-Rahmân b. Muhammâd b. al-Ash'ath 131, 143, 144 n. 493
'Abd al-Rahmân b. al-Mubârak * 85
'Abd allah b. Muhammad b. 'Umayr al-Laythi 166
'Abdallâh b. 'Abdullîh b. Bishr al-Nâdî 167, 180–82, 191
'Abdallâh b. Abi Zakariyyâ al-Khuzâ'i 40
'Abdallâh b. Ahmad b. Shabbawayh * 65, 96–97
'Abdallâh b. al-Ahtam 13, 33–36
'Abdallâh b. 'Alwân al-'Awdhi 14

'Abdallâh b. 'Amr b. 'Uthmân b. 'Affân 4 n. 7
'Abdallâh b. 'Azrâh al-Bâsri 141
'Abdallâh b. Bakr b. 'Abdallih al-Sahmi * 98
'Abdallâh b. Darrâj 96 n. 341
'Abdallâh b. 'Abdallih b. Habib 84
'Abdallâh b. al-'Adawi 159
'Abdallâh b. al-Hasan b. al-Hasan b. 'Ali b. Abi 'Abdallâh b. 'Abdallih 63
'Abdallâh b. Muhammad b. 'Ali, Abû al-'Abbâs 183
'Abdallâh b. Muhammâd b. Sa'd * 99
'Abdallâh b. Muhammad b. 'Umayr b. 'Ali 65, 96–97
'Abdallâh b. Usâyn b. Yazîd b. al-Mughaffal al-Azdi 129
'Abdallâh b. 'Umar, from the Taym Allât 24
'Abdallâh b. 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭâb 92, 116
'Abdallâh b. 'Umayr al-Laythi 166
'Abdallâh b. Wâ'il 141
'Abdallâh b. Wa'lân al-'Adawi 17, 19
'Abdallâh b. Zuhray b. Salîm al-Azdi 160
Abghar 149, 171
Abhar 27
Abrashahr 52. See also Nishâpur
Abû al-'Abbâs. See 'Abdallâh b. Muhammâd b. 'Ali
Abû al-'Abbâs al-Tusi 153
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Index</th>
<th>203</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Family/Reference</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Abū 'Abdallāh al-Sulamī</td>
<td>* 24</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-‘Alā’ al-Taymi</td>
<td>* 32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū ‘Ali al-Jūzjānī</td>
<td>* 8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū b. ‘Abdah</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū ‘Aqlī, family 4–5, 89</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Ayyūb.</td>
<td>See Sulaymān b.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū ‘Abdār R. al-Taymi</td>
<td>* 32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū All al-Juzjānī</td>
<td>* 8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū ‘Amir al-Sha‘bī</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>See Sharāhīl b.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū ‘Agil, family 4-5, 89</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Ayyub.</td>
<td>See Sulaymān b.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-‛Alā’ al-Taymi</td>
<td>* 32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Bahā’ al-Iyādī, poet</td>
<td>* 35</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Bakr, caliph 124 n. 431</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Bakr b. ‘Abd al-‘Aziz b.</td>
<td>al-Ḍāḥḥāk b. Qays * 65</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Bakr b. ‘Abd al-Rahmān b.</td>
<td>al-Ḥārith b. Hishām 106</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Bakr b. Abī Mūsā 29</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Bakr al-Hudhali</td>
<td>* 51</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Dhawayl * 8, 16, 23, 187</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Ḥafṣ. See Ḥudayn b. al-Mundhir; Quṭaybah b. Muslim; ‘Umar b.</td>
<td>‘Abd al-‘Aziz</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Ḥafṣ al-Azdi</td>
<td>* 32, 48</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Hasan al-Jashāmi</td>
<td>* 8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Hasan al-Khurāsānī</td>
<td>* 32, 35–36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Hayyāj. See Hayyān al-Nabaṭī</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Hūr al-Bāhilī</td>
<td>* 24</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū ‘Iṣrāmah al-Sarrāj.</td>
<td>See Muḥam-mad b. Khunays</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Iṣḥāq b. Rabi‘ah * 186</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Ja‘far al-Tabarī xiv, xvi</td>
<td>3, 32, 60, 81, 87, 88 n. 315, 97–98, 108, 111, 126, 137, 149, 167</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Jahm al-Kalbi</td>
<td>* 52</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Khalīd. See Yazīd b. ‘Abd al-Malik b. Marwān</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Maqrāh b. Ḥayyān. See Uṯmān b. Ḥayyān al-Murri</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Mālik * 20, 35</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Ma‘ṣhar * 29, 38, 60, 62, 88, 91, 126, 165, 167, 191, 193</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Māwiyyah 194</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Miṣlāz Lāḥiq b. Hinduym 84–85, 97</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Minqar 113</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Mu‘āwiyyah * 32</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Mu‘ayt family 83</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Muhājir b. Dārāh 153</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Muḥammad. See Ḥudayn b. al-Mundhir</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Muḥammad al-Ṣādiq. See Muḥammad b. Khunays</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Muḥammad al-Thaqafi * 51</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Muṭarrīf. See Waki‘ b. Ḥassān b.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Sūd al-Tamīmī</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Muthannā. See ‘Umar b. Hubayrah</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Nāfī’ Dhū al-Wada‘at. See Yazīd b. Tharwān</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Nuhayk b. Ziyād * 86</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Qabīsīḥ. See Marwān b. al-Muhallab</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Qatifah. See ‘Arm b. al-Walid b.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Uqbah b. Abī Mu‘ayt</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Raghwān 65</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Ru‘bah al-Murji‘ī 132, 137, 140</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Ṣafwān * 48</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Ṣalīḥ 60</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Sāri al-Azdi * 19, 36, 86</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Sāsān. See Ḥudayn b. al-Mundhir</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Šaydā‘. See Ṣalīb b. Ţarīf</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Shaybān. See Muqāṭīl b. Shaybān</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū ‘Ubaydah al-‘Anbārī 189</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū ‘Ubaydah Ma‘mar b. al-Muthan-nā* 7, 20, 24, 35, 63, 77–78, 108</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū ‘Uyaynah b. al-Muḥallab 45, 52–53, 93, 145</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Walid. See Šalīh b. ‘Abd al-Rahmān; ‘Umarah b. Ḫukaymah al-Laythī</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū Yahyā. See Sa‘īd b. ‘Arm al-Ḥarāshī</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Yaqẓān * 21</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Index</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-------</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abū al-Zinād 75</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ādīm b. 'Abd al-Rahmān 4</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ādharbayjān 74, 182, 186 n. 638</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ādī b. Ārṭār al-Fazārī 75, 79, 81, 111–19, 141–42, 146 n. 500, 187</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ādī of al-Ribāb, tribe 23, 176, 187</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Alfān b. Muslim * 101</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Afshīn 193</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Afshīnāh 192</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Āh al-Ālīyah, regiment 12, 14, 114. See also Āh al-Madīnāh</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Āh al-Madīnāh 114. See also Āh al-Ālīyah</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Āhmād * 47</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Āhmād b. Sa’d. See Ibn Sa’d</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Āhmād b. Thābit * 29, 38, 60, 62, 88, 91, 126, 191, 193</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Āhmād b. Zuhayr * 40, 46</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-Āhwās, poet 193</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Akhrūn 177</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Akhūr 43 n. 160</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Ak, tribe 146</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-Ālā’ b. al-Minhāl. See al-Ghanāwī</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-Ālā’ b. Zuhayr * 130</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ālān 167, 192</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alburz, mountain range 14 n. 64, 42 n. 159, 47 n. 175</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aleppo 40 n. 146, 75 n. 263, 79 n. 281, 80 n. 287, 90 n. 323, 145 Alexander the Great. See Dhū al-Qarnayn</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Ālī b. Muḥājīd * 50, 52, 54, 60, 62, 93, 187</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-Ālīyah 143. See also Ḥabābah ‘Āmīr, tribe 168</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr b. al-‘Amayṭḥāl al-Āzādī 131, 139</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr b. Aynām al-‘Uṣbihī 56</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr b. Ḥāfṣ al-Kirmānī * 32, 36</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr al-Shā’bī 75, 126</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīrāh b. Rabi’ah al-‘Uṣbyī, known as ‘Āmīrat al-Tharīd 16, 153</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīrat al-Barīd b. Rabi’ah al-‘Uṣbyī. See ‘Āmīrāh b. Rabi’ah al-‘Uṣbyī</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr [or ‘Umar] b. ‘Abd al-‘Azīz b. al-Ḥārith 19</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr b. ‘Abdallāh b. Sinān al-‘Atākī al-Ṣūnābīḥī 36</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr b. ‘Amīr 148</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr b. A’yan, Abū Ḥamzah 88</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr al-Azīdī 36</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr b. Bahīr b. Warqā’ al-Sā’dī 164</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr b. Ḥassān al-Ṭā’ī 153</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr b. Muslim 20</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr b. Qabīsah b. al-Muhallāb 145 n. 496</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr b. Qays al-Kindī 42, 79. See also Mas’adah b. Qays</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr b. ‘Uthmān * 91</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr b. al-Wālid b. ‘Uqba b. Abi Mu’ayt, Abū Qatīfah 113</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Āmīr b. Yazīd al-Ḥakāmī 119</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Āmul 150</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anatolīa 40 n. 146</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-Anbār 9 n. 26, 128</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Anbār, tribe 8</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Anbāsah * 50</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-Andalus 30</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Andarastān 52</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-Andarhaz, wādí 57</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Antioch 42</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Aqābāh 143</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-‘Aqr 121, 128–29, 136, 147, 168</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Arabia 10 n. 38 and 41, 17 n. 72, 130 n. 454, 137 n. 474</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>‘Arāfāt 37</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Arbad 194</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Armenia 40, 164, 182</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Asad, tribe 130</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Asad b. ‘Abdallāh 45</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Asad b. ‘Amīr 52</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-‘Aṣamī b. al-Ḥajjājī, poet 27</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Asfārah 170</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-‘Aṣḥā. See Maymūn b. Qaysi</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-‘Ash’āth al-Ṭā’ī, Abū Ḥatāmah 153</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-‘Ashhab b. Rumaylah, poet 14</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Term</td>
<td>Page(s)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-------------------------------</td>
<td>---------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-Ashhab b. 'Ubayd ['Ubaydallâh] al-Hanzali</td>
<td>154</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ashja', tribe</td>
<td>164</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Āsim 78 n. 276</td>
<td>92</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Āsim b. 'Umar b. al-Khattâb</td>
<td>92</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aslam, tribe</td>
<td>148</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Ātâ al-Dabusi</td>
<td>173</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Atik, tribe</td>
<td>122</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Ātikh bt. al-Furst b. Mu'âwiyyah al-'Amiriyyah</td>
<td>90</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Atikh bt. Yazid b. Mu'âwiyyah b. Abu Sufyân</td>
<td>42 n. 153</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Atrek River</td>
<td>160</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Awâsâ 167 n. 578. See also</td>
<td>192</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Raslah</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Awf, tribe</td>
<td>148</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Awram</td>
<td>177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Ayn al-Tamr 9, 81</td>
<td>175</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ayyûb b. Abu Hassân</td>
<td>18</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ayyûb b. Khawali, Abû Tha'labah</td>
<td>109</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ayyûb b. Salamah al-Makhzûmi</td>
<td>37</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ayyûb b. Sulaymân b. 'Abd al-Malik</td>
<td>41-42</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Azâriqâh 37</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Azâz, district 40 n. 146</td>
<td>157</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A zd, tribe xiv, 10, 12-14,</td>
<td>83</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>22-23, 26-27, 45, 81, 87 n. 311</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-Bakhtari, Abû 'Abdallâh al-Murâ'i</td>
<td>156</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bakr b. Wâ'il, tribe 10, 12, 14, 27,</td>
<td>113-14, 128-29</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bal'â b. Mujâhid al-'Anzi</td>
<td>153</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Balanjar 182-83, 192</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bâlis 142 n. 489</td>
<td>612</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Balkh 12, 20 n. 86, 49 n. 184,</td>
<td>179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>54, 179 n. 612</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Balkh River 15, 158, 193</td>
<td>54</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Balqâ' 193-94</td>
<td>66</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû 'Abd al-Malik, tribe 70,</td>
<td>72</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû 'Abs, tribe 63-64</td>
<td>90</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû 'Adi, tribe. See 'Adi of</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>al-Ribâb, tribe</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû 'Adi b. Ka'b, tribe 75</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû 'Amir b. 'A'ârâb'ah, tribe 17, 25</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû 'Amr b. Shaybân b. Dhuhaul, tribe 87</td>
<td>115</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû 'Aqil b. Mas'ûd, tribe 141</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû Asad, tribe, 8, 16, 87 n. 311, 162</td>
<td>86</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû al-A'war b. Qushayr, tribe 86</td>
<td>90</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû Dâbbâh, tribe 18-19, 83</td>
<td>90</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû Dârim, tribe 150</td>
<td>90</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû Dîthâr, tribe 157</td>
<td>113</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû Fazârah, tribe 113, 185</td>
<td>156</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû Fihr, tribe 106-7</td>
<td>157</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû Fuqaym, tribe 156</td>
<td>157</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû Ghudânâh, tribe 137 n. 475</td>
<td>88</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû Hilâl, tribe 169</td>
<td>158</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû Layth, tribe 8</td>
<td>113</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû Mâlik b. Misma', tribe</td>
<td>113</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû Mâlik b. Rabî'ah, tribe 118</td>
<td>78</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû Mâzin b. Mâlik b. 'Amr</td>
<td>140, 144</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tamim, tribe 140, 144</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banû Muhallab. See Muhallabids</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

B

Bâbi al-Abwâb 167 n. 579, 182 n. 626

Badakhshan 49 n. 184

Badr 25

Baghdad 77 n. 272

Bâhilah, tribe 7, 19, 21, 25, 119, 151, 188

al-Bâhilî. See Qutaybah b. Muslim b. 'Amr al-Bâhilî al-Bâhilî, fortress of 151-53, 157-58

Bahrâm Sis 193

al-Bahrâyn 11 n. 43, 137, 142

Bajilah, tribe 114
Index

Banū Murrah, tribe 138
Banū al-Najjār, tribe 106
Banū Qays b. Tha'labah, tribe 36, 113, 137 n. 476
Banū Sadūs, tribe 59
Banū Ṣakhir b. Nahshāl, tribe 16
Banū Sharīk b. Mālik, tribe 19
Banū Shaybān, tribe 13, 78, 110
Banū 'Ubād, tribe 137 n. 476
Banū al-'Ujayf, tribe 153
Banū Usayyid b. 'Amr b. Tamīm, tribe
Banū 'Urwah, tribe 152, 177
Banū Will, tribe 15, 17, 19
Banū Yarbu', tribe 157
Band Yashkur 77–78, III, 115
Banū 751im, tribe 160
Bardhun b. Kushanišah 179
Barite Atranj 18 n. 78. See Sulaymān al-Zanjirj al-Khumub
Barkath 161, 171 n. 590
Bashir b. Ḥassān al-Nahdi 38
Bashshār b. Muslim 20 al-Baṣrah, Baṣran(s) xv, 9 n. 27, 10, 12 n. 55, 14, 29, 31 n. 130, 34–35, 43, 45, 49, 53, 60, 75, 79, 97, 111–14, 115 n. 395, 118, 121, 123–26, 128, 133–34, 137, 142–43, 145 n. 499, 148–49, 165, 168, 186, 187 n. 641, 191
Bassām, family 174
Battle of the Pass 157
Bayār 177
Bayārkath 169, 171
al-Bayāsān 48, 52–53
Baziqiyah 139 n. 481
Bilādhā [or Bilādāh, Abū Anūjūr, King of Farghānāh 170. See also al-Ṭār Bint al-Hārith b. 'Amr b. Harajah 186
Bint al-Husayn. See Fātimah bt. al-Husayn
Bishr b. 'Isā * 6, 48
Bishr b. Ṣafwān al-Kalbi 165 n. 575
Bistām. See Shaddab
al-Buḥayrah 47–51
Bukhārā 8 n. 24, 13 n. 57, 49, 94 n. 334, 150, 178 n. 610
Bunjīkath 171
Būrjān 42
Busht 173 n. 597
Busrah bt. Ḥassān al-'Adawi 187
Buzmājān 161 n. 557, 171, 179
Byzantium, Byzantines 28, 30, 42, 60, 74, 164, 167, 192
Caspian Sea 14 n. 64, 42 n. 158, 48
Caucasus 167 n. 579, 182 n. 626
Central Asia 9 n. 30
China 152 n. 532, 176. See also al-Ṣīn Constantinople xiii, xvi, 30, 39–41, 70
Dābīq 40, 61–62, 65, 69, 72, 91 al-Dbūsiyih 94 n. 334, 172
Dahlaq 80–81, 89
Damascus xv, 26 n. 115, 27, 73 n. 256, 74, 79 n. 281, 90 n. 322, 92, 109 n. 378, 120, 163, 181 n. 620, 193
Dār al-Rizq [the Abode of Sustenance] 145
Dāris 115
Dawsar, tribe 122
Dāwūd b. Khālid b. Dīnār * 69–70
Dāwūd b. Sulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik 30, 60, 70
Dāwūd b. Sulaymān al-ju'fi * 96 al-Daylam 14, 45, 53, 54 n. 200, 123
Dayr Simān 90–92, 101
Dhū al-Qarnayn 28
Dhū al-Qaṭīfah. See Muḥammad b. 'Amr b. al-Walid b. 'Uqbah
Index

Dhū al-Shāmah. See Muhammad b. ’Amr b. al-Walid b. ’Uqbah

Dhū al-Wada’at. See Yazid b. Thwarān

Dihistan 43, 44 n. 164, 45, 47-48, 52

Dirār b. Muslim 20, 25

Dirār b. Sinān al-Dabbi 15

Dirghāmah. See Wākī b. Abī Sūd al-Tamimi

Diwā-shanj. See al-Diwāshini al-Diwishini 171, 177-78, 183

Diyār Mūdar 77 n. 271

Diyār Rabi‘ah 125 n. 436

Dūr 163 n. 565

Dūrān 163 n. 565

Dūrayn

Egypt 28, 39 n. 145, 165

Euphrates River 60 n. 230, 77 n. 271, 79 n. 282, 121, 128, 134, 185

F

al-Faqd b. Bassām 173

Fam al-Nil 128

al-Farazdaq, poet 20, 25-26, 63-64, 101 n. 358, 113, 118, 128-29, 163

Farghānāh xiv, 25, 169-70, 173-74

Fārīt 128

Fārs 47, 113, 121, 125, 143

Fāṭimah, wife of ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Azīz 101

Fāṭimah bt. al-Ḥusayn b. ‘Ali b. Abī Ṭālib 180-81

Fayḍ al-Bahr 9

al-Fayḍ b. ‘Imrān 151

Fayrūz b. Qūl 48-49, 53

Fazārah, tribe 163-64

al-Fudayl * 97

al-Fuqaymi 156

al-Furāt b. Mu‘āwiyyah 90

Gate of Samarqand 166

Ghālib b. al-Muḥaṣīr al-Ṭā‘ī 153

Ghālib al-Qattān * 37

al-Ghanawī, al-‘Alā‘ b. al-Minhāl * 135

Ghāni, tribe 15, 19

Ghassān, tribe 26, 148

Ghāṭafān, tribe 25, 153

Ghuddānāh, tribe 21

Ghuddānī. See Wākī b. Ḥassān b. Abī Sūd al-Tamimi

Gog 28 n. 121

Great Swamp 81 n. 292

Hā‘, tribe 11

Ḥabābah xiii, 194-96. See also al-‘Āliyah

Ḥabīb b. Abī Ḫubayd al-Fihri 30

Ḥabīb b. al-Muḥallab 112, 124-25, 135-36, 139

Ḥadath al-Zuqāq 90

Ḥadhfāh, horse 189

Ḥajar 137 n. 474

al-Hajārī, poet 161

Ḥāji b. Ṭāhirī 191

Ḥāji b. Dhubyān, poet 140

al-Ḥajājī b. Ṭā‘ī 153

al-Ḥajājī b. Jāriyah al-Khath’awī 44 al-Ḥajājī b. Yusuf xiii, xv, 4 n. 9, 6, 9 n. 30, 12 n. 54, 13 n. 57, 24, 29, 31, 37 n. 137, 62, 83, 90, 116, 131, 144 n. 493, 165, 187

Ḥakam, tribe 11

al-Ḥakam b. Aws 160

al-Ḥakam b. Sa‘d 82

Ḥamāh 75 n. 263

Ḥamdān, tribe 16, 129, 130

Ḥammāl b. Zahr al-Ju‘fī 120

Ḥamzah b. Ḥabīrīm * 16, 21
Index

Hanżalah b. 'Attāb b. Warqa" al-
Tamimi 130
al-Ḥarasbi. See Sā'īd b. 'Amr al-Ḥarasbi
Harim b. al-Qarār al-‘Abdī 142 al-Ḥāriṣ b. Imru l-Qays 11 n. 43. See also Ibn Kāwān, island
al-Ḥāriṣ b. Muṣarrīf al-Awdī 116
Ḥārīth b. Badr al-Ghūdānī, poet 137
Ḥarmalah b. 'Abd al-‘Azīz * 100
Ḥarmalah b. ‘Umar al-Lakhmī 38
Hārīn 109
Ḥārūniyyah 76–77, 118. See also Khārjījites
al-Ḥasan b. 'Abd al-Rāḥmān b.
Sharāḥīl, known as Rustam al-Ḥadramī 144
al-Ḥasan b. Abī al-‘Amarratāh 176 al-Ḥasan b. Abī al-Ḥasan al-Bāṣrī, Abū Sā'īd 75, 123–24, 133–34
al-Ḥasan b. Hammad 61 al-Ḥasan b. Rushayd al-Jūzjānī * 6, 16, 24, 32
Ḥassān b. Ja'dāh, poet 111
Ḥassān b. Ma’dān al-Tā’ī 153
Ḥātim b. al-Nu’mān 74 n. 262
Ḥātim b. Qabīsah b. al-Muhallab 49 al-Ḥawārī b. Ziyād b. ‘Amr al-‘Atākī 119–20, 138
Ḥawāzim, tribe 25
al-Ḥaytham b. al-Munakhkhal 19 al-Ḥaytham b. Wāqīd * 69, 91 al-Ḥayyāj b. 'Abd al-Rāḥmān al-Azdi 56
Ḥayyān, client of the Banū Shaybān 13
Ḥayyān, client of Maṣṭaḥalah b.
Hubayrah al-Shaybānī 160
Ḥayyān b. ‘Aṭṭār 87
Ḥayyān b. Iyās al-‘Adawi 17
Ḥayyān al-Nabāṭī, Abū al-Hayyāj 14–
Helpers (Ansārī) 106, 148, 182
Herat 152, 163, 179 n. 614, 184
Ḥišāb b. Ahwaz al-Tamīmī 144–45
Ḥišāb al-Ḥarīrī 156
Ḥišāb b. 'Ulāyim al-Ḥanzālī 172–73
Hims 79, 194
Hind bt. al-Muhallab 146–47
al-Ḥīrah 121, 141, 143, 145
Ḥishām b. 'Abd al-Malik, 71–73, 146,
182, 193–94
Ḥishām b. Muḥammad * 31, 43, 50,
55–56, 58, 61, 79, 89, 91–92, 105,
112, 114, 123–24, 127, 130, 135–
36, 193–94
Ḥishām b. Musāhid b. 'Abdallāh b.
Mukhrīmāh b 'Abd al-'Azīz b.
Abū Qays b. ‘Abd Wudd b. Naṣr b.
Mālik b. Hīṣl b. 'Āmir b. Luwayy al-Qurashi 112–13
Ḫiṣn 'Awf 28
Ḫiṣn al-Maʿālī 30, 60
Ḫudayn b. al-Mundhir, Abū Haṣīs and Abū Muḥammad, nom de guerre
= Abū Sāsān 12–14, 21, 23
Hudbah al-Yashkuri 109
Hudhayl, tribe 22 n. 94
al-Hudhayl b. Zufar b. al-Ḥārist
n. 480, 185 n. 633
Ḫulays al-Shaybānī 153
Ḫulwān 8, 143
Ḫumayd b. 'Abd al-Malik b. al-
Muhallab 113–14, 119–20
Huraym b. Abī Tahmāb b. Abī
Naḥshal b. Dārīm al-Mujāshi’ī 16, 53, 115, 116 n. 399, 128
al-Ḫūsayn b. 'Abd al-Rāḥmān 53 al-Ḫūṣayn b. Hammad al-Kalbi 141
Ḫūṣayn b. al-Ḥārist 82
Ḫūṣayn b. al-Ḫasan al-Kindī 191
Ḫūṣayn b. Muḥammad 20
Ibn 'Abd al-Ḫamīd * 100
Ibn Abī Dhibbān. See Maslamah b.
‘Abd al-Malik, Yazīd b. ‘Abd al-
Malik
Ibn Abī Ḥādir al-Tamīmī 141
Ibn Abī Muḥaykāh * 38
Ibn Abī Nu’aym 62
Index

Ibn Abi Sabrah. See Muhammad b. 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Abi Sabrah al-Ju'fī
Ibn Abi Umayyah 63
Ibn Abi al-Zinād * 76
Ibn 'Abid al-Hajarī 24
Ibn al-Ahtam. See 'Abdallāh b. al-Ahtam
Ibn 'Amr. See Muhammad b. 'Amr b. al-Walid
Ibn 'Atikah. See Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik
Ibn al-Dahmah. See Yazid b. al-Muhallab
Ibn Dukhān. See Bāhilah
Ibn Gharrā'. See Dirār b. Muslim
Ibn Ḥanzalah. See Idris b. Ḥanzalah al-'Ammī
Ibn Ḥātim b. al-Nu'mān al-Bāhili, 'Abd al-'Azīz 74. See also Ḥātim b. al-Nu'mān
Ibn Ḥayyān 18
Ibn Ḥayyān. See 'Uthmān b. Ḥayyān al-Murri
Ibn Ḥazm. See Abū Bakr b. Muhammad b. 'Amr b. Ḥazm al-Anṣārī
Ibn Hubayrah. See 'Umar b. Hubayrah
Ibn Humrus 180–81
Ibn Jariyah. See al-Hajjāj b. Jariyah al-Khath'ami
Ibn Junābūdī 51
Ibn Kāwān, island 11
Ibn Layth. See Wakī' b. Ḥassān b. Abī Sūd al-Tamīmī
Ibn Marwān. See Yazid b. 'Abd al-Malik b. Marwān
Ibn Muslim. See Qutaybah b. Muslim
Ibn Nas'ah. See Sa'id b. 'Amr al-Ḥarashi
Ibn Sa'd * 69, 91–92
Ibn Sa'd. See Sa'd b. Najd al-Azdi
Ibn Ṣafwān. See Shu'ayb b. Ṣafwān
Ibn Sul 143
Ibn 'Umar. See 'Abdallāh b. 'Umar
Ibn Zahir. See Shu'bah b. Zahir
Ibn Zahir. See Jahm b. Zahīr
Ibn Zālim 65
Ibrāhīm b. 'Abdallāh b. Abī Farwāh * 182
Ibrāhīm b. Nāfī' * 38
Ibrāhīm al-Ṣā'igh * 86
Ibrāhīm b. Salamah 87
Idris b. Ḥanzalah al-'Ammī 36, 47, 50, 82, 93
Ifrīqiyyah 164–65
'Ilbā' b. Ḥummar al-Yashkuri 177–78
'Ilbā' b. Ḥabīb al-'Abdī 150
'Imrān b. 'Āmir b. Misma' 114–14
'Imrān b. Ḥisā'il, Abū al-Najīm 87
India 37 n. 137, 64, 152 n. 532. See also Sind
'Iqāl b. Shabbāh b. 'Iqāl al-Mujāshi'i 157
'Isā b. 'A'īyān 88
'Isā Canal 128 n. 442, 129 n. 449
'Iṣām b. 'Abdallāh al-Bāhili 170
'Iṣām's Pass 170, 173
Isbaskath 171 n. 591. See also Sabaskath
Iṣfahān 47 n. 174
Ishāq b. 'Isā * 29, 38, 60, 62, 88, 91, 126, 191, 193
Ishtikhan 169, 171
Ismā'il 162
Ismā'il, client of the Banū 'Aqil b. Mas'ūd 141
Ismā'il b. Ibrāhīm b. Shammās 53
Iyās b. 'Amr 20
Iyās b. Bayḥas b. 'Amr 17, 19
Iyās b. Mu'āwiyyah b. Qurrah al-Muzanī 75
Index

J

Jabal b. 'Abd al-Rahmān, client of Bāhiyeh 188

Jabal b. Abū Rawwād 6

Jabal b. Farrūkh 6

Jabal b. Mukhrāmah al-Kindi 134

al-Ja'd b. Dirham, poet 129

Jalnaj 171, 175–76

Jamāl b. Zahr 43–44, 49, 82

Jarir b. 'Atiyyah, poet 5, 63, 65, 157

Jarir b. Himyān 176

Jarir b. Yazid al-Jahdami 32

al-Jarrāb b. 'Abdallāh al-Ḥakamī, Abū 'Uqbah 34, 75, 80–85, 87, 121, 145, 146, 182–83, 192

al-Jazirah 77, 79, 121, 125, 163

al-Jibāl 125, 129

Jīlān 53

Jordan 87 n. 312, 194 n. 660

Judhām, tribe 146

Ju'di b. Sa'd 82

al-Juḥaniyyah 37, 56

Jūkāhā 77

Jumay' b. Ḥādīr al-Qādī al-Nāji 94

Jumayl b. 'Imrān 183–84

Junābīd 98

Junādāh 19 n. 81

al-Junayd 157

Jūrjān xv, 42–43, 45–49, 51–55, 57–58, 60, 82

Jūrjāniyyah 52 n. 196

al-Jūzjān 20

K

Ka'b, tribe 148, 169

Ka'b b. Ḥāmid al-'Absi 71–72

Ka'bah 124

Kalb, tribe 138, 146

Karbalā' 128 n. 441

Kārza'n 169–71, 174–75, 177

Kathir b. Qutaybah b. Muslim 20

al-Kawthar b. Zufar b. al-Ḥārith 183

Kaysān 10 n. 37

Khalaf b. Tamīm 99

Khālid 189

Khālid b. 'Abd al-'Azīz 82, 93

Khālid b. 'Abdallāh al-Qasri 114, 119, 185–87

Khālid b. Ibrāhīm, Abū Dāwūd 87

Khālid b. Ja'far b. Kilāb 64

Khālid b. Ma'dān 40

Khālid al-Nabīwī 83

Khālid b. Subayh 52, 54

Khālid b. al-Walīd b. 'Uqbah b. Abī Mu'ayt 138

Khālid b. Yazīd b. al-Muhallab 52, 56, 120

Khālifah al-ʿAqī'a, poet 119

al-Khalīl b. Aws al-ʿAbshāmi 160

Khāniqin 77 n. 272

Khāqān of the Turks 145, 152–54, 156

Khārijah b. Muṣ'ab al-Ḍabbī 85

Khārijites 76, 109–10, 118. See also Ḥārūriyyah

Khath'am, tribe 114

Khindiī, tribe 22

Khudhaynah. See Sa'id Khudhaynah

Khujandah 169–71, 173–75, 177, 179

Khunāṣirah 75, 91, 98

Khuṣrum b. Abī Yahyā 23, 26

Khuṣrum b. 'Amr al-Murri 23, 36

Khusrāw I b. Kavād 59

Khusrāw II Parviz b. Hurmizd 59

Khattal 82–83

Khuza'ah, tribe 88

Khurāzī, tribe 88

Khurzār 179

Khūzistān 47 n. 174, 62 n. 237, 77 n. 272

Khurāzīm 43 n. 160, 48, 52 n. 196, 177

Khurāzīm Shāh 177

Kinānah, tribe 22 n. 94, 113–14
Index

Kindah, tribe 130, 144
Kirmân 47, 121, 143, 188
al-Kirmânî. See 'Âmir b. Hâfîs al-Kirmânî
Kishkîsh 177. See also Kishshin
Kishshîn 169, 177. See also Kishkîsh
Kisrâ b. Hurmuz. See Khusrav II Parviz b. Hurmizd
Kisrâ b. Qubâdh. See Khusrav I b. Kavâdh
Kiss xiv, 49, 178
Köl-chür. See Kürsüll
Kulayb b. Khalaf 'Ammi * 6, 8, 16, 24, 36, 46, 82, 93, 94
Kulayb b. 'Udhaynâh 184. See also 'Udhaynâh b. Kulayb
Kûm 177
Kûrsüll 153
Kushkah Darya River 178 n. 608
Kuthâyvir 'Azzah, poet 101 n. 358
Kuthâyvir b. al-Dabûsî 155
Kuwayfâh ("little al-Kûfah") 139 n. 481, 149

L

Lâhiz b. Qurayz al-Tamîmî 87
Larissa 167 n. 578. See also Awâsâ; Raslah
Leo III the Isaurian 40–41
Luqmân b. 'Âd 17

M

Madhdhî, tribe 11 n. 47, 26–27, 43, 130, 146 al-Mafâzâh (Great Desert of Khurâsân) 121 n. 422, 125 n. 434 al-Maghîthah 112 n. 390
Maghrîb 24
Magog 28 n. 121
Makhîd b. Yazîd b. al-Muhallab 34–36, 43, 49, 54–55, 80, 93
Malâyîh 30 n. 126, 60
Mâlik 109
Mâlik b. al-Haythâm al-Khuzâ'î 87
Mâlik b. Ibrâhîm b. al-Ashtar 143–44
Mâlik b. Misma' 114–15, 128–29, 141
Mâlik b. al-Mundhir, tribe 118
Mâlik b. al-Mundhir b. al-Jârûd 114
Ma'mar b. al-Muthânnâ. See Abû 'Ubaydah Ma'mar b. al-Muthânnâ
Mamzûi, client of the Banû Shaybân 78
Manşûr b. Abî Muzâhîm * 92
Manşûr b. Muzâhîm * 100 al-Mantûf 128–29
Ma'qîl Canal 79
Ma'qîl b. 'Urwa al-Qushayrî 152, 184–87
Ma'qîl b. Yasâr al-Mazânî 79 n. 284
Marthid 101–2
Marw 8, 12, 13 n. 57, 36, 48 n. 180, 54, 95, 151, 179
Marwân b. 'Abd al-Malik 42
Marwân b. al-Âkâm 78 n. 279
Marwân b. al-Muhammad, Abû Qabîsâh 34–35, 112, 124, 133–34, 145
Marwân b. Muhammad b. Marwân al-Jâ'dî 162
Marwân b. Shujâ' * 92
Marwânids 124, 132, 136, 143, 194
Mas'âdah b. Qays 42. See also 'Amr b. Qays
Maslamah b. Mu'hârib * 6, 22, 32
Maşqâlah 47
Maşqâlah b. Hubayrâh al-Shaybânî 160
Maşqâlah's Wâdi 47
Maymûn b. Mîhrân * 93
Maymûn b. Qays al-A'shâ, poet 137
Maysarah al-Âdâlî 17
Maysarah al-Nabbāl (or al-Rabībāl), Abu Riyāh 87, 164
Māzin, tribe 157
Mazūn. See ‘Umān
Mecca 28–29, 37 n. 138, 38, 42, 60, 75, 124 n. 432, 126, 165, 167, 179, 191
Medina 3, 4 n. 5, 26, 29, 63, 75, 99 n. 354, 105, 107, 126, 130, 165, 167, 179–82, 191, 194 n. 664
Mediterranean Sea 152 n. 532
Mībfan b. Jaz’ al-Kilibi 17–18. See also Muḥaqiqir b. Jaz’ al-’Ala’ī Mihrajan 96
Mihzam b. Jabir 190
al-Minḥal b. Abi Uraynah b. al-Muhallab 145 n. 496
Mirbad (caravan quarter) of al-Basrah 115
Misma 115, 128–29, 141
Miswar b. ‘Abbād al-Ḥabāṭi 115
Musul 112 n. 388, 125
Mu’ādh b. Sa’id 123
Mu’āsid b. Sa’id 123
Mu’āwiyyah, caliph 47
Mu’āwiyyah b. al-Ḥajjāj al-Ṭā’ī, Abū Sa’īd 153, 156, 158
Mu’āwiyyah b. Yazid b. al-Muhallab 49, 127, 129, 141–43, 145 n. 496
Mu’ayt, tribe 140
al-Mubārak b. Faḍālah 92
Muḍar, tribe 13, 22 n. 94, 26–27, 116
Mudrik b. Ḍabb al-Kalbi 143–44
Mudrik b. al-Muhallab 121–22
al-Mufaddal 82, 93
al-Mufaḍḍal b. Muḥammad al-Ḍabbī 16, 22, 24, 37 Mughallis b. ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Muslim 20 al-Mughirah b. ‘Adī b. al-Thaqafi 113–14 al-Mughirah b. Abī Qurrah 59 al-Mughirah b. Qabīsah b. al-Muhallab 145 n. 496 al-Mughirah b. Ziyād b. ‘Amr al-’Ataki 113
Mughūn 173
Muḥājir b. Yazīd al-Harashi 179 al-Muhallab b. Abū Sufrāh, Abū Sa’īd 7, 9, 37 n. 140, 112, 145 n. 496
Muhallabids 80, 116, 118, 120, 122, 142–44, 148, 163
Muḥammad, the Prophet 10 n. 35, 22, 27, 72, 76, 92, 106 n. 366, 123–24, 132, 155
Muḥammad b. ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Abī Sabrah al-Ju‘fī 43–45, 49–50
Muḥammad b. ‘Adī b. Arṭāt 141
Muḥammad b. ‘Azīz al-Kindī 178
Muḥammad al-Bāhili 86
Muḥammad b. Ḥumrān al-Sa’dī 36
Muḥammad b. Ishāq b. Muḥammad b. al-As’ath 130, 143
Muḥammad b. Jarīr b. ‘Abdallāh al-Bajalī 77, 108
Muḥammad b. Muslim 20
Muḥammad b. Qays al-Ghanawī al-Anbarī 156
Muḥammad b. Sulaymān b. ‘Abd al-Malik 70 n. 250
Muḥammad b. Ṭalḥah 96
Muḥammad b. ‘Umar 3, 39, 42, 69, 76, 91, 105, 126, 180, 182
Muḥammad b. ‘Uzayz al-Kindī 6
Muḥammad b. Wāsī al-Azdi 51–52
Muḥammad b. Yazīd 165
Muḥammad b. Yūsuf 90
Muḥaqiqir b. Jaz’ al-‘Ala’ī 17 n. 74. See also Miḥfan b. Jaz’ al-Kilibī al-Muḥawwal 129 n. 449
Muḥriz b. Ḥumrān al-Sa’dī 113
Index

Mujāhid b. Jabr 40
Mujāshi' 65
al-Mujashshir b. Muzāhim al-Sulami 166, 168, 179 Mukhallad. See Makhlad b. Yazid b. al-Muhallab al-Mukhtar 10 n. 37
al-Muntasij b. 'Abd al-Rahmān al-Azdi 150-51
Muqātil b. Ḥayyān * 8, 54-55, 94
Muqātil b. Shaybān, Ābu Shaybān 109
Murji‘ites xvi, 132, 140
Murrāh al-Nakha‘ī, poet 51
al-Murri. See 'Uthmān b. Ḥayyān al-Murri
Mūsā b. Ka‘b al-Tamimi 87
Mūsā b. Mishkān, client of the Bassām family 174
Mūsā b. al-Wajih al-Ḥimyari al-Kalā‘i 75, 79, 116
Mūs‘ab al-‘Abdi 8. See also Sa‘ṣa‘ah al-‘Abdi
Mūs‘ab b. Ḥayyān * 8, 94
al-Musayyab b. Bishr al-Riyāhi, Ābu Bishr 153-57, 177-78
Musaylimah 10
Muslim b. 'Ābd al-Malik al-Bāhili 119
Muslim b. 'Ammūn 20
Muslim b. Budayl al-‘Adawī 176
Muslim b. al-Mughirah * 185 al-Muthannā b. 'Abdallāh * 124
Muzaynah, tribe 114

Najdah b. al-Ḥakam al-Azdi 109
Najjīh Ābu ‘Abdallāh, client of Zuhayr* 140
Nasāf 49, 178, 179 n. 612
Naṣr b. Sayyār al-Laythī 160, 178
Nawqān 56 n. 208
Nawrūz 96
Naylān 170 n. 587, 173. See Bilādhā
Nineveh 125 n. 436
Nishāpūr 47 n. 175, 52 n. 195, 98 n. 346, 172 n. 595, 173 n. 597. See also Abrashahr
Nudhah 142 n. 489
113 al-Nukhaylah 131
al-Nu‘mān 83
al-Nu‘mān b. Ibrāhīm b. al-Ashtar al-Nakha‘ī 130, 143

O
Orontes River 79 n. 281
Oxus River xiii, 82 n. 297, 150 n. 522

P
Palestine xiv, 112 n. 388
Palmyra Desert 90 n. 325
Panj River 82 n. 297
Paytak Pass 8 n. 19
Persia 11 n. 43, 45 n. 165
Persian Gulf 11 n. 43, 47 n. 174

Q
Qabīshah b. al-Muhallab 145 n. 496 al-Qādisiyah 112 n. 390
al-Qa’il b. ‘Ayyāsh 138
Qaṭtabah b. Shabib al-Ṭā‘ī 87
Qaṭṭān, tribe 27
Qandibil 142, 144
al-Qa‘qā’ al-Azdi 150-51
al-Qa‘qā’ b. Khulayd al-‘Absī 23, 36 al-Qāsim b. 'Abd al-Rahmān b. 'Abdallah b. Mas‘ūd 165, 168 al-Qāsim b. Habib 82
al-Qāsim b. Muḥammad b. Abī Bakr, Abū Muḥammad 182 al-Qāsim b. Mujiṣhi’ al-Tamīmī 87 al-Qaṣr, gate 25
Qaṣr Ibn Hubayrah 128 n. 444
Qaṣr al-Rih ("The Castle of the Winds") 172
Qaṭif 137 n. 474
Qays, tribe xiv, 17 n. 73, 23, 35, 90–91, 109, 114–15, 118, 128, 158, 185–86
Qays 'Aylān, tribe 22, 114
Qazwin 20
Qinnasrin 61
Qiyy 154, 171
Qizil-Šu River 177 n. 606
Qubayd 185
Qubistān 143
Qūmis 47, 52
Quraysh, tribe 7, 33, 105, 114, 186
Qurrah b. Sharīk al-'Absi 28
Qūṣdār 142 n. 489
al-Qutāmi b. al-Ṯusayn, Abū Sharqi al-Walīd, poet 120–21
Qutaybah b. Muslim b. 'Amr al-Bāḥili, Abū Ḥafs xiv, xvi, 5–10, 12–27, 35–36, 47, 52, 55, 94, 151 n. 527, 161, 170
Qūṭqūṭānah 112–13

R
Rabī' b. Ziyād b. al-Rabī' b. Anas b. al-Rayyān 141
Rabī'ah, tribe 13, 26, 77, 114, 130, 135, 139, 155, 164
Rabīniyān xiv, 178
Rajā' b. Ḥaywah b. Khanzal al-Kindi, Abū al-Miqdām xiii, xvi, 70–73 al-Ramlah 3
al-Raqāqa 77
Ra's al-Mafāzah 121–22
Rāshid the Mu'adhdhin 116
Rasīlah 167
al-Rayyān 43, 47 n. 175, 60, 95 n. 335 al-Rayyān b. 'Abdallāh al-Yashkuri 110–11
Ru'bah b. al-'Ajā'īb 63
Rustam al-Ḫudrami. See al-Ḫasan b. 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Sharāḥil
Rutbil 145
Rūyān 47

S
Sabaskath 171. See also Isbaskath
Sabrah b. 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Mikhnaf al-Ẓidī 131
Sābur Dhū al-Aktāf. See Shāpur II b. Hurmizd
Sa’d 82
Sa’d the Blacksmith 22
Sa’d b. Najd al-Ẓidī 20 n. 89, 21
Ṣādíf, tribe 16
Ṣahl b. Marmūd 100
Sa’id b. ‘Abd al-‘Azīz. See Sa’id Khudhaynah
Sa’id b. ‘Abd al-Malik b. Marwān 112, 192
Sa’id b. ‘Amm al-Ḫarashī, Abū Yahyā xiii, 110, 129, 166–70, 172–79, 183–89
Sa’id b. al-‘Ās 46–47
Sa’id b. Aslam 187
Sa’id b. al-Musayyab 106
Sa’id b. al-Nahwī 83
Sajāh 10. See also Umm Sādir
Sa’ikin b. Qatādah 6
Salāmah b. ‘Abdallāh b. ‘Abd al-Asad al-Makhzūmī 105
Salāmah b. Nu’aym al-Khawlānī 81
The image contains a page from a document with text in Arabic. The content appears to be an index of names and places, likely from a historical or geographical context. Here is the extracted text in a plain text format:

Index

Sāliḥ b. 'Abd al-Rahmān, Abū al-Walid 4–5, 8, 29, 31–33
Sāliḥ b. Muslihm 18–20
Sāliḥ b. Ṭarif, Abū al-Ṣaydā' 83
Sālim b. 'Abdallāh b. 'Umar 182
Sālim al-ʿAlṭas * 92
Sālim b. Ziyād b. Abī Sufyān 116
Ṣalīḥ b. 'Abd al-Karim al-Ḥanafi 23
Ṣallāmah of al-Qass 194, 195 n. 672
Ṣamargand xiii, 8, 49, 94, 94 n. 520, 150–51, 152, 154 n. 538, 156, 160, 161 n. 555, 166, 170 n. 585, 171, 173 n. 598, 177, 178 n. 610, 192 n. 654 al-Ṣamayda' al-Kindi 118, 132, 136, 138
Ṣarāt al-Aqṣā Canal 129
Ṣa'sa'ah al-ʿAbdi 8. See also Muy'ab al-ʿAbdi
Sasanian Empire 22 n. 97
Ṣawād of Baghdād 77 n. 272
Ṣawād of al-Kufah 128 n. 440
Ṣawrah b. al-Ḥurr 150, 160–61, 178
Ṣayf b. Ḥāni' al-Hamdānī 131, 135
al-Sha'bi. See 'Amir al-Sha'bi
Ṣhābīl b. al-Ḥājjāj al-Ṭā'ī 156
al-Ṣhabīb b. al-Ḥārīth al-Tamīmī 148 Ṣhaddūd b. Khulayd al-Bāḥilī 158
al-Ṣḥāḥbār b. Wadhā' 109
Ṣḥāḥ b. Hawshab al-Āsh'arī, Abū Sa'īd 51
Ṣḥāḥ-i-Saḥz ("The Green City") 178 n. 608. See also Kiss
Ṣḥākiriyah corps 55
Ṣḥāpur II b. Ḥurmīzd 58–59
Ṣhārāhil b. 'Abd b. 'Abdāh 42
Ṣhārār, land of 87
Ṣhārik b. al-Ṣāmīt al-Bāhili 15
Ṣhāsh River 170
Ṣhawdhab the Khārijīte (= Bīstām) xvi, 77–78, 108–11
Ṣhawkar b. Ḥamīk 177
Ṣhibl b. Ṭahmān, Abū 'Ali al-Ḥarawi 88
Ṣhiḥāb b. Shari'ah al-Mujāshi'i * 97
Ṣhimr b. 'Abdallāh al-Yashkuri, poet 110
Ṣhu'ayb b. Ṣafwān 100
ṣhu'bah b. Zahir 16. See also Shu'bah b. Zuhayr Ṣhu'bah b. Zuhayr al-Nahshali 150–53, 159. See also Shu'bah b. Zahir Ṣhūmān 177
Ṣhunu'āh, tribe 122
Ṣiṣāštān 86
Ṣimūn Peter 90 n. 322
Ṣīṣ al-Ṣin 26. See also China
Ṣinān b. Mukammal al-Numayrī, poet 51
Ṣind 142 n. 489. See also India
Ṣlav, city of 42, 60
Ṣoghd. See al-Ṣughd
Ṣubqyrī, King of Khuzār 179
Ṣudāh 195–96
Ṣu'yān * 101
Ṣu'yān b. 'Abdallāh al-Kindi 29, 60
Ṣu'yān b. Ṣafwān al-Khath'āmī, poet 44 al-Ṣughd (also spelled al-Ṣughd), Soghdiann(s) xiv, 94, 150–52, 158–61, 160, 172–77, 179, 192
Ṣughd River 178 n. 610
Ṣuhayb b. Abī Suhayl * 70
Ṣuḥaym b. Ḥaš 63
Ṣukaynah bt. al-Ḥusayn b. 'All 149
Ṣul the Turk 45, 47–50, 52
Ṣulaymān * 65, 96–97
Ṣulaymān b. 'Abd al-Malik, Abū Ayyūb, xiii–xvi, 3–4, 5 n. 13, 6–8, 9 nn. 25 and 33, 12, 20 n. 89, 23, 28, 30–42, 45, 52, 58, 61–65, 69–74, 79, 93, 112 n. 388, 130, 195
Ṣulaymān b. Abī al-Sari, client of the Banū 'Uwāfād 94, 152, 177–78
Ṣulaymān al-Daylamī 45 n. 166
Ṣulaymān b. Ḥabīb al-Muḥāribī 63
Ṣulaymān b. Ḥarb * 92
Ṣulaymān b. Kathīr * 32, 48
Ṣulaymān b. Kathir al-Khuza'i 87
Ṣulaymān b. Mūsā * 39
Ṣulaymān al-Zanjirī al-Khumīb 18
Ṣulaymān b. Ziyād b. Abīhi 116 n. 403
Ṣūrā 128
Ṣūrā Canal 128 n. 444
Qaysi, Abū Nāfī' Dhū al-Wada'āt 9, 11
Yemen 11 n. 47. See also Yaman
Yūnis b. Ḥabib 196

Z

Zābulistān 145 n. 497
Zābūqah 145 n. 499
Zagros mountain range 8 n. 19
Zahr b. Qays 56
Zahrān, tribe 15
Zanbil. See Rutbil
Zarafshan River 154 n. 538, 173 n. 598, 177 n. 606

al-Zibriqān al-Sa'dī 136
Ziyād b. 'Abd al-Rahmān al-Azdi al-
Qushayrī 19, 141, 173
Ziyād al-Iṣbahānī 156
Ziyād b. al-Muhallab 5, 145 n. 496
Ziyād b. al-Rabī' * 37
Ziyād b. 'Ubayd 114
al-Zubayr b. Nushayr, client of Bāhilah
Zufar b. al-Ḥārith 185 n. 633
Zuhayr * 20
Zuhayr b. Hunayd * 32
Zuhayr b. Jadhimah al-'Absī 64
Zuhayr b. Salamah al-Azdi * 136 al-Zuhrī * 182
Zurārah b. 'Udus 158